

The Miner.

President Grant's Inaugural.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Following is President Grant's inaugural address:

Citizens of the United States.—Your suffrages having elevated me to the office of President of the United States, I have, in conformity with the Constitution of our country, taken the oath of office presented therein. I have taken this oath without mental reservation, and with the determination to do to the best of my ability all that it requires of me. The responsibilities of the position I feel but accept them without fear. The office has come to me unthought, and I commence the duties untrammelled. I bring to it a conscientious desire and determination to fulfill it to the best of my ability and to the satisfaction of the people.

On all the leading questions agitating the public mind I will express my views to Congress and urge them according to my judgment; and when I think it advisable I will always exercise the constitutional privilege of interposing a veto to defeat measures which I oppose. But all the laws will be faithfully executed, whether they meet my approval or not. I shall on all subjects have a policy to recommend—none to enforce against the will of the people. Laws are to govern all alike; those opposed to as well as those who favor them. I know no method to secure the repeal of bad or obnoxious laws so effective as their stringent execution.

The country having just emerged from a great rebellion, many questions will come before it for settlement in the next four years, which preceding administrations have never had to deal with. In meeting this, it is desirable that they should be approached calmly, without prejudice, or state or sectional pride, remembering that the greatest good to the greatest number is the object to be attained. This requires security of person, property, and for religious and political opinion in every part of our common country, without regard to locality or prejudice. Laws to secure these will receive my best efforts for their enforcement.

A great debt has been contracted in securing us and our posterity the Union. The payment of this principal and interest, as well as the return to a specie basis, as soon as it can be accomplished without material detriment to the debtor class, or the country at large, must be provided for. To protect the national honor, every dollar of the Government indebtedness should be paid in gold, unless otherwise expressed and stipulated in the contract. Let it be understood that no repudiation of one farthing of our public debt will be trusted in a public place; and it will go far towards strengthening credit which ought to be the best in the world, and will ultimately enable us to replace the debt with bonds bearing less interest than we now pay.

To this revenue, a strict accountability to the treasury for every dollar collected, and the greatest practicable retrenchment in expenditure in every department of the Government. When we compare this paying capacity of the country now, and ten States still in poverty from the effects of war, but soon to emerge, I trust, into greater prosperity than ever before, with its paying capacity twenty-five years ago, and calculate what it probably will be twenty-five years hence, who can doubt the feasibility of paying every dollar then with more ease than we now pay for useless luxuries. Why, it looks as though Providence has bestowed upon us a strong box of the precious metals locked up in the sterile mountains of the far West, which we are now forging the key to unlock and meet the very contingency that is now upon us.

Ultimately it may be necessary that the General Government should give its aid to secure this access, but that should only be when a dollar of obligation to pay secures precisely the same sort of a dollar to use now, and not before. While this question of specie payment is in abeyance, the prudent and business man is careful about contracting debts payable in the distant future. The nation should follow the same rule. A prostrate commerce is to be rebuilt and all the industries encouraged. The young men of the country—those who, from their age, must be its rulers 25 years hence, have a particular interest in maintaining the national honor. In a moment's reflection as to what will be our commanding influence among the nations of the earth in their day, if they are only true to themselves, should inspire them with national pride. All divisions, geographical, political and religious, can join in this common sentiment. How the public debt is to be paid, or specie payment resumed, is not so important as that a plan should be adopted and acquiesced in. A united determination to do it is worth more than a divided council upon the method of doing it. Legislation upon this subject may not be necessary now, or even advisable, but it will be when the civil law is restored in all parts of the country, and trade resumes its wonted channel.

It will be my endeavor to execute all laws in good faith, collect all revenues assessed, and to have them properly accounted for and economically disbursed. It will be, to the best of my ability, my endeavor to appoint to office those only who will carry out this design.

In regard to foreign policy, I would deal with nations as equitably as the law requires individuals to deal with each other, and I would protect law abiding citizens, whether of native or foreign birth, wherever their rights are jeopardized, or the flag of our country floats. I would respect the rights of all nations, demanding equal respect for our own. If others depart from this rule in their dealings with us, we may be compelled to follow their precedents.

The proper treatment of the original occupants of the lands, the Indians, is one deserving careful and equal study. I will favor any course towards them which tends to their civilization, Christianization and ultimate citizenship.

The question of suffrage is one which is likely to agitate the public so long as a portion of the citizens of the nation are excluded from its privilege in any State. It seems to me very desirable that this question should be settled now. I entertain the hope and express the desire that it may be by the ratification of the 15th Article of the Amendment to the Constitution.

In conclusion, I ask patience and forbearance, one toward another, throughout the land, and a determined effort on the part of every citizen to do his share towards cementing a happy Union, and I ask the prayers of the Nation to Almighty God in behalf of this consummation.
