Judge Catlin Deals Summarily With Those Who Disobey.

Interpreter Grondona Adjudged Guilty of Contempt—He Tells Why He Ran Away.

Superior Judge Catlin is fast creating the impression that there is more truth than poetry in the popular saying that it doesn't do to "monkey with the buzz-saw"—at least, in so far as the term may be applied to the disobedience of court orders.

Numerous recalcitrants have found this out rather forcibly to date—particularly Carpenter, the Stockton attorney, and Vance, Carpenter's client, who have been languishing in a dungeon cell at the County Jail, for disobeying an injunction of the court.

But the latest individual to get into trouble—and have cause to be repentant—is N. Grondona, the Italian interpreter. Several weeks ago, before the Frediani murder case was commenced before Judge Catlin, Grondona was served with a subpoena to be in court and act as official interpreter.

When the case was called on the 27th of January, Grondona was on hand with the other witnesses served. A continuance of the case was granted, however, but before the witnesses were allowed to depart, they, including Grondona, were duly recognized to appear in court the following week.

The other witnesses appeared but Grondona didn't. An attachment was issued for the interpreter and the Sheriff and his deputies went in search of him. They hunted high and low, but could not find him.

His parents and brothers denied all knowledge of his whereabouts. Last week, however, as stated in the RECORD-UNION, the elusive interpreter was overhauled by Deputy Sheriff White and brought to the county jail.

Yesterday Grondona was taken before Judge Catlin. District Attorney Ryan stated that Grondona had been duly served with summons, and had no right to absent himself from court. He understood, however, that the interpreter had an excuse to offer.

Grondona then took the witness-stand. He acknowledged being subpoenaed, but said that he subsequently went to Mr. Buckley, the District Attorney, and asked to be excused from serving on the ground of being sick. Mr. Buckley, he said, consented, and he departed immediately to the mountains for his health.

Besides being sick, he was afraid to be mixed up in the case. He was afraid of his countrymen—those of them that were friends of Frediani and he had been threatened with violence if he showed any further interest in the case. Taking all these things into consideration, he thought the best thing he could do was to get out of the way until the trial was over.

Judge Catlin wanted to know who the persons were who had threatened him, but Grondona could not at that time remember any of their names. The judge then said that the excuses of sickness and being threatened were not good. If Grondona was well enough to travel a long distance from Sacramento, he was certainly well enough to come to the court-house, and make his excuse to the court. He should also have come directly to the court when threatened, and the persons who had threatened him would have been summarily dealt with.

But regarding the plea that Mr. Buckley had excused him, the judge said he was in doubt, and would like to hear from Mr. Buckley.

Mr. Buckley took the witness stand and denied that he had ever excused Grondona from appearing in court. He would not dare to assume that authority, he said. Grondona had asked not to be put on the witness stand, but had said nothing about wanting to be excused from acting as interpreter.

Martin Devine, clerk in the District Attorney's office, and who was present during the conversation between Grondona and Mr. Buckley corroborated the latter's statement.

This was all the testimony offered, and Judge Catlin said that it was apparent to him that Grondona did willfully and intentionally disobey the process of the court, and was guilty of contempt. But before pronouncing judgment, he said he would give the interpreter a chance to help himself out of the difficulty, by giving the names of the persons who had threatened to do him harm if he appeared in court.

After considerable hesitation Grondona gave the names of John Bianchini (one of the principal witnesses for the prosecution at the trial), a shoemaker named Casselli and S. Carl. The last-named individual, said that he did not threaten him until after his return from the mountains. He had accused the interpreter of being responsible for the large number of witnesses who appeared for the prosecution at the trial, and abused him shamefully.

Judge Catlin ordered attachments to issue immediately for Bianchini, Casselli and Carl, and ordered the Sheriff to take them in court at 1:30 o'clock. In the afternoon, however, the Sheriff reported that he had been unable to find any of the men named. He had found a man named Fava, however, who is alleged to have heard Carl threatening Grondona after the latter's return from the mountains. The court was not satisfied with this showing, and, after ordering the Sheriff to make another search, postponed further hearing until this morning. Grondona will also be sentenced this morning.

cause when the California managers were signing their men, they thought he was secured by Sacramento, and he thought so himself; but Manager Ginsberg afterwards changed his mind, though not until the four league teams had almost been made up.

