MAN AND HIS CLOTHES

BY DOROTHY DIX
The World's Highest Paid Woman Writer

"O, you women," exclaimed the man scornfully, "you always judge a man by his clothes. You turn up your nose at Brown because he wears a shabby coat, yet the man has a soul of gold and is worth a whole battalion of your tailor's dummies."

The woman laughed. "Well," she replied, "I can only judge a man by the outward and visible manifestations of his personality. I can't see Brown's soul, and I can't see his coat. Moreover, a man's soul may be the result of heredity for which he is not responsible, but this coat represents his own individuality and achievements. It shows his judgment, his taste, his knowledge of the world, his mental poise, even his energy and ability to do things, so it isn't such a bad signpost after all."

"This is a deceitful world in which things are seldom what they seem, and I'm not fatuous enough to believe that there are any infallible rules by which we can size up our fellow creatures at sight. Even the science of physiognomy is a broken reed on which to lean in judging people."

"The smallest, mildest looking, most lady-like man I ever met had murdered at various times seven different people. The shrewdest business man I know, and the one who can see farthest into a millstone, has a round, placid, fat face, and dull eyes that look as if he were half asleep all the time, and is the one individual in a crowd that you would pick out for a customer if you were selling gold bricks."

"As for women—good heavens—don't you know soft, baby-faced women, with innocent eyes that are as hard as rocks and as wicked as Jesse-belle herself? And don't you know big commanding looking women with Roman noses and square chins who always ask their husbands if they may go down town, and who can't decide on a hat without taking six people along to help them make up their minds? No, I put no faith in the conformation of anybody's features, but show me a man or a woman's dress and I'll like Currier with his boss. I can construct the whole animal from that fragment."

"Possibly clothes make the woman," agreed the man. "They are both mysteries that I can neither button nor unbutton, but how could you go about judging a man by his clothes?"

"Well," said the woman, "suppose I was a merchant who had advertised for an employe, a clerk, or a book-keeper, or a cashier, say. Suppose the first man who applied for the job was a good looking young fellow, but was untidy. He was unshaven and shod with a stubby beard on his cheeks, and his clothes were rumpled as if he had slept in them, and spotted, and dirty."

"I wouldn't hire him because his clothes would tell me that he was lazy, and that he would be in a snap ditchy, hit or miss way, the easiest way, whether it be the right way or not, and that he would drop his pen in the middle of a word if a clock happened to strike. His clothes would tell me that he looked energetic and didn't like to take trouble because if he wasn't just naturally shuffler, he would shave and brush his clothes and press them, and keep himself looking tidy. No man who thought more of ease than he did of his personal appearance would get a job with me."

"Suppose the next man who came along looked like a patchwork quilt, that he had on a red necktie and a pink shirt, and a brown coat, and a blue waistcoat and gray trousers, and his necktie was coming untied and his shoes half laced. I wouldn't hire him for any position requiring accuracy nor quick thinking. I should know him to be the sort of a man who never touches things and who never sees an opportunity until somebody else comes along and points it out to him. He'd never catch on to what a rival was doing—or else he would know that up to date men were matching their shirts and ties."

"And I'd know that he would make the kind of a book-keeper whose account never balanced, or a stenographer who would spell half the words wrong, or a shipping clerk who would bill goods to Mass. when they should go to Miss. because his clothes would show that he was inattentive to detail. Otherwise, he wouldn't have considered that just any sort of a mix-up of suits was good enough, and he would have taken the trouble to have tied his necktie properly and iced his shoes securely, and worn the coat and vest and trousers that belonged together."

"Suppose the next man was flashily dressed in plaids that you could hear coming a mile off, and a red waistcoat, and wore much cheap jewelry. Suppose his clothes showed that the money that should have gone in quality went in gaudiness and that his feet were clad in cheap patent leathers with no wear in them instead of good leather. Not for me. I would know that he lacked judgment, and was a tin horn sort, who would be more interested in prize fights than he was in the grocery trade, and that his thoughts would be occupied with figuring out the chances of some white horse instead of how to raise himself and become an employer's hope."

