GAS VS.

Coal
Wood
Oil

In the last 3 years the price of
Stove Coal advanced 53 per cent
Stove Wood advanced 50 per cent
Fuel Oil advanced in proportion to coal and wood.
Gas decreased 3%

The retail cost of coal has increased from $15 to $23 a ton. Retail cost of stove wood has increased from $12 to $18 a cord.

In June, 1914, Gas was selling at a rate of $1.427 for 1000 cubic feet. In April, 1917, the Gas rate was $1.375 per 1000 cubic feet.

Even at the lower rates 3 years ago for coal, wood and oil, Gas was a serious competitor. At the new, higher rates for the other fuels, the economy of Gas is apparent.

There is no diminution in our service; we still take care of the consumers' gas stoves and other appliances without charge. Consumers of coal, wood or oil must repair or adjust the stoves themselves, or pay others to do it for them.

Consider the decreased cost of Gas per unit; its natural, higher efficiency; its saving rather than waste of heat; its cleanliness; its convenience.

Gas gives you more for your dollar than any of the other fuels. Why not try it?
