Now hear the other side. The emancipationists say they go for a separation of the two races—hoping and believing that it will be the lasting benefit of both.

From the Louisville Courier. (From the Louisville Courier.) The Emancipation Arguments of Pro-Slavery Men.

It seems to be the common opinion that no political measure of importance can be carried in this country unless it finds general approval.

By the last census of the United States, taken in 1840, the number of slaves in the Southern States was 2,187,455; if we add the probable increase, computed according to the ratio of the preceding ten years, the present number of slaves, in the thirteen slave States, will be about 3,045,000.

Supposing this matter to be understood and settled, it is with some surprise, and with more regret, that I observe the attempt now making to carry out the views of the emancipationists.

What is the first thing to do? Are we, first, to do away with the slave, or are we to do away with the slaveholder? Are we to do away with the slave, or are we to do away with the slaveholder?

There is another point of view in which the slaveholder may be considered. It is as a man of property, and as such, he is entitled to the same rights and honors as any other man.