"Suppose the next man was immaculately dressed. Suppose I detected at a glance that his scarf never cost a cent under $2.50, that his clothes were cut by a very fashionable tailor, and his hat was the very latest expensive block. Suppose, in short, he looked like a millionaire, instead of a man applying for a $25 a week job. I wouldn't hire him because I'd be afraid of what he would do to the cash register. The clothes mania can be just as demoralizing as the drink mania, and I wouldn't trust a man too far whose vanity made him dress above his station."

"Suppose the next man who came in was shabby, but clean. Suppose his clothes showed hard wear, but they were brushed and pressed, and the very best made of them that could be. Suppose I saw that he trimmed his cuffs and inked the seams in his coat where it had worn white. I'd consider him because I'd know he'd be energetic and resourceful, and that he would do the best he could under hard stress of circumstances."

"Or I would hire the man who had dressed his part, as they say, on the stage, who was clean and neat, and spry and span, and had bought clothes suitable to his person and his station. Always if I were hiring men, I'd give the preference to the well dressed man, because any man bearing some accidental hard luck story in these days can be well dressed if he's got energy enough to get out and hustle. Ninety-nine times out of a hundred the down-at-the-heels man is the man who is afraid of work."

BEAUTY CHATS

By EDNA KENT FORBES

Clear Eyes

Learn to gaze directly at people when they address you, or when you are talking to them. So will your eyes seem more compelling. Well-marked brows and long lashes help greatly of course, as the frame helps out the picture. Learn to use your eyes prettily—don't squint, nor frown, keep them as wide open as possible. A child is clear-eyed, because of its round, frank, fearless look. Remember too, that the downward eye or the sidewise glance, are pretty variations of the expression.

Beautiful eyes are wide open, frank and clear in their expression.

Questions and Answers

Our grandmothers used to say that "Clear eyes came from a clear conscience"; but the modern version would be that clear eyes come from a clear stomach, for nowadays we recognize that morals and digestion are pretty well dependent on each other.

I have enjoyed your chats so much, and have followed a lot of advice. I am a good one. Now I want to ask you about my pet affliction—a small sore on my cheek, caused by a burn when I was a child. The place is the same color as the rest of the skin, but is rather in quite a bit. Do you think a dermatologist could help it—Lana.

The habitual dyspeptic is apt to have hazed eyes, the white part an unhealthy yellow. So—don't over-eat and don't eat too much pastry and too much meat. Keep the bowels well regulated, and the skin clean. Keep kidneys and bladder in proper working order—which means, keep the digestion good, and the eyes will be fine and clear.

Reply—I am sure you could, but advice you not to have it treated until you can arrange a trip to one of the larger cities where the best of the profession have their practice. I do not think it would take long to have the skin place filled in.

BOY FOR WHOM HAWAII WAS SCOURED TURNS UP SAFELY IN LOS ANGELES

Young John Kakae, the Kam school student who some time ago mysteriously disappeared in the forest of Kilauea, and for whom a search of the entire territory in the vicinity of where he was last seen was made; for the discovery of whom distracted parents were driven to the verge of nervous breakdown, and the police system worn to shreds, has been found, a letter from him having been received by a friend in Kona, says the Hawaii Post.

week in which to be free to go wherever he wished, and that instead of his going with other boys he would, without fail, go direct to the wharves, where he would hang around during his hours of freedom. "I do not doubt the authenticity of the communication," he added, "for it is my opinion that he could have easily gotten away from here without discovery."

In the communication to his Kona friend, Kakae states that he made his way from the Volcano to the beach and there got a steamer for Honolulu, from whence he sailed on a Matson liner for San Francisco; that he eventually landed in Los Angeles, where he is now engaged as a member in a Hawaiian orchestra playing in that city.

FOOD COMMISSION TO MEET NEXT TUESDAY

A meeting of the territorial food commission is scheduled for 9 o'clock next Tuesday morning to further discuss the rice situation. Attorney R. W. Brockton, who recently wrote to the commission referring to comments on fluctuations in the price of rice, has been asked to attend the meeting.

