CONDEMNED MEN FRET AT DELAY IN EXECUTION

Father Valentin, their confessor and counselor, arrived to minister the last rites and consolation of the Catholic church. His presence acted soothingly on them; they clung to him like children; and as he passed from the cell of one doomed man to another the eyes of Gabriel, Florencio and Garcio—the last at this time was unaware that he had been relieved—followed him, anxiously, eagerly and appealingly.

Having made their peace with their God and with the Sacred Host received agitation and uncertainty slipped from their minds and they were ready to meet their Creator; not only ready, but anxious and eager. For he it was known that once the Filipino realizes he is caught in a trap from which there is no escape he becomes resigned to his fate. Death then has no terrors for him.

Thus it was with Gabriel and Florencio. Having confessed and communed they fretted over the interval that must ensue before the hour set for their execution arrived. But Father Valentin petted and comforted them and talked to them as a father might to his child, soothing their wearied souls and calming their troubled minds.

His spirit of Christian docility suddenly became contagious; each of the condemned trio gave themselves up to a benign contemplation of their last hour on earth; each extended to the other words of encouragement, interpreted by Father Valentin, one to the other.

Fret At Delay
As the minutes dragged by, it seemed an eternity; the trio could not fathom the reason for the delay; unaware of the fact that Garcia had confessed another crime; unaware of the fact that the machinery of the law was at work to grant a reprieve until his story could be investigated, they fretted because they could not have it over with.

But at last the beginning of the end came. At 9:35 Sheriff Jarrett descended to the death row to read the death warrant. Florencio came forth first from his cell. In the narrow corridor between the cells, with only a slight shaft of light trickling through a grated window, Florencio with arms folded across his breast, stood erect and with flickering eyes listened to the words "to be hanged until dead," as they fell ominously from the lips of the sheriff. Steadfastly he retained his composure; only the regular flicker of the eyelashes betrayed animation; not a muscle quivered; his lips retained their compression; only a gasp of relief marked the end of suspense as he was led back to his cell while Gabriel was brought forth for a repetition of this painful duty. The tears shed by Florencio were unnoticed by Gabriel. With the same stolidity, with the same characterization of indifference, he stood with folded arms during the monotonous humdrum of the reading of the warrant. Not a sign of emotion did he betray.

With this duty over, prison guards strapped the men tight. The funeral march to the gallows was begun; arriving in the sunlight both men glanced upward and out before them as if to welcome the glorious brilliancy; their bosoms swelled as they inhaled the free air and upon their faces the close observer might have seen the spasmodic contraction of the features that indicated what a struggle was going on within—the overwhelming thought of tearing themselves from the world of brightness and sunshine; the thought that in another moment or two, all would be dark and listless; that as they stepped upon the gallows, they would drop into the broad valley from which there is no return—the thought of doom was stamped on their faces.

Not a moment was wasted. With alacrity the prison officials entrusted with the work of execution, placed the doomed men over the trap, adjusted the black cap and the noose. And then, without warning the trap was sprung and the two plunged to death.

Only the sighing of the gentle breezes broke the deathless stillness that reigned in the courtyard. For 18 minutes the bodies swung to and fro with now and then a spasmodic muscular contraction to indicate the approaching state of rigor mortis. The trap was sprung at 9:52; at 10:08 1/2 Florencio was pronounced dead; a minute later Gabriel's heart action had also ceased.

KAIMUKI KIDDIES DANCE TOMORROW

The youngsters of Kaimuki will have a Halloween dance tomorrow afternoon from 2 to 4:30 at Lihokalani school house, Mrs. J. W. Thompson, of the Mothers' club, asked the Star-Bulletin today to announce. "We've had many affairs for the older children but this is for the younger ones, and we hope they will all come in costume appropriate for Halloween," she announces.

LA FOLLETTE'S PHOTO TAKEN FROM WALLS IN U. OF W. CLASS ROOM

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 11.—A picture of Senator La Follette, that for two years hung in a class room at the University of Washington has been replaced by a picture of Abraham Lincoln. That Senator La Follette has forfeited the respect not only of his colleagues in the Republican party but of all patriotic citizens and should be expelled was the substance of a resolution, adopted by the Young Men's Republican club.

Stamps as Pennies Urged In View of Shortage of Coin

"Sure They'll Buy Cigarettes," Says Cigar Clerk in Response to Query

POSTAGE stamps for pennies! "Why not?" asked a Honolulu banker this morning. "If we cannot get enough pennies from the mainland to fill local needs, why not use postage stamps?"

Inquiry was made at a local cigar store as to whether stamps would be accepted. A clerk was asked if a customer might purchase a 13 cent package of cigarettes and pay for it with a dime and three one-cent stamps or a two-cent and a one-cent stamp. "Sure!" declared the clerk. "We'll take stamps."

A report reached the Star-Bulletin today that local banks are having difficulty in obtaining pennies through their San Francisco correspondents. One bank is said to have ordered $500 worth, being notified later that it could have only $100 worth. Another bank is said to have asked for a large amount of pennies and was told that it might have $50 worth, but probably not that many.

