Territorial Market Management
The Territorial Market comes under the head of "those things that ought to be but ain't." A good number of people in this town are more than favorably disposed toward the Territorial Market. They have gone out of their way to patronize this market because it is looked upon as an outlet for the product of the small farmer. And many people wish to do what they can to help the so-called "small man."

But the market lacks management. It is practically speaking in about the same position as the municipal government of Honolulu; it has the same faulty management, and although great effort may be put forth to overcome this difficulty, the desired results are not in evidence.

To be entirely fair one should realize that this market has many exceptional problems to face. It is not popular with interests whose profits might possibly be reduced by a successful public market. It is working in a new field. It may not have the amount of money necessary to do the work expected.

All sorts of boulders could be discovered in the pathway of this institution, but everyone of them is another point in proof of the fact that the market needs management. No privately controlled business has ever been built up without a struggle; government controlled business cannot expect an easier pathway.

The quickest means of killing off a private business is to put a department in charge of a man or boy who doesn't know his business, and to all appearances has never been schooled in the work to be done. The persons in control are responsible for the ignorance and poor service continues.

Between the board of agriculture and the food commission it should be possible to develop a line of action, business management, that will put the Territorial Market in the list of places where the people can secure service. That will bring the trade and small farmer will get his share.—Star-Bulletin.

What It Would Take To Furnish Cottages

In reference to furnishing teachers' cottages for the Island of Hawaii, a dealer has presented figures to indicate the cost. This estimate appearing on the face of it, would tend to make it seem rather an expensive undertaking, but since the county of Maui has found it possible to do so, there can be no sane reason advanced as to why this county should not do likewise.

There is little doubt that if practical economy could be put into effect here, there is many an improvement could be added to those that we already have, and that the cost of furnishing teachers' cottages—is one of these, is also a certainty. What Maui has done, we could and should do in this respect, instead of bickering over what it will cost.—Hawaii Post.

Portuguese To Make A Red Cross Drive

Beginning November 4, Portuguese of the Islands will carry on a campaign for funds for Red Cross work among the Portuguese troops at the front in France and in Africa. Portugal now has 50,000 men in France and 150,000 more in training for service. The strain upon the little country will be very great, and Portuguese domiciled away will make an effort to strengthen the hands of the Red Cross in their armies.

Committees to have charge of raising funds for the purpose indicated have been appointed for all the Islands, those for Maui being as follows: Kahului—Jose Teixeira and Raymond Vasconcelos.

Wailuku—Joao A. dos Reis and Jose R. Coelho.

Wahee—Joao de Nobrega and John R. Teixeira.

Weekly Market Letter

Honolulu, October 26.—The price of Island eggs has remained the same for the past three weeks. Island poultry is scarce and the retailers are offering good prices.

Muscovy ducks are scarcer than they have been for some time past and the price has advanced two cents.

The first of the new crop of Maui beans was received last week. Calico beans selling for $11.00, small whites for $13.00 and red beans for $9.00 a hundred. The Maui farmers expect to be able to market a large crop of beans this year.

Large shipments of dried corn are being received from Maui and Hawaii. Corn is not selling very fast. Most of the people having a small number of chickens have disposed of them on account of the high price of feed and the high prices offered for poultry.

This has helped to reduce the demand for feed and also helped to raise the price of fresh island eggs.—O. B. LIGHTFOOT, Acting Superintendent.

WHY INDIVIDUALISM IS AS DEAD AS A SMELT

By George W. Perkins.

"Individualism" is as dead as a smelt. That is my contention.

In this country we have been living in an age of the utmost freedom to the individual. It has been the individualistic period.

In the early days, when instantaneous intercommunication did not exist, when education was meagre and science undeveloped, what the individual did was of comparatively small consequence, for his deeds did not reach very far and did not affect many people.

With intercommunication drawing the world together in one centralized community, the act of the individual can affect a large number of persons; therefore, that form of freedom which is simply another expression for license to do as one pleases can no longer exist.

Society is finding it necessary to take away much of what has hitherto been called "freedom of the individual." In my judgment this process is only in its infancy.

Until recent years little broad thinking was given to this problem and differences were settled on the basis of "might makes right." All this is rapidly changing and we are entering a period of new industrial relationships.

In my judgment we are just now entering a period of copartnership, where the tool user will be part tool owner and where capital and labor will share more equitably in the profits of the business in which they are jointly engaged.

This advance is inevitable because of our educational system, which teaches the workman to think for himself.

It is inevitable because strikes and lockouts can never be settled satisfactorily or permanently by merely raising a man's wages.

No more increase in wages can ever satisfactorily solve this problem. It can be solved only on the basis of profit sharing.

By profit sharing I do not mean bonus giving.

Profit sharing can be done satisfactorily only when the business concern makes public its transactions, so that the laborer and the stockholder can know as much about the business as does the manager himself.

In the adjustment of difficulties between capital and labor I am confident that open books will accomplish much more than open shops.

About the only goal we have had has been the almighty dollar. The first question asked when a man dies is, "How much was he worth?" with scarcely a thought as to how much he did for his community or his country.

But what has it all amounted to?

On the whole, the individualistic age has not been a success, either for the individual or the community in which he has lived, or the nation.

We are, beyond question, entering on a period where the welfare of the community takes precedence over the interests of the individual and where the liberty of the individual will be more and more circumscribed for the benefit of the community as a whole.

Our only decoration—the almighty dollar—is receding into the background. The man of exceptional ability, if more than ordinary talent, will hereafter look for his rewards, for his honors, not in one direction but in two—First—and foremost—in some public work accomplished and, secondarily, in wealth acquired.

One reason why I am strongly for universal military training is that it develops in the youth a sense of all around responsibility to his country, not only in time of war but in time of peace.

In recent years we have been hearing a great deal about government ownership of our railroads.

Government ownership of railroads may be as desirable in this country as it is in Germany, but we must first have public servants who will at least come somewhere near the standard of Germany's public servants in efficiency and honesty.

Centralization is the order of the day. The telegraph, the telephone, the automobile and the airship are the causes. They have wiped out not only old precedents and customs, but State and national lines as well.

A man living in Boston who wishes to talk to a man living in San Francisco simply rings a bell, puts a little instrument to his ear and proceeds to talk. There is hardly a miracle in the Bible more wonderful than this.

The doctrine of "State rights" is being rapidly demolished.

The State, viewed as an individual with the right to do as it pleases within itself, without regard for other States, can no longer be tolerated.

We must therefore take on a new nationalism.

The mighty changes taking place in Europe tell us with unmistakable voice that the reconstruction period is at hand. The man of the future must realize it. He must not look back to the setting but forward to the rising sun.
