

FORGUOS IN TEARS.

He Weeps and Moans Over the Remains of His Dead Wife.

The Coroner's Jury Charges Him With Murder—Forguos Does Not Make a Statement.

Coroner George Clark held an inquest last evening in the case of Mrs. Marie Forguos, who died a tragic death Sunday afternoon, presumably at the hands of her husband, Auguste Forguos.

The examination-room was uncomfortably crowded with witnesses, jurors and spectators, and outside a large crowd gathered to hear the verdict.

Forguos arrived shortly after the taking of testimony began, and was accompanied by Police Captain Lee and officer Lowell.

Forguos seemed calm enough at this time. When asked if he desired to see the body of his wife before testifying, he answered in the affirmative.

He was led into the rear room and the corpse exposed to his view.

For a few seconds Forguos stood and stared at the marble-like face and uttered not a word. Then with a moan he fell upon the corpse and began kissing the cold lips with fervency, and sobbing the while.

"Oh, Marie! Marie!" he called, and then fell upon the floor in an apparent paroxysm of grief.

WOULD NOT TESTIFY.

Officer Lowell lifted Forguos to his feet, and led him back into the examination-room.

Forguos sat upon a chair and continued to moan piteously. He could not be comforted, and when asked if he wished to testify, replied that he was too sick.

Finding that it would be impossible to get him to testify, the coroner ordered the coroner's jury to return a verdict.

The jury returned a verdict of murder, and Forguos was taken back to prison.

Captain Lee was then sworn, and the statement made to him by Forguos shortly after the shooting, and which statement was published in yesterday's Record-Union, was read.

Captain Lee said it was a correct reproduction of Forguos' statement. The captain then showed the jury how Forguos had illustrated the scuffle between himself and his wife, and how, as he claimed, she had shot herself.

"I asked him," said the captain, "if she kept on shooting herself in the heart, and he said 'yes.' On Sunday night he told me that his wife fired first at him and the bullet just missed his head. Then he seized her by the arm, and she shot herself. He called on her yesterday. He had been found in the walls, and then he said that she did not fire that first shot at him."

THE DEAD WOMAN'S DAUGHTER.

Mrs. G. H. Heisch, daughter of the dead woman, was the next witness. "The deceased was my mother," she said. "She was about forty-three years and eleven months of age. I called on her yesterday. Her husband was there. They had a quarrel in my presence. He was under the influence of liquor. He told me to behave myself, and not to drink. He told me that my mother was drunk, but I knew that she was not. There were no threats made by him then, but he has threatened her at other times. I left about 4 o'clock. As I was going out, Forguos followed me and called out 'Mamma, don't you ever come back here—your husband—I will kill you.' He had his pistol then and I believe that had I remained there he would have shot me, too."

"Did you ever have a conversation with your mother about a pistol?" asked Coroner Clark.

"Yes," replied Mrs. Heisch. "Forguos had shot a dog, and my mother told me that he got so excited that she was afraid he would shoot her, too."

The witness then went on to say that Forguos and her mother quarrelled frequently—or rather that he gave her no peace. Witness had advised her mother to hide Forguos' pistol, as she was afraid he would use it.

"At another time they quarrelled," she said, "and I ran out of the house. My mother came and begged me to give her the pistol, as she was afraid he would use it on her. I know that he has threatened to kill my mother, and I know that nothing would part them."

DRINK CAUSED IT.

In answer to questions by City Attorney Hart, Mrs. Heisch said that the quarrel between Forguos and his wife were mostly on account of his drinking. She would remonstrate with him, she said, and ask him not to drink. He was also very jealous. He was jealous of my husband and me. My mother went upstairs, where the pistol was kept, once while I was at the house Sunday, but she only went up to get some clothes for me. She did not get the pistol, I am sure. Forguos went up afterwards, and I believe got the pistol. When my mother handed me the package of baby clothes, she got angry, and told me not to command mother not to do anything for me. Then he ran up stairs and came down very rapidly and excitedly. That was just as I was going out, and when he told me not to come back or he would shoot me. Forguos is my stepfather. My mother had been married three times.

Mrs. Schiminger, the next witness, said she was a neighbor of the Forguos family. Sunday afternoon she saw Mrs. Heisch leave the house and heard Forguos call after her something in French. He was very excited. "After she left I heard the door slammed and bolted," said the witness. "Then I heard some loud talking inside, and a little later a scream followed by a pistol shot. Then there was another scream, and

THEN THREE SHOTS.

