

P-STREET PERSEVERANCE.

The Residents There Determined to Have an Electric Road.

A Big Mass Meeting at the Haymarket--Speeches by Prominent Citizens--Trustees Arraigned.

During the past two days circulars have been distributed about the residence portion of the city bearing the following legend:

MASS MEETING--A public meeting will be held at 18th and P streets, Friday evening, July 31, 1891, for the purpose of expressing the will of the people on the building of the proposed electric railway on P street, and the refusal, thus far, of the City Trustees to grant a franchise for such railway.

In accordance with this call an immense crowd of people gathered last night at the haymarket. A speakers' stand, draped in national colors had been erected in the southwestern corner of the square, and in front of it were arranged a large number of seats for the ladies.

The Artillery Band occupied the stand and played several national airs, before the meeting was called to order.

Everything was orderly, and the people who were there were a rule representative citizens and property-owners.

THE SPEAKING BEGINS. J. W. Hughes called the meeting to order. He said it was with great pleasure that he looked upon the vast throng which had come to express its opinions on the P street electric road proposition.

He said it was not the intention of the meeting to condemn anybody. They had the right, however, to criticize and comment on the actions of those who had the city's affairs in charge. Mr. Hughes then introduced S. Katzenstein as Chairman of the evening.

Mr. Katzenstein reiterated what Mr. Hughes had said about not gathering for the purpose of giving vent to harsh words. He said that the people of P street--the property-owners and taxpayers--wanted an electric road on their street, and the Central Street Railway Company were anxious to build the road.

The entire road would be inside the Fourth Ward, yet three Trustees--two from the Second Ward and one from the Third--said they should not have it. This, he said, looked very strange. All the P-street people wanted was justice.

WILLIAM BOYNE'S VIEWS. The Chairman then introduced William Boyne as the first speaker of the evening. Mr. Boyne began by speaking of the great advantages of street railroads in general. A great many years ago a road was built on I street to Agricultural Park. If it were not for the flood of 1852 I street would to-day be the business street of Sacramento. He also referred to the street railroads of K and J streets when the street railroads were laid down. These were horse-car lines, and were very good in their day. But a new era had come. Horse cars were now behind the times. The people of P street had seen what the electric road had done for J street and the suburbs of the city, and had petitioned the Trustees to allow the same road to extend on our street. But the Trustees had said no. This was wrong. When the people elected men to office to do the bidding of the people they had a right to expect justice and fairness from them. [Applause and cheers.] Continuing, Mr. Boyne said he was not a property-owner on P street, but like all good citizens of other localities he had the interests of P street and the rest of the city at heart. There was talk of a new charter. If one should be drawn upon it, should permit all sections of the city to be represented in the city's government. The speaker said that while he believed that Mr. Carey was one of the best citizens of the city, he was behind the times. He had not kept his promises with the city, and had no right to expect the people to repose confidence in him or extend him further favors. [Applause.] When people like Mr. Carey got hold of franchises and property, they should be made to feel that it was time to invite foreign capital and enterprise to Sacramento. [Applause.] Such a time had arrived, and now the people demanded that their rights, Mr. Boyne said that the people should go before the Trustees on Monday and once more appeal for justice. He made no reference to whom the franchise was granted.

Chairman Katzenstein read letters of regret from Dr. J. H. Parkinson and Frank D. Ryan. The former was absent on account of sickness, and the latter was in Stockton attending to the Allen inquest.

SENATOR DRAY TALKS. Senator F. R. Dray was then introduced. He was received with cheers. The Senator said he only appeared before the assembly as a plain, ordinary citizen who had the interests of the city at heart. He did not have a dollar's worth of interest on P street, yet he was in hearty sympathy with the people of P street in their demands for justice. The electric road system had been demonstrated to be a success--that is, the overhead system. Sacramento had seen one electric road failure, and naturally went to the new system was first proposed it met with opposition. But it was finally admitted, and it had been demonstrated that it was the most successful street railway system now in existence. [Loud cheering.]

