

LAMBERT'S LETTER.

Our Correspondent's Views of Mr. Cleveland's Chances.

What He Thinks about the Prospects of the two Great Parties—Theosophy Made Clear—Some Interesting Scraps of Ancient History.

(Special correspondence of the RECORD-UNION) WASHINGTON, Feb. 14, 1891. During the debate on the silver bill in the United States Senate, the hostile attitude of President Harrison was often referred to derisively by the Democratic Senators.

This onslaught was as frequently met by the Republican Senators and successfully repelled in kind. The latter had simply to recall ex-President Cleveland's famous Warner letter in 1885, advising a suspension of the coinage of the silver dollar.

It was before he took his seat as President of the United States. It meant substantially the repeal of the so-called Bland bill, and his opposition would have demoralized silver. They also returned with equal force to his subsequent bitter enmity to silver, even extending up to the end of his term of office. But for the determined action of Senator Reagan, who was a member of the House at that time, Mr. Cleveland's policy would have been adopted. It was the first time a President had been elected in a quarter of a century by the Democratic party, and they had counted upon a grand reversion to the President of their political faith occupied a position of omnipotent power and had to be honored and obeyed. The Senator—then Representative—Reagan, encouraged by the late Senator Beck of Kentucky, got a remonstrance signed by over 100 members of the House protesting against his autocratic assumption of power, and Mr. Cleveland thereupon received his first setback. Hence, the Republican Senators were fully equipped and repulsed their opponents at every encounter.

During that exciting forensic contest Mr. Vest of Missouri, in a brilliant oration stated that, since that period, and in view of the greater knowledge Mr. Cleveland had obtained upon the silver question, his views were greatly modified, if not wholly changed.

Since Mr. Vest made those remarks it has been very generally accepted that Cleveland's policy would have been modified to a great extent by the sentiment of his party, but more particularly to the unanimous opinion of the House of Representatives in the South, where Mr. Cleveland looks solely for Presidential support.

OF WHAT A FALL! There has been nothing to agitate the political cauldron here since Governor Hill was elected Senator from New York until ex-President Cleveland sent that last letter announcing his opposition to the silver question. He has not only said the word "reckless" is supplied with a "string" and offers him a way to pull out by subsequent explanation. Other letters, however, that he goes back on Vest and his party in order to secure to himself some political following of his own in New York, and in having it begrudgingly doled out by Governor Hill—if he does it out at all in that direction. It is exceedingly problematical to-day whether the President will ever have any further use for votes of any kind. In private conversation with many Democrats from the North, as well as the South, the consensus of opinion seems to indicate that Mr. Cleveland has unwittingly committed another political suicide, no matter how he attempts to dodge by subsequent explanatory letters.

It is said and generally believed that when any of our statesmen get what is called "the Presidential bug" in their bones, they become "rattled." When Mr. Cleveland first ran for President before the people he had no idea that he had the ghost of a chance against Blair and Grant, and that they were to campaign with average equality. Since his late defeat, and subsequent candidacy in which he feels he will be simply a stand-off, and the old fight of last fall may retire silver to the rear. If both nominate pro-silver men, it is a party matter, and the party will try to get on top of it to ride them in the mud. These criticisms of his mediocrity among the Democratic leaders worries him, and he seeks an "he-says" to be determined to offset that impression among the people by periodically promulgating some ridiculous thing in order to draw the attention of the masses that he is a great leader of fearless opinions and character.

His free trade message in 1888, his pension bill in 1890, and his reckless letter campaign last year, have made him a sensation, and he is not a thinker. He said nothing, and relied on perfect quiet and the fortunate forces which put him where he was, it is reasonably safe to say he would have been the occupant of the White House to-day.

This wouldn't satisfy him. He apparently retains the story book tales about the ghost of a chance against Blair and Grant, when the reverse is nearer the truth. THE LOGIC OF THE SITUATION. If both parties nominate anti-free coinage men, the silver issue will be simply a stand-off, and the old fight of last fall may retire silver to the rear. If both nominate pro-silver men, it is a party matter, and the party will try to get on top of it to ride them in the mud. These criticisms of his mediocrity among the Democratic leaders worries him, and he seeks an "he-says" to be determined to offset that impression among the people by periodically promulgating some ridiculous thing in order to draw the attention of the masses that he is a great leader of fearless opinions and character.