Korean Arrested, Pushcart Loaded High With Loot

Pushing a stolen cart down the street, the cart piled high with lanai furniture, a Korean, C. H. Hur, aged about 30 years, was arrested at 3:30 this morning by detectives from the central bureau. Hur is believed to be the person who has been terrorizing residents of the Makiki and Punahou districts for the past two weeks. Large quantities of porch furniture have been stolen, and evidently spirited away by means of a wagon or pushcart. When questioned by Captain of Detectives McDuffie this morning, Hur confessed that he had stolen the furniture last night and this morning, and admitted that he had stolen the pushcart, but denied that he had been operating before.

At 3:30 this morning Detectives Anderson and Apana, who have been watching the Punahou and Makiki districts, came upon the Korean as he was hurrying silently down Anapuni street, toward Wilder avenue. Piles of furniture were piled upon the pushcart. The detectives placed him under arrest and took him immediately to headquarters. One chair had been stolen from the lanai of the Pleasanton hotel, while the other articles had been taken from private residences on Anapuni street.

Despite the belief by the detectives that Hur has been operating alone, a strict watch will be kept for other culprits. Much credit is given the detective bureau for quick work in rounding up the thief and securing the stolen furniture.

HAWAIIAN CRAZE IS NOT DYING OUT IN MAINLAND THEATERS

Around New York they say the "Hawaiian craze" is dying out, but the latest reviews of theatrical offerings fail to prove it. Billie Burke, that dainty and nimble young stage personage, is starring in "The Rescuing Angel," by Clare Kummer, and the following review, an excerpt from a review in the New York Times, shows that Hawaii still has "a lure."

"Angela is daughter of an amiable aristocrat whose fortune has dwindled without his noticing it. Coming home from a trip to Honolulu, she finds the mortgage, so to speak, on the veranda, and announces that she is to be a rescuing Angela. Two very multi-millionaires have fallen in love with her, under the influence of a Honolulu moon shining over the Pacific ocean, and have followed her home. Neither has spoken, but she has only to choose. "It happens that when she departed she was engaged to the boy next door, and she appears to have no special preference between the two Honolulu moonlighters; but no matter! The mortgage shall be removed from the metaphorical veranda—just how, she will know when the time comes!" What happens to Angela after this doesn't much matter. The main thing is that Hawaii is once more featured on the stage as the land of moonlight and fringed palms.

UNCLE SAM MUST HAVE THOUSANDS OF TYPEWRITERS

Uncle Sam wants thousands of stenographers and typewriters, and he has written to Honolulu for them—at least, the head of the federal civil service commission has written in Uncle Sam's name.

Secretary Brown of the Chamber of Commerce has the circular, and as it is highly important war work for which persons are wanted, here is the information. Further details may be had of Secretary Brown:

The United States government is in urgent need of thousands of typewriter operators and stenographers and typewriters. All who pass examinations for the departments and offices at Washington, D. C., are assured of certification for appointment. It is the manifest duty of citizens with this special knowledge to use it at this time where it will be of most value to the government. Women especially are urged to undertake this office work. Those who have not the required training are encouraged to undergo instruction at once.

Examinations for the department service, for both men and women, are held every Tuesday in 450 of the principal cities of the United States, and applications may be filed with the commission at Washington, D. C., at any time.

The entrance salary ranges from $1000 to $1200 a year. Advancement of capable employees to higher salaries is reasonably rapid.

Applicants must have reached their eighteenth birthday on the date of the examination.

For full information in regard to the scope and character of the examination and for application blanks address the U. S. Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C., or the secretary of the U. S. Civil Board of Examiners at Boston, Mass.; New York, N. Y.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Atlanta, Ga.; Cincinnati, Ohio; Chicago, Ill.; St. Paul, Minn.; St. Louis, Mo.; New Orleans, La.; Seattle, Wash.; San Francisco, Cal.; Honolulu, Hawaii; or San Juan, Porto Rico.

LATEST SHOW BY MONTE CARTER IS BEST YET GIVEN

What is by far the best performance given by Monte Carter and his company since their return to Honolulu is "A Night on a Roof Garden," which opened last night at the Bijou theater. Clever dancing by the chorus, aided by an excellent musical program, and plenty of patter and fun on the side, all go toward making the comedy one of the most enjoyable ever given in Honolulu.

The Monte Carter trio, which has won its way into the hearts of local music lovers, was encored 10 times last night for its song "How's Every Little Thing in Dixie?" and of course Izzy, a waiter this time, by the way—interrupted at just the right time, and everybody roared.

Monte Carter as "Izzy" and George Wells as "Mutt" keep the fun going from the rise of the curtain until the last musical number. Some especially good dancing numbers are given by the chicks and Betty Buttrick sings two solos in her usual pleasing style.

There is no plot to "A Night on a Roof Garden" but there are plenty of other things to make up for it. The audience, however, undoubtedly would enjoy the trio more if the orchestra would not play so loud when the members are singing.

SENIOR BASKETBALL GAMES AT Y. TONIGHT

The last of the two games of Senior league basketball scheduled for this week at the Y. M. C. A. comes to night in the "Y" games hall between the Naval hospital and the Reds. The Naval hospital cleaned up on the Goodyears by the score of 29 to 19 in the second game of the season, while in the opening card the Reds romped on the All-Intermediates 40 to 12. Tonight's game, which starts at 7:30 should be a tight run.

Last Tuesday night the Fort Kamehameha five annexed the Greys' scalp by the final tally of 33 to 16. In the last half the score was even, nine all. The Greys put up a scrappy contest, but the Kamehameha outfit had the edge and took advantage of their superior teamwork.
