

DAILY RECORD-UNION

THURSDAY, MARCH 5, 1891

ISSUED BY THE SACRAMENTO PUBLISHING COMPANY

Office, Third Street, between J and K THE SENATORIAL CONTEST.

In pursuing many rumors concerning the position of corporations and persons in the current Senatorial contest, we encounter with great frequency assurances on the part of the friends of candidates, persons in the lobby and citizens generally, that the Southern Pacific Company is for or against certain candidates whose names are given. We wish to state once and for all, and upon the best authority, that the Southern Pacific Company has no candidate for the office of United States Senator, and we hold such authentication of this assertion as will put to shame any man who contravenes it. Collis P. Huntington, the President of the Southern Pacific Company, has declared that the corporation will not take part in political contests in the State of California—that the company is not a factor in any political contest whatever. He has also stated in a most authoritative way that in the pending Senatorial contest the company will take no part, and that no one authorized to speak for it will be authorized to exert on its behalf or in its name the slightest influence to compass the election of any candidate, or compass the defeat of any. Any statement therefore made from any source that the company desires the defeat of a candidate and intends to compass that result, or desires the election of any individual candidate and intends to promote that result, will be wholly gratuitous. This statement is made in the most perfect candor and will be verified to the fullest extent. The preferences of the railroad company is usually made one of the pieces on the chess-board of political manipulation. If it is placed there in the current instance, it will be by people who are not authorized to speak for it, or give it position. We have assurances from the very best authority, and are amply able to make those assurances good in a manner so unmistakable as to leave no doubt of their perfect candor, that there is no pretense and no insincerity in the determination of the President of the Southern Pacific Company to eliminate that corporation as a factor from the politics of California. If any have other information, they may rest assured of its complete unreliability. There are many rumors coupling the names of candidates with practices in this connection as black as treason to human liberty. The corruption of a member of a Legislature under democratic institutions is a conspiracy against the perpetuation of civil liberty and an obstacle to progress in that direction worse than any treason ever attempted, and more insidious and dangerous in its effects than all the opposition which imperialism has brought to bear. The man who has purchased the vote of a member of the Legislature, or the man who has sold his vote, may deem themselves respectable citizens, but their respectability is maintained only by concealment of their conduct. They are respectable only because they have been pursuing a course of undetected crime; and there is no difference whatever between the moral quality of him who buys and him who sells this species of sin. Nor will the people of this country long tolerate practices of this character. For the past twenty-five years, corruption in high places has augmented until the very verge of public patience has been reached. The great canons of thought on the subject of official purity have not, however, changed. Those elements of virtue in national existence upon which this country must depend for the perpetuity of its institutions, the preservation of civil liberty and the progress of civilization among mankind, have not been debauched or prostituted. The masses of men who do not enter the political arena to engage in the struggle for the spoils of office, or the empty honor of political distinction, abstain chiefly because they are indifferent to the political course of the country so long as it is kept within a certain limit of reasonably good government. But if the office of United States Senator in the present instance, or any future instance, is to be placed at auction, we believe it to be the full determination of the people of California to prevent the successful bidder from enjoying the fruits of his crime. That result can be very easily accomplished, because exposure will be certain. There is no idle bravado, nor meaningless threat in these expressions. We are rejoiced to know that they are justified by unmistakable indications of which we have ample evidence.

THE FISH COMMISSION. The proposed destruction of the Fish Commission would be, if carried out, calamitous to the State. Our food fishes will cease to run in the rivers, unless through the medium of a distinct agency such as the commission, their extermination is defeated by controlling the piratical fishermen at the mouths of the rivers, checking the rapacity of the canners, and by restocking the lakes and streams with small fry and eyed eggs, the latter being furnished in most part by the United States Government free of cost to the State. The commission in the past has been the subject of severe criticism, but it has had its source in the antagonism of the commercial fishermen and the canners, whom the commission in State interests have run counter to. The demand for the abolition of the commission has its spring in the same quarter from which emanated the proposition to maintain a closed season which the Federal Commission declares will work the extinction of the salmon in the rivers of the State. It is significant that the up-river fishermen, who fish for the markets, and who are tax-payers and property owners, and citizens having the interests of the State at heart, favor retention of the commission and the establishment of the closed season recommended by the commissions, Federal and State. On the other hand, the alien fishermen in the mouths of the rivers, and who fish for the canners and are wholly unconcerned about the future of our fisheries, are solicitous to have the commission abolished and the closed season so dated that their personal interests will be concerned irrespective of the outcome of a policy that will prevent the salmon from reaching the spawning grounds.

RETAIN THE BOARDS. The proposed abolition of the Horticultural and Viticultural Commissions has not been effected as yet, nor should it be. Both of these boards represent interests upon which, in largest part, the prosperity of this State and the attainment of its fullest possibilities are dependent. These interests should, therefore, have the supervisory and advisory assistance of boards chosen because of the special fitness of their members for such trusts. They should be independent bodies, and have such assistance from the State as will enable them to do the greatest possible good in advancing horticultural and viticultural industries. To consolidate the boards with the State Board of Agriculture will be to impose upon that body duties for which it is not specially chosen. It will also impose upon the Secretary of that association burdens that he cannot possibly bear, without very much clerical assistance rendered by men technically familiar with horticulture and viticulture in all their scientific and practical phases. This would amount, therefore, to the same thing as continuing the executive officers of the two boards, and hence nothing would be gained by the consolidation.

