Printing of every description neatly executed: such as Books, Pamphlets, Circulars, Cards, Handbills, etc., on as good terms as at any other office.

To the friends of Temperance and the public generally we now make our appeal in behalf of this paper. The publisher feeling it a matter of importance to the interest of the Temperance cause in the District, as well as the general interest of the cause, and having been, as he conceives, providentially placed in a situation at this time when he can mingle this interest with that of the business men, and thereby render a double service to the community, and still further open a medium of communication by which our principles may be extended far and wide, at a cheap rate, he has purchased a printing establishment, so as not only to be able to put a daily paper regularly to press, but also a weekly; and still further, be able to do any other printing the public may be pleased to have done; and he assures them that they shall have no cause of complaint. He has made arrangements by which he can devote his time to the interest of the office and the paper; and, having employed Mr. Charles W. Fenton, who will be always on the spot, to conduct the printing, he has no doubt but that general satisfaction will be given. We shall make arrangements to have the earliest news; also the proceedings of Congress.

We wish all who are indebted for the paper up to this time to pay up, as the affairs of the tri-weekly must be closed. They will perceive that we are about to give them a better paper, double the number, at the same price.

While the "COLUMBIAN FOUNTAIN" will be devoted to the cause of Temperance, its columns will be enriched by original articles on subjects calculated to interest, instruct, and benefit its readers. It is intended so to blend variety, amusement, and instruction, as that the various tastes of its patrons may be (as far as it is practicable) gratified. Commerce, Literature, and Science, and every other subject of interest, not inconsistent with Temperance and morality, will receive the earnest attention of the publisher. Nothing of a sectarian, political, or personal character will be admitted.

THE YOUNG MAN'S WAY

TO INTELLIGENCE, RESPECTABILITY, HONOR AND USEFULNESS.

From what has been already said, it is hoped you will be prompted to activity in using the means which lead to a due development of the intellectual powers. This is education of a manly kind, neglected by none without great and manifest loss. Yet this, properly attended to, will not fit us fully for life. To it must be added character, or previous studies will be almost useless. I need not describe it, you know and admire it wherever seen. It is found among the poor as well as wealthy, the unlearned as well as masters of science. Without a good character you will not, you cannot succeed in life, whatever your other qualifications are. Deficiency in science will be witnessed and pitied by your learned friends, but the absence of character will be seen by all, and visited by merited contempt. You may pass into good society without much education, but without character never. Where unknown, you may succeed in making a few acquaintances among the respectable, but as your deficiencies come to light, they will forsake you.—Who has not heard of the man without a shadow, and his various efforts to conceal his unnatural defects? Finding it difficult to remain where he was known he fled into other lands, where he supposed strangers beguiled by his imposing exterior, would bid him welcome to good society. But the effort was as useless as it was foolish.—For he dare not walk in company, either by sun or moonlight, lest his character should be known, and his monstrous deficiency become so visible as to scare away his companions. The only safe plan, therefore, left him, and which he hastily adopted, was only to go out in the dark; an expedient, no doubt, frequently adopted by many young men in large cities, who have wandered from the way of understanding. In his case however, the effort was a failure, as during his walk with an innocent and unsuspecting lady, the clouds broke away and moonbeams came peering through the opening, and revealed to the fair one that she was walking with a man without a shadow. Startled with alarm, without allowing time for expostulation she fled, and the poor fellow was left to meditate alone.

The allegory needs no explanation, its intention is too manifest to be mistaken. It has been introduced not barely to amuse, but to show that all attempts to flee from ourselves are vain and fruitless. No man even among strangers, can sustain a forced character long. When he lest suspects it, his true character will appear to his friends and he will find himself forsaken and alone. He may blaze and shine for a while, but will go out in obscurity.

He who would be respected must first respect himself. It is unreasonable to suppose others will entertain a high regard for him who has done for himself. Self-respect then is one of the first ingredients in worthy character. This, however, must not be mistaken for foolish pride, often so ruinous to the young. Pride is always offensive to God and all good men. It cannot well be otherwise. But self-respect is founded in the nature and common equality of men. God has created all men equal, and all should respect themselves because they are men. We hold an important relation to God and our fellows—to this world and the next. What immense power man has or may have if you do not respect yourselves for what you are now, reflect on what you may be. Each man has a mind which may be almost infinitely expanded—has a power of doing good, if the energies possessed be rightly directed, only to be measured by Him who conferred it.

Without self-respect these powers will never be cultivated—never developed or applied to any useful purpose. The man who does not esteem himself, will never receive it from others. You cannot respect him whom you know to be careless of himself. What we seek in others, we should not be without. You may laugh at the man who amuses you with boyish tricks, or foolish feats of skill in that which can be of no possible use to him or others, but in your heart you despise him. You already read his future history, and foresee the disgraceful termination of his career. Self-respect will make you wary as to company, select in your associations, and careful in the formation of habits.

