ENGINEERS WIN CHAMPIONSHIP FROM E SQUAD

"Blondy" Williams Pitches Team to Victory for Penant of Shafter League

(Special Star-Bulletin Correspondence) FORT SHAFER, Oct. 2.—The second and final battle between the Engineers and E Company, 2nd Infantry took place Sunday on the Fort Shafter athletic grounds, and the championship of the post was cooped, chained and pedestaled for another year by the brainy section of the U. S. A. The crowds were there, the deepest interest was manifested, but neither crowds of infantry sympathizers nor the deepest wishes could win the victory. It was won by hefty stick-work, plus Williams pitching, plus McGavin's backstoppling, a clever center field Yatsko and a clean cut first baseman.

The pitching by "Blondy" Williams for the construction gang was as remarkable as on last Thursday, and even a little better, for he struck out 15 as against 13 last week and also had two clean assists. The clever work of McGavin was evident to all the fans, as he pocketed the 15 strike outs, and never needed the assistance of the first sacker which is a No. 1 catching. He scored a hit through shortstop which later developed into a good big run, and "Red" McGavin stole the only piffler base on the part of the Engineers. Cain, on the second sack, did some clever work in his department, robbing Kane of E Company of two skyscrapers that came into his domain and repeating the process with the balloon that Csernotta sent up in the fifth frame.

Second baseman Cain also knocked out two clean hits, one to left meadowland and one to center commons, and both these tallied. Yatsko in the central division of the war department, which means middle field, picked three narpolanes out of the sky as they came circling about him, and Noyes took all that was coming to him in a clean, gentlemanly fashion at first hotel. The only man who really feels blue on the Cho-choo team is the new man, Barber, and he was not stropped up to championship form.

The E Company aggregation, led by Simmons on the mound, repeated the same splendid game as of Thursday, but the fix that was on the army polo team wanted to see Fort Shafter, so he bought a ticket on the King street limited and had to walk over from the main post to the cantonment, and he said those E Company men have it too easy in that civilized post over there, so here's the fix for them. They got it! and it was the "E. R. T. & L. Co." not E Company that deserved it, too!

KAUAI TEAM WINS POLO MATCH IN LAST SCENE

visit to the polo field. "Yes, Kauai has about as much chance as an icicle in the crater," said a fan. Next week he will be looking for ice cream cones in Halemauau. That was the way it went. Hope Was All. At the opening of the eighth period the Army had four points, while Kauai could only boast of 1 1/2. It looked like a hopeless case. Harry Lauder would have bet 2 to 1 on the Army. It was that sure. Then the period was on, and there was but little interest in the finish. The crowd was waiting for the end. Then Charles Rice showed an exhibition of judgment that was one of the bright bits of play, and riding his man off and carrying the ball along, sent a goal through the posts.

After this the crowd watched every play, although the Army was still a big favorite. The ball came out again, and after a pass Malina took the ball to the opposite end of the field, and with Rice playing for a pass Malina sent the wooden ball through the posts for another goal, and the crowd watched every stroke. The Straw That Broke. Kauai needed one goal to win, and their hopes were dashed to the ground when Army made a strong attack on the goal, but a great save by Gould, which sent the ball back to boards, gave the Garden Island poloists life, and then Kauai played polo. They did not miss, and the passes were wonderfully executed, and after Rice, and Malina had broke back through the play, a pass to Gould was the little piece of hay which destroyed the hump on the ship of the desert, and Kauai marched through to victory; the crowd went wild, and a very conservative citizen said: "Well, I'll be blamed."

They will be talking about that Kauai finish for some time to come, and the man who is doing the revising on Noah Webster's little work of art may hereby take this notation: "Kauaied," strong verb, meaning to finish strong. It's a good word, and you can spring it on the polo enthusiasts and they will understand it perfectly. Naturally in a finish there should be some heroes, and if the word hero can be stretched to use in polo then the men who scored may be set down as such. They were Charles Rice, Jay Gould and John Malina. This trio played great polo throughout the match, and were continually in the play. Their work did not show to advantage in the early periods, and had they lost out, there would have been less glimmer and glamor, but they fought hard throughout. James Spalding was playing steady polo in a number of periods, but his play was such that it did not give him an opportunity to star.

