THE BEHRING SEA QUESTION FOR ARBITRATION.

The United States Government has, in a letter by Mr. Blaine to Sir Julian Pauncefote, submitted six questions to the British Government as the basis upon which arbitration of the Behring Sea difficulty may be had.

These questions, it will be observed, cover precisely the ground taken by ex-Minister Phelps in his recent essay, correspond with the views of ex-Secretary Bayard as expressed in his essay in the Forum, and are directly in line with the policy President Harrison has announced in the earlier letters issued by Mr. Blaine.

The first question upon which arbitrators may find is the ascertainment of what was the exclusive jurisdiction exercised by Russia in the sea prior to the cession of Alaska and the marine territory?

As the facts are historical, this will not be difficult of determination. The only involvement concerning the point will arise under the second question: "How far was this exercise of jurisdiction, or claim of Russia, conceded by Great Britain?"

Of course, the contention on the part of the Government will be that it has not at any time conceded any of these claims. But the response will be that acquiescence in their exercise and preference, for a long term of years, must be taken as admission of them.

The third question will be more difficult of adjustment: "Was Behring Sea included in the phrase 'Pacific Ocean,' as used in the treaty of 1825, between Great Britain and Russia, and what rights were held and exercised exclusively by Russia after said treaty?"

The determination of the latter clause of the question must shape the interpretation of the first clause. The American Government has persistently contended that there was no material change made in Russia's claims by the treaty of 1825, and that thereafter, and until 1867, when the United States succeeded to her title and rights, Russian control of the Behring Sea fisheries was conceded by all maritime nations.

The fourth question it would seem answers itself. "Did not all the rights of Russia pass, unimpaired, to the United States by the treaty of 1867?"

Many will hold that the submission of this question is unnecessary; that it is a claim the United States cannot afford to confess as lying within the realm of dispute. But reflection will reveal that the factor involved must fall within the deliberations of arbitrators, and that therefore it is wiser to submit it affirmatively. Indeed, it could not be omitted, since it is involved in the contention of Great Britain that Russia had not rights capable of transfer, and that whatever her claims, they were subject to the rights of all nations in open waters.

The fifth question concerns the right of the United States to protect fur seals found in the sea, outside of the three-mile limit, which frequent the islands of the United States lying along and within the sea. This question covers the whole able argument made by Mr. Phelps, and which the RECORD-UNION has very fully set forth. That is, that whatever the character of Behring Sea may be under the international code, it cuts no figure in the right of the United States to protect its property wherever found within the sea. The seal breeds its young upon the land of the United States, and by the law of its natural history passes with them for feeding and for rearing of the young, to another shore of the United States. By that passage through deep waters, Mr. Phelps claims, the property right of the United States in the seal is not lost. It invests the seal when it leaves one shore, it is attached to it when it reaches the other, and it is not lost at any moment during the passage from shore to shore. This, because this passage is not flicker or fugitive, but regular, in the natural order of life of the seal, and a necessity to its propagation and the preservation of the species. If, in said passage, the property character is lost, and English and Canadian hunters may take the seal, so may those of all other nations, and as a result the assertion of such a claim of right will work the extermination of the seal family, and thus a claim of international right be made to work the destruction of the very thing for which it is preferred—the fishery. By all the equities, by natural laws, by common reason of man, Mr. Phelps claims, the seals must be held to be the property of the United States, and as such it must be respected while in transit from one shore to another.

Mr. Blaine emphasizes this property claim in his letter published yesterday, by notifying Lord Salisbury that the President has held for the United States throughout the controversy that the property interest in the seal is in the United States; that the claim was exercised by Russia and was recognized by England during the whole period of Russia's assertion of it, and for nineteen years after its acquisition by the United States.

The sixth question involves action and agreement dependent upon the decision of the preceding ones. If they are determined in a manner to require the concurrence of England in regulations for the taking of seals in Behring Sea, then the arbitrators are to say how far from the shore line the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States shall extend for the protection of the seals living upon United States soil for a time. Also, is a closed season necessary, and, if so, what months shall it include? These last are matters relating wholly to natural history, and have no political significance.

The President consents, if arbitration is had, that the question of damages to English ships that have been seized and prevented from fishing shall be submitted. But this is to be done only on condition that the compensating question shall accompany it, the provision that if the decision is in favor of the United States the Canadian fishers shall pay damages to the United States for the catches they have made at the ordinary price for which the pelts have been sold. This is so sharp a rap and yet so just that it excites the sense of humor. Certainly if the United States is wrong and should pay to England damages for seized vessels taken for sealing in Behring Sea, so, too, if the English claim is error, that country should pay for the sealskins wrongfully taken. As to the closed sea question, that is now out of issue, Mr. Blaine declaring that the Government of the United States has not preferred it in the correspondence. So, too, Mr. Blaine denies that the United States has based its contention solely on the ukase of the Czar issued in 1821. He adds that, on the contrary, the United States has contended without recurring to any of its inherited and superior rights in Alaska, that it has as full authority for going beyond the three-mile line in case of proved necessity as Great Britain possesses. He then cites a case in which England established a precedent, where only two years ago by Parliamentary Act Great Britain attempted to control a body of water situated beyond the northeastern section of Scotland, 2,700 square miles in extent, and to direct that certain methods of fishing shall not be used within that great body of water, under a prescribed penalty, the inhibition being not alone against British subjects, but against any person.