Everybody who has seen Bowman, Reitz and Roberts play ball, knows they are too good players to be idle for any length of time. The chances are that they will be found in some of the league clubs before a month of the season is over. Bowman and Roberts may play in the International League.

THE LYMPH IS HERE The First Bottle of Dr. Koch's Famous Discovery Arrives. Sacramento may be behind the times as regards improvements in buildings and streets, but she is now "in the swim" with all the other great cities of the world in another line.

A bottle of the genuine Koch lymph is in town. Yes, it's a fact. Dr. Bruns received last night a registered package containing a one-quarter ounce bottle of the famous Tuberculinum Kochi—which in plain every-day vernacular means Koch's lymph. The precious package was forwarded to Doctor Dr. A. Libbert, Dr. Koch's first assistant.

Dr. Bruns exhibited the lymph to the Record-Union corps last night. It is the first test in Sacramento. This doctor says he will begin a series of experiments with the lymph immediately.

The Signal Service reports at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon show the barometer to be low in Washington and Oregon and comparatively high in this portion (Sacramento) of California. The precipitation for the twelve hours ending at 5 p. m. was for Portland 1.4 inch, Roseburg, 30, Red Bluff, 0.4, and Eureka, 52 of an inch. The above reports show that the greatest precipitation is along the coast and the least in the interior. The temperature has warmed up considerably in the last twenty-four hours.

Democratic Caucus. The Democrats of both branches of the Legislature held a caucus last night on the Senatorial election. All that could be learned was that the caucus decided to vote on alternate days for Senator Crocker and ex-Senator James V. Coleman—assuming that it will take at least three days to elect a Senator.

TO-DAY'S ELECTION. It Promises to Be Lively, and a Large Vote is Expected. William B. Miller and Frank Rubinstaller Deny That They Have Promised Appointments.

The choice of the people of Sacramento City for Third Trustee, Auditor, Assessor, Collector, and long and short term Fire Commissioners will be determined to-day. The polls will open at sunrise and close at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and it is probable that a very large vote will be polled. Great interest is being manifested in the contests of the different candidates, and no doubt the "workers" will be on hand in large numbers.

VOTING PLACES. The city has been divided into fifteen precincts—four in the First Supervisor District, five in the Second and six in the Third. The polling places are arranged as follows:

First District, Precinct 1—North of K and west of Fourth street. Polls at No. 305 J street. Precinct 2—North of K, between Fourth and Seventh streets. Polls at 608 I street. Precinct 3—North of K, between Seventh and Ninth streets. Polls at 918 Ninth street. Precinct 4—North of K, between Ninth and Twelfth streets. Polls at 1099 J street.

Second District, Precinct 1—Between K and O, and Third street. Polls, 1129 Second street. Precinct 2—Between K and O, and west of Third and Fifth streets. Polls, Fourth, between K and I streets. Precinct 3—Between K and N, and Fifth and Seventh, and K and Y, and Seventh and Eighth streets. Polls, Sixth and L streets, and Y street. Precinct 4—Between K and Y, Eighth and Tenth streets. Polls, Ninth and K, Rose's shop. Precinct 5—Between O and Y, west of Third and Fifth streets. Polls, north-west corner of Sixth and O streets.

Third District, Precinct 1—North of G, between G and H streets, and the eastern boundary of Agricultural Park, take in all the park south to H street. Polls corner of Twentieth and G streets. Precinct 2—Between G and K and Twelfth and Seventeenth streets. Polls, 1601 J street. Precinct 3—Between G and K and Seventh and Tenth streets, and north of K and east of Twenty-first street and Agricultural Park. Polls, Eighteenth and J streets. Precinct 4—Between K and O and Tenth and Twelfth streets. Polls, Fifteenth and N streets, New Park. Precinct 5—Between K and O and Seventeenth and Thirty-first streets. Polls, Twentieth and O streets (east corner). Precinct 6—Between O and Tenth and Thirty-first streets. Polls, Northwest corner Eleventh and P streets.

