Make Trip To Haleakala

In spite of inclement weather, a trip to Haleakala went through almost on schedule time Saturday afternoon, when A. H. Morrison of the Hawaiian Sales Company, Ltd. took a party to the volcano mountain. Rain accompanied the party on the entire up-trip and not until the middle of Sunday morning were they able to view the beauties of Haleakala. However, when the clouds did pass, all felt that they were well repaid for the discomforts of the trip. As his guests Mr. Morrison had, Miss Annie Walker, Miss Joy Dow, Mrs. E. S. Gives Novelty Party

Going back to the days when macramé ties and plush albums were fashionable, Dr. and Mrs. Rothrock Monday night transformed their beautiful home at Paia into a semblance of the old time house with best rooms, the shades of which were kept down lest the carpet fade and entertained nearly three score of friends with a novelty party. The affair was given to friends from Paia high school, Hamakuapoko and Makawao. Each guest that came was attired in the mode of the early days, and novelties as to costume were in abundance. Old time dances were tripped, or sat out in cozy corners made of crazy quilts.

When refreshment time came a distinct novelty was given to it by the entrance of Dr. J. C. Fitzgerald garbed as a taniwha man, and ready to sell hot tamales to anyone who would buy. He led the company into a dining room that had been transferred into a literal "hole in the wall" of the slum section of a big city. A battered cash register grimy tables heavy white china, coffee cups which took two hands to lift, and fly-specked pictures on the walls gave a truly cheap restaurant atmosphere, to the delight of the guests. As the presiding spirit of the beauey, Dr. Fitzgerald was voted a decided success.

THE WOMAN THAT WAS

There are really no longer frontiers in the world. The railroad, the telegraph, the telephone, automobiles, airships and all those things have laid the most remote places of the earth under tribute. And, with the disappearance of the frontiers disappears also that remarkable person we knew as the pioneer woman.

History sheds a great light on only a few of these pioneer women. Nancy Hanks, the mother of Lincoln, for instance, is one of them remembered. But, for the most part, they lived unknown and are forgotten now in death.

Happily, however, the world will cherish forever the memory of that type of woman who followed her man bravely into the wilderness and there helped him rear his roof-tree, bearing children there and enduring sufferings and hardships of a life that the woman of today must shudder to even contemplate.

The pioneer woman voluntarily, in most instances, faced a fate that only the bravest hearts could face. If, indeed, she escaped the menace of savage tribes, she still was compelled to summon all the fortitude of her soul to exist and fulfill her destiny.

No doctor was within her call, no human companionship of neighbors and friends, no social amenities to soften her fate, nothing was there for her but that unseparable immolation that is now beyond imagination.

Yet, it was she who, out of the sacrifices of her life, made America what it is today. It was from under her sublime heart that came the sons of men who put new stars on the flag.

MAKEUP ONCE MORE USED BY MILADY

LONDON, May 6—(By Associated Press)—The British "land girl" of the war, who is once more a town girl, has returned to the use of "make-up."

Artful make-up, in the opinion of a London business woman who champions the practice, is essential. "There is no room," she told an interviewer, "for the wash-out, tired-looking woman in the business world. Even if she is delicate she must not look delicate. A little rouge, very daintily applied, will give her an appearance of health and brightness which goes a long way with an employer."

"I assure you that hundreds of girls who are never suspected of the fact by outsiders habitually 'make up.' But they do it so perfectly that they deceive the opposite sex, and large numbers of their own sex, too. Obvious make-up is vulgar and would be of great disadvantage."

Says Stage Is Not A Rosy Dream

English Actress Draws Dark Picture—Says Theatre Offers Many Discomforts Even To Stars

LONDON, May 3—(By Associated Press)—A dark picture of life on the stage was drawn by Miss Muriel Pratt, a well-known London actress, in a recent speech. "The discomfort of a theatre," she said, "even in the West-end, if one is lucky enough to have a 'star' dressing-room, is extraordinarily disagreeable. The draughts from the theatre, the coldness in winter, the heat in summer, and the entire lack of any form of comfort even in London, should be enough to deter most people, if they knew it beforehand, from going on the stage.

"In the provinces it is fifty times worse, and the music-halls are indescribably uncomfortable. They are dirty, they are cold, there is absolutely no comfort of any kind. The journeys are bad, and one spent most of one's time waiting about cold stations. It is impossible to get food, and the whole of the life of the stage, even to people who can raise protests and do their best to help themselves, is painful and horrible."

LONELINESS OF AGE

From what observations we have been able to make, it seems to us that old folks who complain of loneliness and neglect have themselves to blame for it in most instances.

There are altogether too many old men and old women who put in their time actually whining about the sad fate that has befallen them. They say they are "in the way" and that "nobody wants them, anymore." One would suppose from these expressions that the world is cruel and heartless and that it has no time at all for old folks.

But the fact is that the world is not cruel or heartless. It is a very soft-hearted and kindly world, all around, and full of the very nicest kind of people.

Of course, nobody likes grouchy folks; nobody takes pleasure in the companionship of querulous and fault-finding companions.

We have never yet known a cheery, light-hearted old person, man or woman, that everybody wasn't just plain crazy about. Even children have to take back seats for that kind of old folks.

We knew an old man once who was always on the go with a crowd of pleasure-loving young fellows. In summer he used to wear a sailor hat with a polka dot band around it. He carried a bamboo cane. He was in for anything that was right. And those young fellows wouldn't think of going anywhere without him.

And, as for the old folks who can do nothing but sit in the chimney corners, but who keep a smile on their lips and gladness in their hearts what a happy fate is theirs. How vast and holy is the care that surrounds them.

Let everybody remember this. No matter how young anyone is now, he will some day be old if he lives long enough.

There is no loneliness at all in old age unless we put it there ourselves. —Los Angeles Times.

Blind Pig And Live Pig Cause Downfalls

The police court was busy this morning, two whole cases being tried, or rather there would have been two whole cases, if one of the defendants cited to appear hadn't skipped his bail. Matsu Saki looked upon the okolehao when it was too fresh and was arrested in the wee hours of this morning for drunkenness. Bail was fixed at $6.00, but when Saki's case was called he was not on hand to give an account of himself.

Through the kind heartedness of the plaintiff Charles Rose, Chang Ong, a Chinaman, looking for an easy way to make money, was given a suspended sentence of 13 months. He admitted to the theft and state he had sold the pig to one Ah Yau in Waikapu for $4.00.

Hawaiian singers as well as marksmen are wanted to attend the rifle matches in New York, according to word from Lieut. Col. William C. Harloe of the Marine Corps, designated by the navy department as executive officer for the matches.

"We want the boys to be playing somewhere all during the day and night," he has written to a friend in Honolulu.

It is expected Congress will provide appropriations for the transportation of marksmen before July 1. The matches are to be held at the new navy rifle range, 20 miles from New York City. Thousands of visitors are expected.

Hotly Debating Suffrage Resolution

(By The Associated Press) WASHINGTON, May 21—An all day suffrage argument was held in the senate. Champ Clark favored suffrage and urged the passage of the resolution because the President recommended it.