In all the diplomatic correspondence concerning this business no sharper answer has been made than this, and which Mr. Blaine clinches with this argument:

"If Great Britain may thus control an area of 2,700 square miles of ocean on the coast of Scotland, why may not the United States prescribe the space around the Pribiloff Islands to which similar prohibitions may be enforced? It must not escape observation that the area of water outside of the three-mile limit of Scotland, whose control is assumed by Great Britain, is as large as would be found inside the line drawn from Cape Cod to Portland harbor."

To those who oppose any modification of the present license system in this city, two questions may be addressed that we apprehend cannot be satisfactorily answered. 1. What reasons exist why, as is the fact, license to conduct a saloon should be lower in Sacramento than in any other municipality in a county, and distinct from it, in the entire United States? It is a fact that liquor licenses in this city touch the lowest known minimum, and why it is so no one has ever been able to explain. 2. Upon what equitable basis is a system grounded that compels a real estate agent to pay $10 a quarter for the privilege of opening and conducting a business that contributes nothing whatever to municipal expenses and liabilities, but taxes a liquor saloon only $15 for the same period of time? These are simple, economic questions, that taxpayers should calmly consider. They are not sentimental; they are disputative neither upon the questions of temperance, prohibition nor high license; they simply address themselves to the common understanding of men; to the ordinary quality of justice; to the sense of equitable regulation. It will certainly impress thinking men deeply to learn that of all counties and cities, Sacramento enjoys the distinction of being the cheapest liquor license vender known. We should at least come up to a fair average rate compared with the rates of other communities of like importance.

OF ALL the nonsensical ideas ever put afoot is that of a Michigan doctor, who holds that la grippe has been aggravated by the electricity artificially set free in cities where electric street-railroads and electric-lighting plants are common. As a matter of fact the disease has been most virulent where there are fewest electric-car plants—in the great cities.

Oh! the Misery of It. Human wretchedness touches bottom in sea sickness. Life is held a feather's weight by the unfortunate afflicted with it. Why endure its atrocious internal convulsions when Hostetter's Stomach Bitters relieves them instantly? Not only relieves but prevents. It is not always on the "briny" that traveler's nausea is experienced. Railway journeying, or riding with one's back to the horse or in super-sensitive stomachs. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is always the prompt remedy. The mischievous properties of brackish water, the evil influence of malaria, unwholesome or unaccustomed food, excessive fatigue, whether bodily or mental, the dyspeptic tendency bred by sedentary pursuits, the pernicious effects of exposure to extremes of temperature or dampness—all these are effectually counteracted by this genial preservative of health. Cures also rheumatism, kidney and bilious trouble.

HOW TO DETECT IT.

Some Valuable Hints Regarding the Grippe—Signs of its Approach and How to Counteract Them.

The discussion as to the cause of the Grippe is of course interesting, but gives little satisfaction to its unfortunate victims. Whether caused by miasma or by a virus, its ravages continue and the country still heads under the scourge. In Chicago, recently, the deaths from this cause were so great that the undertaking facilities of the city were insufficient to meet the emergency. The death rate is correspondingly high every where.

It cannot be too strongly impressed on people that, in order to ward off the disease, warning symptoms must be regarded and prompt action taken. It becomes extremely difficult to dislodge the disease if allowed to take its course. Hence its name. It generally commences with a slight headache, or pains in the small of the back or limbs. It does not always give one even as plain a hint as this—a feeling of tightness across the forehead, buzzing in the ears, or peculiar feeling about the eyes, may be all the caution one gets, so it is a culpable carelessness to neglect even these slight signs.

The remedy lies in a stimulant, and the preference should be given to whisky. All the doctors of the country are agreed on this point but are very careful to impress on their patients the fact that pure whisky alone must be taken. Duff's Pure Malt Whisky is the purest on the market, and can be readily obtained at all drug stores. This preparation, which is indorsed by the leading doctors, scientists and chemists of the present day, is this year adding to that first-class reputation which it won during the epidemic of the Grippe last year. There are many imitations which will injure the system. "Just as good," they are deceived. They are not. Duff's Pure Malt is the only medicinal one.

WHY YOU SHOULD BUY ALASKA REFRIGERATOR.

FACTS WORTH CONSIDERING.

The use of ice, once regarded as a luxury, has become almost universally an imperative necessity.

To make this ice the most servicable a Refrigerator is needed.

The qualities sought in a Refrigerator are preservation of perishable foods and an ECONOMICAL USE OF ICE.

The economical use of ice depends upon the principal involved, the construction of the Refrigerator, and in utilizing all the cold air.

The principal causes of decay in meats and fruits are dampness and varying temperature, causing the expansion and contraction of tissues, which hasten decay; hence a dry atmosphere and uniform temperature conduce to their preservation.

The ALASKA is constructed upon strictly scientific principles, by which low temperature and dryness of air are naturally and inevitably obtained.

The ALASKA possesses the only provision chamber free from odor.

The ALASKA produces a dry, cold air, which no other Refrigerator can do.

The ALASKA has preserved fresh meats perfectly for three weeks in hottest weather.

The ALASKA produces better results with less ice than any other Refrigerator.

We Have Ice Boxes From $6 Up, and the Alaska Refrigerators From $10 Up. EVERY ONE WARRANTED.