From a present unbiased observation, for I have no reason whatever to care whether silver is free or enslaved, I am constrained to entertain the opinion, after private and public consideration, that the best chance for the majority class in both parties radically believe in free coinage to-day. I predict that one year hence, however much we may honestly differ about our treatment of the silver elephant, that the national conventions of the two great parties will embrace in their respective platforms resolutions favorable to the free coinage of American silver, and the one which "resolves" the strongest will secure the popular vote.

These last weeks have been the liveliest in the history of the country, and it is still boiling over. THEOLOGICAL MADE EASY. In September, 1876, M. Blavatsky and Colonel Olcott founded what they called a Theosophical Society in New York. Within the past few years it has grown to a large portion of the United States and Europe.

"The Catholic University of America" is located a few miles from the city of Washington. Every Wednesday afternoon is devoted to an erudite lecture by some one of the faculty, and they are largely attended by the scholarly men and women of the country, many of whom do not accept that spiritual belief. This week's lecture embraced the question, "What is Theosophy?" by Merwin Marie Snell, who devoted himself an hour and a half to an account of its origin, history and characteristic features. The lecturer was a very able and intelligent man, and his lecture was a very interesting and profitable one. He had Dan Lambert written the letter for that meeting in his own way, with the earnest support the Solid South would have brought to his cause in the next National Democratic Convention. Governor Hill and his delegates would be obliged to succumb to their wishes even if Mr. Cleveland failed to get one delegate from New York State. Now that he has written this "reckless" silver letter he can hardly expect one delegate from any of the Southern States, and he is practically out of the race. From the way the Southern supporters talk to-day, to me he is politically dead.

This premature demise, however, must not be counted for Governor Hill. He is every opponent to silver, and he would be recollected, rudely refused to send a delegate from New York to the St. Louis Silver Convention last fall. Gorman of Maryland is the man at this present writing.

Many say that this sudden eclipse of Grover is not disappointing to them; that they are opposed to silver, and that action he would have made some other equally fatal mistake, because it is so far off and because he is wading too deep in the mire. Mr. Hill, Gray of Indiana, Morrison, Gorman and other prominent men now mentioned.

RECUPERATIVE FORCES. In all the Congressional interviews and newspaper opinions which have occupied so much space during the past week since Mr. Cleveland's "reckless" silver coinage letter, the anti-free coinage men and party supporters of that gentleman have been adroitly hedging. They assert that his letter shows "courage in his convictions," a spirit indicating that he would rather be right than be President, and the sentiments were "outspoken and honest," and many more of those old-time doleful platitudes.

That is doubtless a very adroit way of reaching the old-fashioned partisan of the buccle "deestricks," but it won't go. Every one who recalls the time when Scott of Pennsylvania and Cleveland's mouthpiece on the floor of the House of Representatives of that Congress, introduced the Chinese Exclusion Act, which was understood either to have originated in or was the authorized sentiment of the President at that time, and they had counted upon a grand reversion to the President of their political faith occupied a position of omnipotent power and had to be honored and obeyed. The Senator—then Representative—Reagan, encouraged by the late Senator Beck of Kentucky, got a remonstrance signed by over 100 members of the House protesting against his autocratic assumption of power, and Mr. Cleveland thereupon received his first setback. Capay Valley Lands.

A CAPAY COLONY. Negotiations were opened with the Capay Valley Land Company, owning the tract in question. With W. H. Mills, the General Agent of that company, they arranged for the purchase of about 320 acres of foothill land. This being more than they had thought of taking for their own use, they spoke to a number of friends about it, with the result that the tract was divided among the following people: B. L. Hickok, 40 acres; W. T. Barnett, 20 acres; N. T. Greatheld, 20 acres; Mrs. L. Greatheld, 20 acres; W. McKay, 20 acres; N. D. Barker, 20 acres; R. A. Barker, 20 acres; J. P. Brownie, 20 acres; E. H. Haslett, 10 acres; Joseph Barker, 10 acres; A. W. Kelly, 10 acres, and Frederick Kelly, 10 acres.

