To the friends of Temperance and the public generally we now make our appeal in behalf of this paper. The publisher feeling it a matter of importance to the interest of the Temperance cause in the District, as well as the general interest of the cause, and having been, as he conceives, Providentially placed in a situation at this time when he can mingle this interest with that of the business men, and thereby render a double service to the community, and still further open a medium of communication by which our principles may be extended far and wide, at a cheap rate, he has purchased a printing establishment, so as not only to be able to put a daily paper regularly to press, but also a weekly; and still further, be able to do any other printing the public may be pleased to have done; and he assures them that they shall have no cause of complaint. He has made arrangements by which he can devote his time to the interest of the office and the paper; and, having employed Mr. Charles W.
Fenton, who will be always on the spot, to conduct the printing, he has no doubt but that general satisfaction will be given. We shall make arrangements to have the earliest news; also the proceedings of Congress.

We wish all who are indebted for the paper up to this time to pay up, as the affairs of the tri-weekly must be closed. They will perceive that we are about to give them a better paper, double the number, at the same price.

While the "COLUMBIAN FOUNTAIN" will be devoted to the cause of Temperance, its columns will be enriched by original articles on subjects calculated to interest, instruct, and benefit its readers. It is intended so to blend variety, amusement, and instruction, as that the various tastes of its patrons may be (as far as it is practicable) gratified.
Commerce, Literature, and Science, and every other subject of interest, not inconsistent with Temperance and morality, will receive the earnest attention of the publisher.
Nothing of a sectarian, political, or personal character will be admitted.

A Card.

The subscriber takes this method to inform his customers, and the public generally, that he has, for the present, removed his Boot and Shoe Pennsylvania Avenue, between 10th and 11th streets, where he can be found at all times, ready to execute any orders he may be favored with, at the shortest notice, and in the best and most fashionable style. He would also wish his customers and the public generally, to take notice that his entire stock will be sold, from and after this date, at Cost, and no mistake. To those wishing to purchase, he would say call and see his stock, consisting of almost every article, size, quality and price, in his line of business, worn by gentlemen, ladies, boys, misses, youths and children.

POETRY.

Are few, but deep and solemn, and they break Fresh from the fount of feeling.—Periclit.

For the Columbian Fountain.
LINES,
BY F. B.

Deep, deep is the precipice, loud the roar Of the torrent of waters dashing; From rock to rock it leaps and plays, The spray in the sunbeams flashing.

The torrent dashing madly by, Tossing on high its spray and foam, The eagle's shrill and startling cry, Waking the rocks of his mountain home.

Sublime is the sight of the mountain height, And giddy the depth below, Above, above is the clear blue sky, What beauty can nature bestow!

The sun has sunk o'er the Western hill, All, all save the torrent is hushed and still;
But that is now, as ever before,
In its whirling foam and ceaseless roar.

WASHINGTON, May 14, 1846.

CHOICE READING.

“If you enlighten the people, do not forget that this is but half the work. Let them be made virtuous and religious, or you leave them more exposed to danger than they were before.”

“THE MITTEN.”

BY J. B. . . .

About two years ago, a young gentleman of this city, who, indeed, professed a passionate fondness for the company of ladies, might have been seen wending his way nightly toward the West End, highly elated with the joy in anticipation upon meeting the lady of his love, and to mingle his smiles with hers, and join in the merry laughter of the gay and giddy circle. Passing hastily over the briefspace of 6 months, he earnestly set about to gain the confidence of the amiable girl. This he thought secured. * * * Lizzy was the embodiment of nature with the outward adornings of woman. Blest as she was, by symmetry of her form, and loveliness of visage, yet she had within a heart of true deception. Fond of lucid imagery, never prone to court the favor of another to slight the one who was her admirer, but ever and anon kept him in leading strings to herself, she easily enticed him to believe that him only she loved.