In rapid succession I ran over toward the house and Forguos came out into the front garden. I asked him what he had done—that had become of his wife. He said 'Oh, she's all right.' He got a little too much in the head," I asked him to let me go in and see her, but he said she was asleep and would be all right pretty soon. He said she was drunk, but I knew that was not so, because I saw her about 1 o'clock and she was sober."

"Did Mrs. Heisch ever say anything to you about Forguos ever saying he had threatened to shoot her?" asked Coroner Clark.

"Yes," she said, "he said that he got excited when he was drinking and threatened to use the pistol. I advised her to hide it. I have seen Forguos intoxicated many times, but I never saw Mrs. Forguos under the influence of liquor, and I have known her fourteen or fifteen years. I always knew her to be a hard-working, honest woman. The scream that I heard was that of a woman. I could not be mistaken—it was not my voice."

WHAT FORGUOS SAID.

George H. Kunz, who lives at Tenth and T streets, testified that shortly after the shooting he was walking down Tenth street, and saw some people gathering around Forguos's house. He asked what was the matter, and somebody said Forguos had shot his wife. The witness wanted to go in, but the bystanders told him not to, as Forguos might shoot him, too. Pretty soon Forguos came outside and the witness asked him what he had done. Forguos replied that his wife had tried to shoot him, he missed him. When the witness asked if he allowed her to go in and see Mrs. Forguos, the prisoner refused to permit it, but after some further talk he said he would go inside and see her, and then let the witness come in. While he was inside the officer arrested him.

George H. Heisch, son-in-law of the deceased, was the next witness. He said he had heard frequent quarrels between Mrs. Forguos and her husband, but did not know what it was about, as they talked in French. He had choked and struck her, but she would never tell of it. "He was a man that had a great deal of spirit," said Heisch, "and had a bad temper. Once he drove her out of the house and I kept her at my brother's house for two weeks. He has often said that if he could ever separate him and his wife he would kill them all off."

FORGUOS' THREATS.

In answer to questions from City Attorney Hart, Heisch said that on Christmas Forguos wrote something on the back of a photograph and gave it to his wife. She read it, and tore it up immediately and put the pieces on a shelf, where he (the witness) found it to-day.

The pieces of the photograph were produced and handed to Interpreter Barrett, who put them together and read it to the jury. It read, in effect: "You are looking for something, madam, that will end badly for you—and for me, but worse for you. You are going against my will. Time will tell that I am right." It was signed by Forguos.

Elizabet Lemet testified that he was acquainted with Mr. and Mrs. Forguos. The latter was employed by him during the last twelve years as his cook. So far as he knew she had never drunk, and never drank. She had complained to the witness that her home was not a happy one. She said something about her husband having a pistol, but she does not remember anything having been said to her using it upon her. On New Year's day she saw Forguos at his house, and Forguos was drunk.

Alexander Hofer testified that he was in the vicinity of Forguos' house when she shot herself. He saw Forguos when he came out in the front garden, and testified to by Mrs. Schiminger. His testimony was mainly in corroboration of that given by Mrs. Schiminger.

Coroner Clark read the statement of Dr. White, who made the autopsy on the body of Mrs. Forguos. Three penetrating wounds were found on her head, and would have been fatal. Besides these there was one contused wound near the others. All of these first-named penetrations extended through the left lung.

THE VERDICT.

This concluded the testimony, and the Coroner turned the case over to the jury. After about ten minutes' deliberation the jury returned a verdict that "Maria Forguos came to her death on the 11th day of January, 1891, from three wounds inflicted by a pistol in the hands of Auguste Forguos, and charging Forguos with murder."

SHORTER HOURS.

Another Citizen Who Would Have the Stores Close Early.

Ens. RECORD-UNION: I am glad to see some one stand up for the poor, overworked salesmen and men of this city.

I wish to publicly thank General Martine for the noble stand he has taken in this matter—not only for myself, but on behalf of every co-laborer in our midst. Why cannot the merchants of our city, irrespective of their lines of goods, close their doors at 5 p. m., as is the custom throughout the Eastern cities? If needs be, let the ladies of this city hold a mass meeting and resolve not to deal with any store that refuses to join this laudable movement, and God will bless them for their good work.

Boys and girls remember the long, tedious hours of school, and even to o'clock—that you, who have to toil for your living, had to spend in the shops where you were employed, before this early closing of the stores would effect, and remember now that unless it is sustained the same state of affairs will prevail. Let us all join hands and victory will be ours.

A CRIPPLE ROBBED.

The Result of an Argument as to the Gentleness of a Greenback.