So far this had been merely a private venture of the gentlemen above named, but in talking up the question of dividing the land already purchased, it was found that so many more would like to join it than the purchase would admit of, that it was suggested on the part of the company that some more land and divide it up as a "new" tract. Then followed the idea of a company to take hold of a larger tract and arrange for the cultivation of the whole of it, after subdividing it according to the requirements of the subscribers. A provisional board was formed, a prospectus issued, and finally, on the 5th of June, 1890, the Western Co-operative Colonization and Improvement Company was duly registered and proceeded to business, with the following officers: President, William McKay; Vice-President, M. P. Brown; Director, C. C. Brown, and Brookline and R. A. Barker; Secretary and General Manager, Neal D. Barker; Solicitor, C. E. Snook; Treasurer, First National Bank of Oakland.

The balance of the tract, 373 acres, was purchased. A contract was entered into for the purchase of a large number of fruit trees, vines, etc. This early purchase of trees was the most successful of the year, and cost $14,000 to the company, the price in some cases having more than doubled since then. The ideas which the prospectus set forth have been but slightly modified and the progress of the company has not been interrupted. Those who went into it doubtfully have become enthusiastic, and almost all the members arranged to set out all their land in fruit trees, etc. The first year, consequently in this, the first season, some 40,000 vines, between 20,000 and 30,000 vines will be planted.

The satisfactory working of this scheme has had the effect of attracting considerable attention to the work of the Colony Company, and a number of people are now desirous of joining in with them. An additional 200 acres has been added to the sixty acres originally purchased.

For the company is predicted a very bright future, as well as for the beautiful valley in which their operations are conducted. How this marvelous little garden has come to be so long neglected is a puzzle. It has never been visited it, but one thing is very sure, and that is that this neglect will never again be felt in the valley.

The tract which is mostly of the standard varieties—peaches, apricots, Bartlett pears, prunes, figs, raisin grapes, etc., while along both sides of the avenues, throughout the tract, walnuts will throw their graceful shade. A considerable number of citrus trees are being set out; quite a sufficient number to demonstrate that these fruits can be successfully grown in the valley, about which the colonists appear to have no doubt, provided proper care be taken of the same.

Resides on the tract, and to his care is to be entrusted much of the success of the venture. Mention should be made of the town-site, about which there is a pleasant innovation which might with profit be followed by more ambitious plans. A small park of some three acres has been laid out. Right in the center of the town, there is a pleasant innovation by planting in it from time to time many of the beauties and curiosities of tree and shrub life as may be obtained by diligent care. This is a very wise expenditure of money. It is not expected that the tract will ever be a large and busy city, but it is thought that it can be made a very pleasant little place to dwell in.

A petition has been circulated recently and very largely signed, asking the county to accept Island avenue, on the colony tract, as a county road, and to build a bridge across Cache Creek at this point, in order to give the settlers on the east side of the creek access to the Tancred Station. The Tancred creek is a quiet little stream, and it is thought that it would be a very wise expenditure of public money to grant them this very necessary improvement, as the operations of such companies are of wide-spread benefit to the whole county and State. The attractions and efforts of the cities are well known, but to those who are willing to settle on the land and show that the country also affords attractions and comforts and ways of making money pleasantly, every inducement should be held forth.

The following is a list of the principal members of the Tancred Colony, with the number of acres owned by each, and a fact worthy of mention is that in each tract or deed issued by the Colony Company there is a provision that no intoxicating liquor shall ever be manufactured or sold on the land. The apparent success of the enterprise shows that the ideas and plans of the colony, as set forth in the prospectus some time ago, are not impracticable. C. T. Hill, Berkeley, 5 acres; W. P. Hammon, Oakland, 5 acres; C. S. Kason, San Francisco, 11 acres; Jos. Barker, 10 acres; A. W. Kelly, Kincardine, 10 acres; N. T. Greatheld, 5 acres; R. G. Greatheld, Oakland, 10 acres; R. A. Barker, San Francisco, 5 acres; M. A. Barker, 10 acres; W. T. Greatheld, Berkeley, 20 acres; Mrs. T. A. Crellin, Oakland, 5 acres; A. E. Peach, Tancred, 5 acres; H. C. Ellis, Oakland, 10 acres; J. WATERBURY'S Sarsaparilla. Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard. When you decide to take Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced by some substitute preparation, which clerks may claim is "as good as" the original. The peculiar merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla cannot be equalled. Therefore, insist upon Hood's Sarsaparilla.