Her disposition was one contrary to that of most females; never easily excited, but of amiable temperament. Time flew on. Henry, for such was one of the names of her manly suitor, still kept up his devotion.
The more frequent became his visits, the more he became enamored with the more than earthly charms of Lizzy. He proposed marriage, but to his surprise, she refused.
He again repeated his fond vows and assurances, but yet they were slighted. Another had paid his honors at her feet, had gained the laurel for his brow, became the man of her choice, married, and reduced below what she formerly was to a state of almost penury and want, and Henry left to mourn at having got “The Mitten.”

Upon this intelligence of the marriage, he determined not to be discouraged, but to set about his task afresh. Ever lofty in his aspirations, generous and noble, liberal, gifted and talented, with a heart swelling with lofty designs and manly enterprise, he determined to enter the study of medicine. Accordingly, he was educated for the profession, sought and gained the admiration of his fellow students and his preceptor in the languages, and by him declared ready to enter upon the duties of the study of that branch of the sciences; but as it was ever thus with his hopes, when he had passed the usual examination, and was to take his place among those who were aspiring to the appellation of M. D., the worthy was snatched by the hand of death, which event caused him to bid farewell to fame, and to all his hopes of high life. During the late political canvass, he distinguished himself by the formation of the Ashland Clay Club; he exhorted them to prompt action, was found at all the meetings to join in the shout of the throng for Clay and Fre-linghuysen. Defeated in all, he determined to make a bad matter worse by getting married. But what was he to do; there were so many from among whom to make a choice. After pondering, he concluded to set his tender affections upon Miss F—, a personage far more upright, of tender feeling, and one who knew full well how to appreciate his words and looks. I cannot describe her; I fail in the attempt; but to give an outline:

Her features and form were all that a vain man might ask; her hair of auburn, her feet of pearly whiteness, her skin fair, and seemed as if touched by the wand of some fairy from other lands; her form exquisitely cast in nature's own mould, her manner fascinating, her motion was grace, elegance and gentleness, her disposition heavenly. Attracted by these charms, he sought an acquaintance, obtained it, and made known his wish to address her. It was acceded to—he found her the idol of his fond imagination—he poured forth into her ear the breathings of a noble heart, filled with truest devotion. She loved him, she slighted others for him. He was her constant companion—the one she looked to for her protection. She found him all that she could wish. At times, doubting him to be sincere, she would become jealous, though assurances followed thick and fast that she had nothing to fear, but to learn to first fear herself, and learn how to govern her passions. All that can be said has been said of her. Suffice it to say, she is lovely to gaze upon—possessing every virtue in the catalogue of Christian virtues.

At one time, when in her presence, he participated in the festivities of a well known holiday. The glass was put to his lips, he quaffed the poison, made of eggs, sugar, brandy, &c., palatable to the taste, but afterward brought remorse. From that time she became changed. She urged total abstinence upon him—he heeded her not. He had stood high in the T. A. S. as their presiding officer; but in an evil hour he fell!

He signed again, beneath her influence.
His name now stands emblazoned pledged with hers. Her father has a secret enmity against him, has caused him to abandon his house. He has now to wander alone, though she still loves him; yet he has got from her her kindest assurances of greeting him, on his return, as the returning loved one. He now has volunteered to march to the frontier of Mexico to do his country service, and to storm the capitol, if necessary. But I doubt not, when he returns, he will be ready to put on “The Mitten.”

IMPORTANT TO GENTLEMEN.

EDWARD McCUBBIN has handsomely fitted up the three-story house recently erected on the site of his former stand, where he will be happy to resume his business as a barber and hair dresser.
He very respectfully invites a return of his old and esteemed customers, and solicits the patronage of the public generally to the Temple of Fashion, No. 1, on 8th street, near Pennsylvania avenue.
With the most competent assistants, and every description of materials, he can render his operations a luxury, instead of a dull, sleepy process, he flatters himself that to him will be accorded the credit of keeping pace with the times in all that has a tendency to add to the comfort and improve the appearance of the outer man.

Not only in the face has Nature made Its comeliness and beauty to abound, But in the scissors' edge and razor's blade The aids to loveliness are ever found.
