Married under Ferns and Roses.
 On Saturday, Aug. 10th, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, the wedding of Miss Nettie dos Reis and Mr. B. Harry took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. dos Reis, at Nahiku.

The ceremony took place under a bower of ferns and white roses, very artistically arranged.

The parlor was beautifully decorated and the guests were anxiously awaiting the appearance of the bride to complete the beauty of the scene.

The bride was dressed in a beautiful dress of white swiss, trimmed with white silk ribbon, a wreath of white roses and a flowing bridal veil. She looked charming as she tripped to the corner of the parlor in which stood the groom awaiting her under the green bower. The effect of her charms was visible on his face for he looked the happiest man on earth. He was dressed in a handsome black suit of the latest cut.

The bridesmaid, Miss Fliza dos Reis was dressed in a beautiful pink dress and she looked very pretty standing by her sister clad in her bridal robes.

Mr. E. S. Capellas officiated as best man.

Rev. Father James after a short address in which he explained the duties of wedded life, united the couple in the holy ties of matrimony.

After the ceremony the usual congratulations were extended, and then light refreshments were served.

At about four p. m. the happy couple departed amidst a shower of flowers to meet the steamer at Hana, which conveyed them to their new home in Wailuku.

It was a quiet wedding there being only the family and a few intimate friends present.

Mr. S. B. Harry is a progressive young carpenter, and at present occupies the position of head carpenter on Wailuku plantation.

His young bride was formerly a school mistress at Nahiku, where her endeavors to raise the standard of our schools have been greatly appreciated by the residents of the community.

A long prosperous life and a happy old age are the wishes of their many friends.

Personal Mention.

If it be true, as rumored, that the Inter-Island and the Wilder S. S. Companies are to consolidate, the outlook is certainly gloomy for Maui shippers. The NEWS has never attacked these companies, possibly hoping at some time in the future to pick up some crumbs in the way of advertising, and outside of casually suggesting that both companies are piratical in their freight charges, and that it would be in keeping with their freight charges to fly the black flag with a skull and cross-bones, the NEWS has dealt very gently with their shortcomings, but one more turn of the screw will call for remarks from this paper, and a happy ending of the affair will be that Alexander & Baldwin or some other enterprising shipping firm will put on a line of Inter-Island steamers which will give satisfaction to the shipping public

Honolulu is recovering slowly but surely from its real estate boom, and prices for real estate as well as rental values are gradually adjusting themselves at normal figures. The same condition existed at Wailuku three years ago. There were then no houses in Wailuku to rent, and those owning property would not build, and because of the demand for residences, real estate took on a fictitious value in Wailuku which would have made ordinary city property ashamed of itself. A large number of residences have since been erected, thus relieving the strain and easing up the situation, but as a matter of fact more residence houses are still needed for the constantly increasing population.

Russia is making a wonderful bit of history today in the work of internal improvements which are being quietly pushed in the direction of water ways and railroads which will furnish outlets for trade and military purposes in the future. It is not an extravagant assertion to say that no single country in Europe is today the peer of Russia in military strength. Any single nation which would attempt to measure swords with her would simply be crushed. It is only a combination of powers which Russia has to fear, and the crucial moment will arrive when Russia feels strong enough to face the combination.

It is startling to find how many Hawaiian boys and girls there are, from fourteen to sixteen years old, who have all their lives attended English schools, and yet who have not the command of English of a nine year old American boy or girl. Are the teachers to blame for this? Not entirely, perhaps, but at the same time it does seem strange that with the undoubtedly able corps of teachers on Maui, better results are not achieved. The NEWS would gladly welcome communications from teachers on this very important topic. Perhaps a little newspaper discussion would prove fruitful.

Notwithstanding the fact that our speckled hen died last Tuesday afternoon from no assignable cause, after performing her family duties in the morning by laying a fine, large egg, the NEWS still insists that there is a bushel of money to be made on Maui in the poultry business, when taken hold of by those who are expert in hen culture. With an incubator hatching out five hundred chickens per month, which sell readily at from $7.50 to $1.00 each, when they reach frying size, how can there help being money in chicken culture?

The Honolulu dailies are lashing the waters of newspaperdom into a foam over the old chestnut of which has the larger circulation. The NEWS has so far refrained from taking any part in the discussion, for the reason that no newspaper published on Maui comes anywhere near the NEWS in the matter of bona fide paid up subscribers, but if the Honolulu fight rages much longer, the business editor of this paper cannot be restrained from giving the public a few figures as to what our total subscription list foots up.

There has perhaps been no trouble between labor and capital in the United States so serious as that now pending between the steel men and their employees. Labor is well organized and led by able men among the wage earners in the States, and social conditions among the working classes will be largely affected by the final result of the strike. The men with the money will win in the end, however.

Now is good time to hold on to dividend paying sugar stock, no matter to what price sugar stocks drop, under the stringency of the money market. As soon as the present "nearness" in financial affairs has passed, dividend paying sugar stock will advance to a normal price again, although it may not touch the fancy prices which ruled during the boom in sugar stocks.

There are still opportunities on the Islands, on Maui and in Wailuku, to start paying business, and money is not needed so much as enterprise. The live man who comes to the Islands without money, sees a chance to work up business and takes off his coat and goes at it is going to succeed, and will find no trouble to get all the money he needs to start him.

The agricultural meeting to be held in Honolulu is a step in the right direction. Every encouragement and inducement should be held out to the small land holders, especially the Hawaiians, to plant more fruit and vegetables about their door yards.

The Wailuku Bank.
 Owing to the temporary stringency in the money market in Honolulu, it has been found necessary to postpone for a few months the inauguration of the Bank of Maui. A large part of the capital for the new bank will be drawn from Honolulu and it was deemed wiser to wait till returns from the present sugar crop have come in, before putting the necessary amount of money required in a bank here, where it would remain out of circulation for some months.

Attorney George Hons received a letter this week from Mr. Chas. D. Lufkin, the promoter of the bank, stating that business may call him to the coast at once, where he may have to remain for a few months, but if so, immediately on his return, he will proceed in the matter of organizing and establishing the bank. This delay will really be better for the bank, as there are many Maui people who would be glad to subscribe to the capital stock of the bank, but they need a little time to get their financial affairs in shape to do so. The chances are that by the time Mr. Lufkin is ready to proceed, the bulk of stock will be taken by Maui capital.