BENEFIT IS POSTPONED

WAILUKU, July 20.—The benefit performance for the American Red Cross Association, which was to have taken place tomorrow evening at the Paia Community House, has been postponed for one week on account of the unavoidable absence of Mrs. R. P. Harbold, who has a prominent part in the production. The affair will take place Saturday night, July 21.

BROKEN DOWN IN HEALTH

Woman Tells How $5 Worth of Pinkham's Compound Made Her Well.

Lima, Ohio.—"I was all broken down in health from a displacement. One of my lady friends came to see me and she advised me to commence taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Sensitive Wash. I began taking your remedies and took $5.00 worth and in two months was a well woman after three doctors said I never would stand up straight again. I was a mid-wife for seven years and I recommended the Vegetable Compound to every woman to take before birth and afterwards, and they all got along so nicely that it surely is a godsend to suffering women. If women wish to write to me I will be delighted to answer them."

—Mrs. James Moyer, 342 E. North St., Lima, Ohio.

Women who suffer from displacement, weakness, irregularities, nervousness, headache, or bearing-down pains, need the tonic properties of the roots and herbs contained in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

AID FOR PA OLA DAY CAMP ASKED

To aid the Pa Ola day camp which is located on Banyan street, Palama, near Kaunakapili, J. R. Galt of the Men's League of the Central Union church, has sent out the following circular:

"The Men's League of Central Union church has been the mainstay in the financial support of the day camp for the past seven years."

"This camp is located on Banyan street, Palama, near Kaunakapili church, and in charge of a physician and trained nurses."

"From a curative standpoint it has been of great value to the community, and its value as an educational factor, in preventing the spread of tuberculosis, cannot be overestimated."

"Its management is under control of the Palama settlement."

"Through the board of health, and board of education, a school is conducted at the camp for school children as are excluded from the public schools, on account of tuberculosis."

"These children, in addition to the usual school training, receive medical nursing care, also lunches, and are taught to care for themselves, so they will not become a menace to others."

"All of the patients at the day camp are not only cared for but instructed how to prevent the spread of tuberculosis, and to impart their knowledge to their families and friends, who in turn instruct others."

"Such knowledge, if rightly used and acted upon, by those who have tuberculosis, would be a powerful factor in almost immediately checking the further spread of this terrible disease."

"The Men's League has pledged $2500 to the Day camp for the year 1917."

Uncle Sam's Thrift Thought For Today

USE EVERY DROP OF MILK
Don't throw away left-over skim milk, says the United States department of agriculture. It is a nutritious food and every drop of it should be used. One way to utilize it is to make milk-vegetable soups.

ALLEGED CHINESE SMUGGLER JAILED

Of the three Chinese firemen from the Inter-Island steamer Mauna Kea who were charged with opium smuggling, only one was arrested Saturday. Ah Ching was arrested by inspectors shortly after the Mauna Kea docked. Another fireman of the three suspects got away before the customs inspectors could nab him on the boat. The third man, having to search the steamer last Wednesday, failed to show up that day and was apprehended, according to C. Huber.

Last Wednesday the inspectors found opium in the sleeping quarters of the three Chinese, just before the Mauna Kea sailed for Hilo.

Tenders for electrical equipment at the administration building, new territorial penitentiary, will be opened on July 29 at the department of public works.

GIVEN $100 FINE FOR DESERTING MAIL SACK WHICH CARRIED $6000

A fine of $100 and costs was the penalty imposed by Federal Judge Vaughan at Hilo on John C. Pimental, a mail carrier, who was convicted of abandoning a mail sack containing $6,000.

What's the Final Outcome?

Anyone interested in the final outcome of the war should hear E. W. Fox, who is giving a series of three Sunday evening addresses in Kaimuki. 1. What say the Scriptures is the final destiny of man? 2. Proof that we are living in the most important hour of the ages! 3. Some surprises and facts. Meetings will open 7:30 p. m. at 325 Twelfth avenue.