SOME DENIALS. The opponents of William B. Miller, the Republican candidate for Fire Commissioner, have circulated a rumor that he has pledged himself to a certain candidate for Chief Engineer. To this report Mr. Miller enters a most emphatic denial and all who know him will accept his statement without hesitation. He has never been at the office of the Fire Commissioner, and he has never gone into any convention, pledged, or elected will take office perfectly free to act as his best judgment shall dictate.

Robert Hawley, candidate for City Assessor, also has a denial to make, with reference to rumors that have been circulated to the effect that he is in favor of raising the assessment roll. He says he is opposed to raising the roll as long as the city debt is in its present condition.

JOHN EITEL. The Veteran Chemist, Metallurgist and Scientist, is Dead. John Eitel, an old-time and well-known citizen of Sacramento, died yesterday. Mr. Eitel was an analytical chemist and a practical metallurgist. He was a very prominent contributor to the press of the city in the line of scientific and public improvements and progress.

Mr. Eitel's ideas were always advanced in favor of public elevation and municipal improvement. He was well known and respected by his fellow-citizens.

TRIFLE TOO RADICAL.

The Improvement Association's Ideas Before the Trustees.

A Sidewalk and Awning Inspector—Ponderous Thought—The "Green" Member.

The Executive Committee of the Improvement Association met last evening at 614 I street, President C. A. Luhrs in the chair. Secretary Hughes reported to the committee that the sub-committee appointed to confer with the City Trustees regarding the proposition of the Improvement Association to have all wooden awnings and sidewalks in the business districts removed within two months, had had a conference as directed. The trustees, however, thought the association's ideas a little too radical, and suggested that an ordinance be drawn up and submitted, whereby only adjustable and iron awnings would be allowed.

R. D. Stephens thought it would be a good idea to accept the situation and prevail upon the Trustees to pass such an ordinance as suggested. Mr. Stephens made a motion that a committee be appointed to attend to the matter, and it was carried. The committee appointed consisted of Messrs. Weinstein, Irwin, Luhrs and Hughes.

GRANITE PAVEMENTS. Mr. Stephens called attention to an item he had seen in the newspapers recently regarding a new-style granite pavement that was spoken of very highly of. Chairman Luhrs said he knew all about the pavement. It was composed of broken granite, and was used throughout the East and in Europe. There were several streets paved with it in Oakland, too. It made a magnificent street, and was twice as good as gravel—but cost twice as much.

The cost proposition settled it. Another subject was taken up. S. Carrington stated that some time in October last he had been appointed a committee of one to look into the matter of reducing the expenses of street surveying. After investigation, however, he discovered that instead of needing a reduction, the City Surveyor's department was not large enough to keep up with the work it was called upon to do. He had also been appointed a committee to look into the matter of extending Twenty-first street to the levee, thus giving another outlet to the city. He found that more street work had been ordered than the contractors could attend to, so he let that matter drop, too.

A "GREEN" MEMBER. J. B. Gilbert, who admitted that he was rather "green" as a member of the association, caused some humorous debate by suggesting that a sidewalk and awning inspector should be appointed from the association by the Trustees. He also wanted to know if the association had any authority or power. He was informed that in so far as authority was concerned the association was a nonentity, but when it came to influence it was a "daisy." The Trustees, Supervisors, and in fact, all city and county officers looked to the association for advice—but that was all it amounted to. But in regard to a sidewalk and awning inspector, Chairman Luhrs informed Mr. Gilbert that the city was already provided with one of those useful articles.

Mr. Gilbert looked surprised. So did some of the other members who were not "green." But when Mr. Gilbert recovered his breath he said he thought the report should not be taken too seriously. He suggested that a number of strings attached to him, and should be selected from the Improvement Association.