Sam. Edwards and Frank Everdell were arrested yesterday afternoon by officers Lowell and Carroll and charged with robbery.

The complaining party is a one-armed individual named Higgins, and he claims to have been robbed of about $20. He says he went into a saloon on Front street yesterday, and tossing a $20 piece on the counter called all hands up to the bar to drink with him. The barkeeper gave him a $10 gold piece, a $5 greenback and some silver in change, and he was about to leave the place when one of the early-closing saloon-keepers came into the bar and thought it a wise plan to examine the currency and he endeavored to take it from his right side vest pocket.

Having only one arm he could not easily do so, and one of the gang present volunteered to assist him, and kindly took the greenback from his pocket. The two men gathered around to look at it, and in his enthusiasm Higgins forgot to take care of the gold piece he had in his pocket.

The result was that he had all of his money stolen, and the man with the greenback got away with his swag also.

CITY BUSINESS.

The City Advertising Proposition Laid Over Again.

John Eitel's Protest—George E. Bates Wants His Bonds Refunded—Grading Contracts.

When the Board of City Trustees met yesterday morning, Mayor Comstock first called up the matter of fixing the price for city advertising. He stated that the committee appointed to establish the rate had not yet met, but would this week.

For his part, he would favor fixing the rate the same as was charged the county by the RECORD-UNION last year, as follows: One square (240 ems), first insertion, $1; next two insertions, 75 cents; each; and subsequent insertions, 50 cents.

Joseph P. Wiseman, representing the RECORD-UNION, reminded the Mayor that the schedule of prices which he read was an old one which the paper charged the county some time ago. The RECORD-UNION had since changed the size of its square, reducing it to about 150 ems, and was charging its new rate for all of the county advertising.

V. S. McClatchy, of the Bee, said he knew that the schedule as read by the Mayor was not the RECORD-UNION's rates for advertising in the Bee's office. The paper had reduced the size of its squares over a year ago, and was charging the county by their new rates. The Bee's office was in charge of all the merchants in Sacramento, and they did not think the city should demand or fix a lower rate than was charged to all other advertisers.

Upon motion of Trustee McLaughlin, the committee was given another week to report.

EITEL'S PROTEST.

John Eitel appeared before the Board and read a protest which he had prepared to the effect that he had fourteenth street, from N to O, had been prepared, and he did not believe it was right for him to pay out money unless he received a just equivalent for the work done. He satisfied until a large number of wagons loaded of the mud was hauled away, and good gravel put in its place.

Trustee McLaughlin said he believed the work on the street had been properly performed, and he proposed to accept it. He thought Mr. Eitel and Mr. Scott, who were on the committee, were the work had been done at all. They did not want the street gravelled in the first place.

Upon motion of the Street Commissioner, the objections to the grading and graveling of the street were dismissed, by the unanimous vote of the Board.

A. Ratke presented a petition, asking that he be allowed to establish a saloon on K street, between Fifth and Sixth. The being no objection, it was authorized to procure his license.

BATES' BONDS.

George E. Bates, who holds a large number of Sacramento city bonds, appeared before the Board of City Trustees, and asked that they be refunded by the city and new 6 per cent bonds issued in their stead. He said that almost all of the old red bonds, amounting to nearly a million dollars, had been refunded and new white bonds issued by the Act of 1887. There was at present outstanding about $6,000 worth of the old bonds which had not been refunded, and he held $2,300 worth. The bonds were valid and the only question which stood in the way of their redemption was the statute of limitation.

The Mayor said that if the Board did exchange Mr. Bates' bonds, he ought to be willing to accept 50 per cent on the dollar, as he had in all probability purchased them at a very low figure.

Mr. Bates did not say at what figure he bought the bonds, but he told the Board that he paid considerably more than 50 per cent for them, and of course would want to let them go for less than their cost.

At the request of the Mayor, the matter was laid over for consideration.

GRADING CONTRACTS.

Extensions of time were granted for completing the work of grading N street from Twenty-ninth to Thirtieth, and Y street from Twentieth to Twenty-first.

J. W. Guthrie asked that the board give him permission to connect the drainage pipe from the new Postoffice building, with the main sewer on Seventh street. He said the sewer in the alley would not carry off the drainage satisfactorily, as it did not have the proper fall.

The matter was referred to the Street Commissioner.

THE BOARD DECIDED TO CONSULT WITH THE SUPERINTENDENT OF THE CITY CEMETERY some of the graves, and to fix the price on some new lots in the cemetery.