There is also a dignity in manners which is an essential element of character. Some men galvanize their muscles into a grin, and affect to laugh at every thing. The object of this is to please, but the effect is wholly of a different character. It invariably makes a man look childish in the eyes of all wise persons. This by all means should be avoided. Cheerfulness is always indispensable, and never fails to adorn the best society, but loud laughing and continual trifling destroys all dignity. The clown of a public show may attract much attention and receive the highest applause, but he is heartily despised after all. Sober dignity, good sense, and a ease of manners in company, are ever to be regarded as essential to enduring reputation.

Personal appearance, though of less consequence than other accomplishments, is not to be wholly disregarded. You always feel more regard for a stranger well clad and neat in his apparel, than for one whose appearance is disgusting. A dog will not snap at him half so readily. While you should guard against being a man of fashion all men will condemn you for being a slob. Cleanliness and neatness is becoming in all, but more especially in the young. Always appear the gentleman in dress and in dignity of deportment. Show that you live well at home, nor disgrace your mother and sisters. By such a course, all men will be compelled to respect you whatever is your situation in life. Respect from others, is not to be lightly esteemed. Desire for this is a sure index of future character and standing.—Politeness should never be dispensed with, even among every day companions, as the indulgence of improper habits soon makes them permanent.

This, however, will not cause you to struggle for another and higher rank. Nor will it induce you to seek release from labor. No man is or ought to be more respected than the one who daily toils for his bread. The social scale in this day may be somewhat out of order, but it will come right hereafter. The industrious classes are the only ones who can set it right.—Gentlemen, so called, can never. A man may be a true nobleman any where—in any office or employment. If laboring men are not respected, it is because they do not respect themselves. It is the large soul that forms the great man, in whatever station found. A man by accident may attain an elevation, but if it be unnatural to him, he must of necessity come down. But he who by respecting himself and the exertion of his energies—by exercise of his higher powers becomes elevated, there he remains as in a natural element. No change of business, of outward fortune or political promotion can do this for him—it is his own work, aided by the blessing of God. Self-respect will teach you not to stoop, or veer from a right course to court the applause of the vulgar. Your course should be one and unchangeable. If the good and virtuous respect you, regard not the clamour of the foolish.

FACULTY AND INSTRUCTORS.

Rev. C. P. KRAUTH, D. D., President and Professor of Moral Science.

Rev. H. S. BAUGHER, A. M., Professor of Greek and Rhetoric.

Rev. M. JACOBS, A. M., Professor of Natural Philosophy, Chemistry, &c.

Rev. W. M. REYNOLDS, A. M., Professor of Latin, Mental Philosophy, &c.

M. L. STOEYER, A. M., Professor of History and Principal of Preparatory Department.

Rev. C. A. HAY, A. M., Professor of German Language and Literature.

HERMAN HAUP, A. M., Professor of Mathematics.

WM. HENRY HARRISON, A. B., Assistant Professor of Languages.

DAVID GILBERT, M. D., Lecturer on Anatomy and Physiology.

Rev. J. G. MORRIS, D. D., Lecturer on Zoology.

WM. ALBAUGH, A. M., Tutor and Teacher in Preparatory Department.

H. R. GRIGER, Teacher of Writing.

The course of studies in Pennsylvania College is as extensive and substantial as that of any institution in the country. The Preparatory Department provides for instruction in all the branches of a thorough English business education, in addition to the Elements of the Mathematics and Classical Literature. The College course is arranged in the four classes usual in the institutions of this country.

The government of the students is as energetic as their circumstances seem to require. They attend at least two recitations a day, and the Faculty contemplate increasing them to three, Church and Bible Class on the Sabbath, and are visited in their rooms so frequently as to preclude the danger of any great irregularities. It is believed no institution in the United States has more exemplary young men in connexion with it. They are all required to lodge in the College edifice, special cases excepted.

The annual expenses are—for board, tuition and room rent, during the winter session $61 87 1-2; for the summer session, $41 87 1-2; washing, $10; wood, $3 00. Total expense, $116 75. Boarding can be had in town at $1 25 per week.

There are two vacations in the year, commencing on the third Thursdays of April and September; each of five weeks continuance.

The summer session will commence on Thursday, the 23d of May. The annual commencement takes place on the third Thursday in September.

The Trustees have recently made various arrangements which will increase the efficiency of the Institution. They have increased the number of Professors and provided for the most ample instruction of the students.

Professor Baugher and Haupt are prepared to board boys and to exercise a special supervision over their studies and deportment, and Parents who may prefer placing their sons under their care, will be secure in regard to their proper management, under arrangements such as pertain to the family circle.