BRILLIANT SCHEME. Mr. Carrington then evolved a deep, dark plot. Instead of going to the trouble of having the present inspector "fired," a committee would be organized with the duty of inveigling him into becoming a member of the association—then Mr. Gilbert's idea would be carried out. After some desultory talk on unimportant topics, the Chairman announced that he had appointed the following standing committees: Police, Fire, and Waterworks; Buildings and Obstructions; Sidewalks, T. W. Huntington; Disposition of Garbage and Filling in of Low Lands, E. Carrington; Amusement, J. H. Parkinson; Street Railway Facilities, F. R. Dray; Public Parks and Playgrounds, C. W. Baker; Opening and Improving Sidewalks, Amusement, T. W. Huntington, S. E. Carrington; Waterworks, Machinery and Plans for Supplying Pure Water for Domestic Purposes, J. O. Coleman; Manufacturing and Business Interests, J. B. Gilbert.

AMUSEMENTS. An engagement that has been looked forward to by lovers of the "legitimate" with a great deal of interest is announced by Manager Hall to begin Thursday evening, when Marie Wainwright, the beautiful charming actress, supported by Barton Hill and other well known and full company of competent people will produce Shakespeare's comedy "Twelfth Night." The piece will be given with specially prepared scenery, and the stage of the Metropolitan will be cleared of all other scenery to make room for the new.

The mounting of the play is sumptuous, and all the fittings, furniture and hangings are said to be very rich and exceedingly elaborate in every detail. Miss Wainwright will be the tender and gentle of the great and beautiful comedy. Mr. Hill, whose reputation as a distinguished dramatic artist is everywhere in this country confessed, and who has been seen in the Malvolio, and Mr. Owen, a highly accomplished actor in the Sir Toby of the comedy. Miss Wainwright's company is very large and well equipped, and east and west admitted to be one of the best balanced and disciplined troupes of the day. It is scarcely necessary to speak of the abilities of Miss Wainwright, for Viola appears to have "taken" San Francisco completely. The press comments in that city could scarcely have been more complimentary or warm, albeit the critics confess that she does not disguise well as the "boy," she declining to conceal the cause of her success in the play, but the press accorded her unstinted praise, and "Twelfth Night" was played by her company an extra week in that city in response to the popular demand.

In noticing the last presentation of the piece last week the San Francisco Owl said: "The pull that the comedy has on the public is something extraordinary. Last evening the house was crowded in every part, and if the historical play that follows it is not a masterpiece, we will be obliged to think that Shakespeare is coming to his own again, in our public's estimation at least. Miss Wainwright, in leaving us, can hardly be said to have had the most pleasant feelings in regard to her reception and treatment here. She has not only been successful in herself, but the cause of success in others. The severe critic of the New York World thus compares Neilson and Wainwright: 'Neilson moved through the play with the air of a conqueror, and a conqueror of a beautiful woman who seems ever conscious of the power of conquest, and who gave you to understand that her triumph was simply delayed by the movements of the play, but was inevitable, while Wainwright makes more of the struggling and growing love of the Duke. In Wainwright's effort is always perceptible the yearnings of a woman's heart, the lifting up of hope, the desire to be loved, the clinging grasp of the pathetic phases of the role and invests her work with a subtle grace of sympathy that interests the audience in Viola's heart-dreams. Neilson's incomparable beauty dominated her conception of the role, and the audience was more deeply concerned with her rhythmic voice and graceful movement than with the depth of her passion or the success of her love affair. Wainwright gives genuine distinction to the success of the play, and while her handsome features and musical voice attract attention, holds the auditor absorbed in the love themes and completely nullifies the inequality in that of the Messaline girl.'

"Twelfth Night" will be played Thursday and Friday, and "The Honeymoon" on Saturday night. What a treat the production of the best comedy of the greatest of dramatists, and one of the finest of the old-school comedy gems, will be here, the public fully understands. The box-office opens to-morrow morning.

