TARIFF HUMBUG.

FAULT has been found in certain quaters with the Senate for having decided to amend the Underwood bill so as to enable the President, at his discretion, to impose retaliatory duties upon goods sent to this country from countries which discriminate against American products. The argument advanced is that a retaliatory Tariff arrangement is repugnant to the plank in the Baltimore platform which declares all Tariff schemes, except one for revenue only, unconstitutional.

Retaliation may be a barbaric method, but is it not our only defense against countries which refuse to trade with us fairly? Force is justifiable as a defensive expedient for both individuals and nations.

As for the Tariff-for-revenue-only plank in the Baltimore platform, everybody knows that it is unalloyed buncombe. It does not express Democratic doctrine, much less American doctrine. Tariff-for- revenue-only may be a fine thing theoretically, and it might work out satisfactorily if the whole world would adopt it but, under existing conditions, it is a dream. None knew that it was a dream better than did the delegates at Baltimore, who accepted other silly commitments, because they thought it would catch votes for the Democratic ticket.

Is it not significant that if Tariff-for-revenue-only was seriously regarded as a Democratic doctine to which the Democrats in Congress stand pledged, the Underwood bill, which embodies the ideas of President Wilson and the collective conscience of the Democrats in Congress, was drawn and will be passed in violation of that doctrine?

Tariff-for-revenue-only is an impraticable humbug. President Wilson knows that it is a humbug, just as he knows that the one-term plank is a humbug, and so does every Democratic member of Congress.

PROTECTING WAGES.

THE Democratic statesmen who propose to reduce the Tariff upon imported articles so as to place our manufacturers in keener competition with foreign manufacturers who pay far less wages, are going to compel our employers to pay the same high rate of wages under the new conditions. That is probably a perfectly frank expression of belief on the part of the Democratic disciples of Tariff for revenue only. These students of a certain school of political economy undoubtedly believe that without Tariff Protection our industries can compete with foreign industries where labor conditions are entirely different and where wages are very much lower, and still continue to pay the American scale of wages.

But when they say to American manufacturers that they must pay high wages, Tariff or no Tariff, they are going farther than good reason will guarantee. When the other Wilson Tariff bill began to cast its shadow over the prosperity of this country there was a rumble of distress and a ground-swell of disaster before which any command of a department of the government would seem like commanding the ocean to be calm or the waters of Iao to turn back. We all hope this condition of affairs will not again prevail, but another Wilson is playing with the fire.

BRYAN'S PRIVATE JOB.

THE spectacle of the Secretary of State of the United States spending most of his time on the lecture platform, instead of attending to his duties at the Capitol, is one that could not be duplicated anywhere else in the world. Bryan is paid $1,000 per month to perform the duties of State, and yet is quoted as declaring that the salary is not enough for his way of living. He states that for the past seventeen years, he has been able to save $10,000 per annum —over and above his living expenses.

Bryan was perfectly aware of the salary which he would receive as Secretary of State and, if he thought it insufficient, he need not have accepted the position. That he knew the circumstances cannot be doubted, and the chances are that he also knew that he could easily fool the school teacher who is trying to ruin the United States.

However, the whole matter is being taken up by Congress and there are indications that Bryan will not long remain in the Cabinet. And that would be very pleasing to those who have not much use for a professional politician.

BENEFIT (?)

ONE of Louisiana's congressmen says that "free sugar will benefit no one but the sugar barons." Of course not. Those who are old enough will remember how "much cheaper sugar would be to the dear people" after the passage of the almost free Cuban sugar bill. But sugar has been from 1, 1½c to 4c higher ever since. Rosevelt thought, when he was President, that a "reciprocity deal" with Germany on the sugar question would be a great strike for the dear people, but no one saw the ball come down. He also believed he saw a light in the direction of the "Star in the East" that would throttle the coal barons, and persuaded Congress to put coal on the free list. That didn't do a particle of good. Coal goes higher as time flies, There is nothing in Free-Trade for the people, nor never will be, as long as the business of the country is run on the basis of "Buy for a dollar and sell for five."

That Hawaii will see the "big" ball players of the United States in action, is pretty well assured now. The team that is going through to Australia will stop over for a few games against All Hawaii, and the Honolulu grounds will be taxed to their utmost in order to accommodate the crowds that will attend the games. The visit of the star players should liven up the local games and the result will soon be seen.

The suspicion that malarial fever exists in Hawaii is very disquieting, and it is to be hoped that there is no truth in the story that is going the rounds. That the malarial mosquito is here, is well known, but as no case of malaria has ever been reported, it was hoped that the mosquito would remain harmless.

Maui Fever

which leaves an indelible impression on the senses, but a combination of them all. It is all so beautiful, so resting, so perfect in its harmony of coloring and form, impressions just soak in.

"Iao Valley is a wonder of beautiful surprises. The Needle is really only one of them, the one heard about most, but to my mind it is simply one of the fitting and harmonious contrasts which go to the making of the entire valley. The running water in its thousand cascades framed in ferns and strange tropical plants, the yellow green of the kukui trees like patches of cloth-of-gold hung on the mountain sides, the spirit clouds which twist and turn in changing hues about the peaks, opening quick vistas of hidden beauties of ridge and peak and precipice which are gems veiled in the gauze of rainbow texture; all thus lends a dreamy fascination to what is sensed unequalled in any other spot of the kind I have ever visited.

"Then again there is a fascination in the tangled peaks of West Maui due to the mystery of its high-up canyons almost inaccessable, some of them, where they wind about among the mountain tops and filled with a luxuriance of tropical foliage. One feels the call of possible adventure while viewing these seldom trodden paths among the clouds, but the trails are forgotten, I hear, by this generation and I suppose there are today few men who can claim to know the mountains in whose shadows they have spent their lifetime. This very fact of the unknown right at your door, as it were, is an incentive to exploration and I feel sure that the time will some day arrive when thousands of visitors a year will come from all over the world to enjoy a visit to Maui and the ancient trails will again be opened among the fern clad ridges of West Maui as upon the barren crater of Haleakala.

"Yet it is this same Haleakala which really dominates all of Maui. It is so vast that one does not realize how great it is; it is all of East Maui and its gradual slopes to the wreath of moi-moi clouds which girdle this immense volcano detracts from the real height of over 10,000 feet to where the lip of the largest crater in the world lifts its sun-gilt edge above the clouds. The sunsets and sunrises from Kahului, where the little town rests with its feet in the sea on the isthmus between the twin Mauis, is something to be ever remembered. The sun sends first a message of its coming, it clothes the peak and clouds of Haleakala with an irridescent veil of light, it flashes its wireless message of another day along the slopes of Makawao, and while the colors deepen and brighten over and upon the great mountain with the bluest of seas lacing the rocks at its feet with foam lace, the sun shoots up over the lower ridges, the valleys are bathed in light and all the island world wakes to life."