"But we have another side of the question to look at," continued Mr. Dray. "It has been set forth that by granting this franchise the old company--which he understood intended to adopt the electric system--would be crippled. I don't know whether there is anything in that or not. I only give it as a defense that is made by the other side. I am in favor, however, of throwing all the streets open to any franchises that should be asked for. It will do no harm. Business men will not seek franchises and their money unless they see a good investment."

Rev. J. A. Mayhew was the next speaker called upon. The reverend gentleman said he was not prepared to make a lengthy speech. He came, like all the rest, to express the sentiments of the residents of P street. He could not, like the preceding speakers, say he had no pecuniary interest in P street. He owned property there, and realized that an electric road on that street would enhance values and bring about a wonderful transformation. But it would be selfish to look at the matter only in this light. The entire city was interested in having as many railroads as possible.

Mr. Gattman of the Liquor Dealers' Association, appeared on the rostrum and informed the people that his association had adjourned its meeting so as to be present at the mass meeting. He invited all to be present at the liquor men's meeting this evening at the Clunie Opera-house.

GRAVE STATE OF AFFAIRS. Matt F. Johnson was the next speaker introduced by Chairman Katzenstein. Mr. Johnson said that a grave state of affairs presented itself. An energetic, enterprising capitalist had appeared in Sacramento and offered to expend thousands and thousands of dollars in improving the city. He had come before the Trustees and asked for that privilege. The people had gone with him, and said: "We are glad of this--this is what we want." But, instead of showing an interest in the welfare of the people, and the City Trustees had turned their backs upon the pleaders. "We asked for bread," he said, "and we were given a stone." [Applause and cries of "That's what we received."] "All this talk about protecting Mr. Johnson," about protecting Mr. Johnson, bosh. If it had not been for the advent of Mr. Henry we would have the old broken-down horse-cars drumming over our streets for the next ten or twenty years to come. [Applause.] Mr. Carey will have to wake up and get in the line of progression or he will have to get the wall. Mr. Carey has not kept his promises with the people. What did Mr. Henry do? You all remember how, week after week, he went before the City Fathers, and asked for the privilege of including his money here; how he was rebuffed, scorned, and laughed at by the Trustees and their cronies. But he persevered, and after having had to make all sorts of promises, he got his franchise. And he kept his promises; [Cheers.] There is just as much sense in the talk made in defense of the Trustees--the protection of Mr. Carey--as there would be in Mr. Lull's or any other business man going before the Trustees and saying, "You must not let any more men in my line of business locate here, because I have been here twenty-five years and have spent my money here."

During Mr. Johnson's speech an open carriage drove up, in which were seated Trustees "Cord" and "Laughlin." They were evidently not observed by the crowd or speakers, and they drove off immediately after Mr. Johnson had finished.

TO GO IN A BODY. J. C. Medley was introduced as the next speaker. He went over the points brought out by the other speakers, and urged the City Trustees to give the people of P street their rights. He said he believed the Trustees would see their mistake and reconsider their former action. They could not, he said, but would give the electric-road people the franchise asked for.

Chairman Katzenstein announced that that this would close the meeting. He hoped everybody would sign the citizens' petition to the Trustees, and he also hoped that on Monday, when the Trustees met, they would go with the P-street committee in a body to the board's room to demand justice.

"Where shall we meet--in the plaza?" shouted one enthusiast. "Yes, that's a good place," replied the Chairman. "Get there, anyhow." The crowd then dispersed in an orderly manner.

MEETING POSTPONED. The Liquor Dealers Put Off Their Meeting Until To-Night.

There was a rather light attendance at the meeting at the Clunie Opera-house last evening, called by the Liquor Dealers' Association, and after music by the Hussar Band W. A. Anderson announced that it would be postponed until this evening. He thought the meeting of P-street property-owners, at the Haymarket, had attracted many who would otherwise have been present, and beside it had been decided to postpone the meeting out of respect to the memory of Robert Allen, a member of the association.

Mr. Anderson explained that the purpose of the meeting was to obtain an expression from taxpayers and prominent citizens in regard to the new saloon license ordinance, which increases the license to $45 per quarter, or $15 per month.

THE JULY WIND-UP. What the Weather Bureau Reports for the Past Week.

It Has Been Hot in Sacramento, But Much Less So Than at Other Interior Points.