At the Metropolitan Theater last evening, to a good house, the Stairs Dramatic Company presented Herbert Winslow's comedy drama, "A Barrel of Money." The play is an odd mixture of low comedy and specialty acting, melodrama and sentimentalism. It is neither very poor nor very good. The comedy work devolves mainly upon Gracie Emmett, Will H. Kohne and Orin Mann. These three are excellent low comedians. Miss Emmett is versatile, of good stage presence, assumes a juvenile character admirably, and in imitations of Joe Emmett and others of his style, is exceedingly clever. She is, all in all, a soubrette of more than ordinary ability. Mr. Mann doubles so well as an Irish domestic and a country landlord, he was difficult to realize that one person assumed the two characters. Mr. Kohne was very good as the country lad. In other respects the support was ordinary. There is in the third act a sensational scene of very effective character, in which the heroine is by the villain bound upon the belt by which she gives machinery, and is supported by Miss Emmett and Mr. Kohne, who carried into the rolls of an iron mill, when the hero rescues her. But for the ability of Miss Emmett and Mr. Kohne, the piece would be condemned. It is so good enough, and has many bits of humor. The play will be repeated to-night.

A telegram from San Francisco last night announced that the opening sale yesterday for the lectures of Henry M. Stanley amounted to $3,000. Sacramentoans need not go to San Francisco to hear Mr. Stanley, as he is to lecture here on the night of the 17th.

The Undine Boat Club gives a grand ball Thursday evening at Turner Hall. A larger crowd of people never gathered at Armory Hall than was there last night to witness the review of the National Guard troops in this city by Governor Markham, the Commander-in-Chief.

The galleries were taxed to their utmost capacity, and it was certainly demonstrated that there is no possible danger of their ever collapsing from the weight of spectators who may gather there. It was the first review by Governor Markham of any of the National Guard regiments in the State, and many went more for the purpose of obtaining a good view of the Governor than to witness the ceremonies.

The hall presented a brilliant spectacle. Two hundred and fifty men, with their showy uniforms and white gloves were marched upon the floor, with Bayonets glistening and swords clanking. Company A appeared with thirty-four men in line, several file-closers and the Captain and two Lieutenants. Company B, with in all, thirty-six men in uniform, looked well in its new artillery uniform, and Company E marched out with thirty men. Company G had the largest number of men in the line, and in its appearance, Company F of Woodland, commanded by Captain Curson, was also present, with over thirty members, and was the object of many congratulations. In all there were NEARLY THREE HUNDRED MEN.

In uniform and the drill hall was not near large enough to permit the commands to be executed without crowding. The companies were divided into platoons and placed in charge of the captains and lieutenants. The troops were then separated into three regiments, and a number of companies were formed on one side of the hall. The Governor, followed by Adjutant-General Allen and Colonel Murray, then took his stand on the side of the floor opposite the troops. The Brigade Staff formed on his right, and the order, "Pass the word—forward, guide right," was given by the Brigade Commander, the band struck up a march, and the troops passed the Commander-in-Chief in company from the commanding officer of each company saluting as they passed, and the Governor returning the same. People could not refrain from remarking the SOLDIERLY BEARING OF GOVERNOR MARKHAM. His tall and well-built figure and stately carriage gave him a fine appearance, and his calm and self-possessed manner demonstrated the fact that he had seen service before. General Allen looked every inch a soldier and together with Colonel Murray and the Brigadier-General's staff acted as escort to the Governor.

MILITARY REVIEW.

Governor Markham's First Inspection of National Guard Troops.

Five Companies of the First Artillery Regiment Turn Out in Goodly Numbers.

After the regiment had passed in review the Governor requested the companies, and took a seat on the platform, while the ceremonies of brigade dress parade were conducted. An inspection of the armory of the National Guard, in the presence of the officers assembled in Company G's room, and entertained the Governor. The armory was very neatly decorated with palms, evergreens, streamers, and bunting and looked quite cozy. Refreshments were served and the Commander-in-Chief expressed himself as highly pleased with the showing made by the regiment.

The band played half a dozen dances and the dress parade was concluded and near two hundred couple indulged in the mazy whirl.