Charles Rice played an excellent game throughout the match, and taking everything into consideration, if you leave out the score which counted for the victory, then his play was perhaps the best of the day. He used his head throughout, and his hard riding and careful tactics gave Kauai an opportunity to win from the fast Army four. Many Honolulu people at the first of the year thought that Gould was a great court tennis player, but they did not have much respect for his ability as a mallet man. They had never heard of Tyrus R. making a hit for a star half-back, and consequently believed that Gould was fair. Gould was fair, all right, but he wasn't fair to the Army. He led the attack in the last period, and with Rice used the Army defense and then in the closing minute of play capped the climax of a great day's work by scoring the goal which spelled victory. Jay Gould has won a place as one of the really great players in Hawaii. Malina Hits Hard. Malina did not show to advantage in the last game, measuring up to his usual standard, but on Saturday he was always in the play, and on several occasions rode his man off and carried the ball along at the same time. Malina is known as a hard-hitter, and against the Army demonstrated that he had not forgotten this part of the game. He worked well with Rice, and the passes were the best since Kauai began the season. James Spalding at No. 1 sacrificed chances for scores on a number of occasions by playing with the team. Although his work did not stick out as did that of the other three, he was always in the play.

To the victor belongs the spoils, and had Army scored the winning goal it might have been a much different story, but despite the fact that they lost the Schofield contingent outplayed the Kauai four. It was only in the last period that the visitors excelled, and here they excelled enough to win. Louie Beard played a great game for his team throughout the match, and it was his play, for the most part, which placed the Army team in a position where they practically had the game won. On two occasions in the fifth period he got away from the riders and sent goals through the posts. Williams, p. 4 0 0 0 2 0. Yatsko, cf. 4 0 1 3 0 0. Barber, rf. 4 0 1 0 0 1. Totals. 35 6 11 27 5 1. BOWLERS READY FOR SEASON AT Y. M. C. A. ALLEYS

Schedule Commercial League Announced; Sweets and Coin Holders First

The first round of the Y. M. C. A. Commercial Bowling League opens this week on Thursday and runs until November 17. With all seven teams lined up and a schedule drawn, interest is running high in the Commercial League. Capt. C. H. Atherton promises to have a strong team in the field to represent the Sugar Factors in the opening match Thursday, while Percy Notzage has collected a likely lot of bowlers to uphold the honor of the Financiers.

lattice work. He was always in the play, and missed on few occasions. Had the Army won he would have been the big hero of the occasion, and for consistent work his play was perhaps the best of the game. Haverkamp showed more dash than he did in the last match, and in the early periods had a hard battle throughout, but managed to force his way through to a goal. He and Gould had a merry little battle throughout the match, and Gould's great play robbed Haverkamp of much of the laurels. Herr always elings around the 300 mark using a baseball expression, and his play of Saturday was no exception. You can figure on a well rounded game from the Army captain at all times. He was always in the play, and handled the team well. Hoyle also played his position up to his usual standard, but was forced through the goal twice, when Kauai battered through the Army defense. Up until the eighth period it was an Army game, and the Schofield contingent easily carried off the honors in spectacular and consistent play. It wasn't the best polo by any means that has been exhibited here, as there were a number of misses, and the play lacked the finesse of some of the other contests, but from a spectator's standpoint it was a great one, and the fact that the Garden Island players "kauaied" made a difference.

trio made a number of good catches. This team, with one or two men added, would make an excellent showing. Only the Brave. One man in the stand wanted to know why the Braves were called by that name. His friend answered him by saying that they were brave to come on the field. That was in the second inning when the Chinese team was leading 5 to 0. When the Braves finished the game in the ninth they had won out by a score of 9 to 8. The boys in the red uniforms kaufted in excellent shape.

The Chinese team was leading by five runs in the second. They led 8 to 3 in the ninth, when the Braves went to bat for the last time. Lee, the first man up, walked, and Anahu hit a single through the inner works and Lee took second, Rosa sacrificed and Nelson, the man who had only one hit to give to his country, gave it then. It was a double, and Lee and Anahu scored. Then up came another admiral called Perry, after Cordero had gone out. Some one said "Don't Give up the Ship." Perry didn't. He made a Lake Erie pull in his belt and his only hit of the day sent the other member of the fleet home for a victory. Nelson Kau, the curve artist of the Chinese, pitched excellent ball for four innings, only one hit being secured off his delivery, but two errors gave the Braves four runs in the fifth, on only one hit. Thomas tripled and Mars doubled in the seventh, and that was all until the ninth.

The Chinese went into the lead in the second, on hits by Fun Luke, Pong and Low, and infield errors. After that they did not threaten as Nelson went into the box and stopped the big scoring. Chong got a triple in the sixth, and errors gave the Chinese a run in the seventh, but fast fielding in the later periods gave the Braves a chance for the game. THEY HIT SOUTHWEST. 25th Infantry.
