Says Sugar and Beer Lobbies Both Bad

"If it is wrong for the Brewery corporation to spend money to influence legislation in its behalf, and I believe it is," said L. L. McCandless in an interview, "it is also wrong for the sugar planters to do the same thing." "As I see it there is a principle at stake. An individual may spend his own money as he pleases, so long as he does not attempt bribery, or in other ways overstep the law, he has a right to use his own money to create public sentiment, or influence the opinions of others for or against any measure that he may deem fit. With a corporation it is different. The use of a corporation's money for political purposes is wrong."

"It does not matter that the directors may have authorized the manager of a company to use company funds in a legislative campaign, or to create sentiment favorable to the business in which the company is engaged unless that is done openly and above board," McCandless said. "The manager would only be using his own personal judgment and the directors would only be exercising their personal judgment, they might all be wrong—they might all be taking the wrong view of the matter. The point I make is that they are trustees of other people's money and they have no right to use other people's money in that way."

Hawaii's Loss Maui's Gain

In the departure of Prof. Clowes, who goes to take charge of Lahaina school, Hilo and vicinity suffer a loss. Mr. Clowes is an enthusiast in his work as an agricultural expert, and in the experiment station at Glenwood he has done splendid work. His transfer to Lahaina is a striking example of the changed policy of the Department of Education under Superintendent Kinney. Under the old system the Lahaina school has been mostly a portion of a plantation, about the only thing its students did being to raise sugar cane. Professor Clowes will make it really a school of diversified agriculture. Those who have watched him in Hilo and know his heart is in his work believe that he will make a success of the new policy.—Hilo Tribune.

Note.—Prof. Clowes comes as assistant to Principal MacDonald.—Ed.