A. J. Croly suggested to the board that it extend an invitation to King Kalakaua to visit Sacramento. The board declined to do so at the expense of the Board of Trustees. He said the Masonic order would in all probability entertain him for a time.

Trustee McLaughlin said he was opposed to the city's allowing any of its funds to be expended on the King. If he came here he ought to pay his own bills.

The other members of the board felt inclined the same way and no action was taken.

The board adjourned after allowing a number of claims.

AMUSEMENTS.

Russell's Comedians will appear at the Metropolitan Theater Friday and Saturday evenings next. The leaders in the combination are the brilliant comedienne, and widely-known vaudeville actress, Fay Templeton, and the old-time favorite and thoroughly capable man, Charley Reed. The piece—a farce comedy—in which they will appear is entitled "Miss McGinty of the Comedie Francaise." It is said of the piece that it is the climax of farceful fun, in which every line creates laughter, and every situation a paroxysm of convulsion of mirth. In the company there are twenty people, all of metropolitan reputation. The company is a very attractive one, and so much so that no engagements will be written for it on this coast except for Sacramento and San Francisco. A dispatch from Sunday from Sacramento says that the RECORD-UNION success there have been no such large throngs of people in the theaters of Cincinnati as have crowded in to see "Miss McGinty." The company, it is added, played in that city for a week, and the business done was the largest on record. It is said that several times on the last night the action of the play had to be interrupted to give the audience opportunity to give their manifestation of approval. At the conclusion there was a presentation of floral pieces and an informal reception on the stage, large numbers of people going forward to congratulate the actors. The company will play Cincinnati Sunday night in special cars direct for Sacramento. The box sheet opens at the Metropolitan Thursday morning.

A large number of ladies called on St. Paul's Church, began an entertainment at the Clunie Opera House to-night, entitled "The Fete of Nations." Every night this week there will be a change of programme. The parquet has been floored over level with the stage and prepared for dancing. The entertainment will consist of a take part, mainly young women. Miss Kewen's drill corps of thirty is to take part; there are to be fine scenic effects, night, Greek story, a temple of Flora, dances of all nations, instrumental and vocal music, selections from English operas, tableaux vivants and characteristic melodies, a concert of a section with a score of children in fancy costumes, Columbia receiving the nations, exercises in the dramatic system of South and last night, Saturday, a grand masked ball. Among other features a chess game with living "pieces" to be played. It will be a complete reproduction of the game played at the Royal Concert Hall, St. Leonards, London, last week, and which the latest reports to have been a great success. The Opera House has been decorated and made every way comfortable for the week. The ladies have been at work upon this affair for a long time, and have gone to great expense to make it the most successful affair of the kind ever given here. Nearly the same management that produced the "Carnival of Nations" at Armory Hall two years ago, with such joyful success, is in charge on this occasion. Seats can be reserved at the Opera House from and after 9 o'clock this morning. It is announced that Governor Markham presiding party very expressed the intention to be present this evening.

At the Congregational Church next Tuesday evening, the Swedish Ladies' Octette will appear for the benefit of the Good Templars' Home for Orphans. Melvin R. Day, a Boston humorist, endorsed by the Record-Union press warily, will also appear. The concert of the Octette are highly commended by the press where the troupe has appeared. The company is now on route from the East, to appear at the Baldwin Theater, San Francisco, but has been secured for one night here first. The St. Paul News declares that the Octette are one of "Swedish nightingales," and the Chicago Evening Journal says of the Stockholm singers that they are puppets of a great and charming character by superior finish, while the voices of the singers are of phenomenal range, from high soprano to an alto that is heard in quality. The tickets for the entertainment have been placed at 50 cents, which is but a third of the charge that will be made for dress circle seats when the troupe appears at the Baldwin Theater, San Francisco.

The Sacramento Lecture Association had a very large audience at the Congregational Church last night. Miss Lida Low is a pleasing pianist, with a delicate touch and manifest feeling in interpreting the score before her. Nella Brown-Pond is a good dramatic reader. She is a woman of fine presence, is very graceful, and has a charming voice, a genuine womanly voice, soft, yet strong, nicely modulated, yet resonant. She reads with great variety, and her grand old plays are notably superior. In pathos she is less successful than in descriptive and comedy efforts. She has the wisdom to introduce the piano in quality. Her recitations and intoning to the accompaniment of the piano were as neat effects as any that could be wished for.

The "U and P" Company had a good house at the Metropolitan Theater last night. The audience was apparently well pleased with the farce comedy.