The temperatures at 5 A. M. and 5 P. M. yesterday, according to the Weather Bureau's report, were 88° and 99°, while the highest and lowest were 94° and 88°, showing it to have been what is meteorologically termed a hot day, with but gentle southwesterly breezes blowing.

The barometrical readings at 5 A. M. and 5 P. M. were 29.83 and 29.76 inches, respectively.

The highest and lowest temperatures one or two days ago were 88° and 85°, and one day ago to-day were 87° and 87°, showing that we are again in the midst of a hot wave, as compared with last year's record at this time.

There were during the present month twenty-two days with a temperature above 90°, and five in June, making twenty-seven hot days since the 26th day of last June; or, rather, of the past thirty-six days twenty-seven of them have been hot. Still, this has been the coolest point in the two valleys, north or south of us, as will be seen by the following record.

For the satisfaction of showing our people that during the heated spell of the last two weeks Sacramento was the coolest point in the two great valleys of the Sacramento and San Joaquin Rivers, a continuation of the tables of comparisons of the past week appear appropriate. They are given in the following table, published in the Record-Union for the week ending July 21st. The one now published is for the week ending July 28th, as taken from the Weather Bureau's report in the Pacific Rural Press.

The highest temperatures, it must be borne in mind, were not the highest recorded at either place, but was the temperature at 5 P. M. The table will be found very interesting reading at this time, and is as follows:

Table with columns: DATE, Red Bluff, Sacramento, Fresno, at 5 P. M., at 5 P. M., at 5 P. M.

The above is pretty good evidence that we get the cooling sea breezes, as they traverse the Sacramento River, in sufficient quantity to very much moderate what would otherwise be an extremely hot interior point.

TRAVELERS TAKE NOTICE. Railroad Changes Which Will Go Into Effect To-Morrow.

The changes in the railroad time-table will go into effect to-morrow. Although published several days ago, they are repeated here for the guidance of those who may have failed to make notes thereof.

The west-bound overland train, No. 4, which at present reaches this city on its way to San Francisco at 8:15 o'clock in the morning, and leaves thirty-five minutes later, will arrive here at 5:25 A. M., and depart at 5:40 A. M.

The second-class overland, east-bound, will arrive at Sacramento fifteen minutes earlier than it does at present, or at 11:25 A. M. It will leave for the East at 11:50 A. M.

The local train that now leaves for Woodland, Willows and Redding at 10:40 A. M., will start two minutes earlier.

The local second-class train, which now leaves for San Francisco in the morning at 6:20 o'clock, will leave at 6:30 A. M.

The local train from Oroville, via Knight's Landing, will arrive here at 7:40 A. M., instead of 7:25 A. M.

Total Tax Reductions. County Assessor Irvine has been going over the work of the Board of Equalization, and finds as the result that there were reductions amounting to $85,940, and increases amounting to $25,200. This makes a net total reduction of $60,740 in the county tax rate.

A Success. Sending fresh meats all over the country in hot weather has been done by us quite extensively for many years. Our butchers and hotels who are slow in making changes to give us a trial and convince themselves of the quality of the meat they will derive a great benefit from our specialty in extra cured corn beef. Both Lookabaugh and Baltz pitched poor ball, and the hitting was mostly of the scratch character.

O'Neil retired from the game in the fourth inning, owing to heart trouble, and Summers filled his place acceptably.

Danny Long put up good ball, although limping painfully. There was a good attendance and fine weather. Score:

A CLOSE CALL. Narrow Escape of a Child From Death.

Milton, the six-year-old son of W. W. Cuthbert, who resides on St. street, near Seventh, nearly lost his life yesterday through an accident that should never have been possible.

While playing on the sidewalk at the corner of the street he slipped and fell upon the iron grating across the sewer man-hole. The grating was not secure, and the child was precipitated into the hole, which was filled with the rankest kind of sewage.

Mrs. J. Henry Miller, who lives near by, saw the child fall, succeeded in grasping the child before it had time to smother, and held it until some workmen arrived and rescued it from the awful death that was threatened.

The boy was a shocking sight when taken out, and the stench given off by the foul matter which saturated his clothing was almost enough to asphyxiate those about him. In falling the child received a severe wound on the head.