The Horticultural and Viticultural Boards hold frequent meetings, open to the public, where all the scientific, historical, discovery, economic and other questions involved in the industries are debated and reported. The literature of information thus produced is of inestimable value to the whole State. Does any one suppose that the State Board of Agriculture can or will engage in any such work? It meets infrequently, and its sessions are wholly occupied, and must continue to be, by weighty affairs related to the management of the State's annual exposition. In whatever light the matter is viewed, it is seen that the suggested consolidation would amount to the practical abolition of the special work in which the State has so long and profitably been engaged through the agency of the two boards named.

There appears to be difficulty in getting the Senate bill the Fish Commission recommended to a closed season for salmon, before the Assembly. It looks as if the committee having it in charge proposes to keep it until the session closes. That is one way by which to defeat a measure, to be sure, but that is a mean and underhanded method is also true. More than that, it smacks of dishonest purpose. If the committee is favorable to the bill, it is its duty to report it; if it is opposed to the bill to the bill, it is still its duty to report it and, if it chooses, to give its reasons for disfavor. But to smother the bill in committee is to cheat the House of its right to have the measure passed upon by the representatives of the people and that is neither fair nor honest despite the fact that it is much practiced. The bill passed the Senate without a dissenting voice and yet the Chairman of the Assembly Committee on Fish and Game has so far refused to report the bill back to the Assembly. Some member who has the interest of the people at heart should demand that the bill be reported back at once and put upon its passage.

The Woman's National Council, at the recent session of that body, passed resolutions memorializing the Federal Government for equal wages for its employees for equal work, regardless of sex. That would be simple justice. If a woman does the same work that a competent man in the same position would do, she ought not to be discriminated against in the matter of wages. This position the Record-Union has never doubted. What it has contended, however, is that women are crowding into the vocations of men to such an extent as to destroy, to greater or less extent, the domestic taste that in woman is natural, and that should be sedulously cultivated; that the result of such crowding is to displace a large body of men who by reason of such displacement, do not incline to matrimony, and in whom is bred a taste antagonistic to domesticity; that, therefore, it is wise to discourage the general drift of women into business employments.

CONGRESS has wisely exempted Hawaiian trade from the operation of that enormous blunder, the McKinley bill. This action will save us the trade of the Islands. It should confirm and extend also the reciprocal relations established by the treaty. The bill to make the office of Superintendent of State Printing an elective one is probably by this time a law. It is a wise measure and will have a tendency to remove from State politics an influence not wholesome to economic government. By the passage of an appropriate bill, "Hokey-pokey" is now to take its place among prohibited games. It should have been thus classified long ago.

NOTE AND COMMENT. The Citigraph, published at Redlands, now has a "city editor." We presume the daily "detail sheet" must be as large as one of Dibble's samples of the reform ballot, in order to hold the list of "details" and the names of all the reporters. Steamer Delayed. The steamer Modoc did not arrive at her landing yesterday until about 10 o'clock. She had several thousand sacks of wheat to discharge, and did not start on the return trip until late in the afternoon. BECHAN'S Pills cure sick headache.

BALLOT BILL PLEDGES

A Correspondent Takes to Task the Signers of the Ballot Pledge. Eds. RECORD-UNION: It is now seriously stated that several members of the Assembly intend to violate their specific, written, pre-election pledges, by voting against the ballot law recently passed by the Senate. It is hard to believe that any man possessing ordinary common sense, however devoid of moral character, can be induced to place himself before the world in the attitude of a deliberate violator of his word of honor, especially when it is specifically pledged, in writing, over his own signature. A politician may commit almost any other crime in the calendar of iniquity and still hope for some measure of political success; but the pledge-breaker, the man whose word cannot be relied upon, is always and everywhere an object of universal abhorrence and suspicion. Those whom he serves by his breach of faith may applaud the service, but it is not in human nature for them to afterwards trust the deliberate betrayer of his word of honor. "To-day he serves me by betraying another, to-morrow he may serve another by betraying me; I'll use him, says, but trust him, never!" and so it goes. A philosophical truth as universally recognized and acted upon to-day as when those words were penned. Some of these gentlemen claim that the pledge which they signed was unwise, and that they have since repented of having signed it. It was not, and is not, thought unwise by those to whom it was given, and who, upon the faith which they placed in the honor of the men who gave it, assisted in electing them to the very offices which they now threaten to use for the purpose of defeating the object of the pledge. They should have considered the wisdom of the measure before election, and by repudiating it, they have tested the sentiment of their constituents in many places, as Mr. Dibble tested the sentiment of his district. Would Mr. Dibble break or evade his pledge which he now asks his colleagues to squirm out of? No, he is too shrewd a man. He knows too well the value of fidelity to promises among men. He knows too well the inflexible rule of outlaws which, in all parties and in all countries, is the lot of the politician who deliberately breaks, or technically evades, his promise. Some, it is said, claim that they expected to secure Democratic votes by giving the pledge, and that, as they did not receive them they should not be held to the pledge. Nonsense! They gave the pledge in order to prevent the Republicans who belonged to the majority of the Assembly and Grangers from voting for Democratic candidates who were already pledged to the measure. It is said that some will seek to accomplish the defeat of the bill without directly voting against it, by absenting themselves. As they promised to work and vote for the measure, it is difficult to appreciate the difference between voting against the bill and dodging the vote. I cannot yet believe that any man who signed the pledge will fail to keep it. JAMES G. MADDIRE, Sacramento, March 4, 1891.

Baseball News. Catcher Spies of the Sacramento club has arrived here, and Works and France are the only men Captain McLoskey is waiting for. It is stated that Ed Stapleton is making an effort to secure the appointment of umpire for the California League. Stapleton is well posted on baseball law, and would undoubtedly make a good referee.
