

BOATMEN AT WAR.

Serious Cutting Affray on Front Street Last Night.

James Murphy, a Deck-hand, Frightfully Slashed—His Friends Then Do Up Pilot Gus Shultz.

The combination Police Station and Receiving Hospital looked like a slaughter-house last night over the light.

About 10 o'clock a young man named James Murphy, a "table-turner" on the steamer San Joaquin No. 3, staggered into the station bathed in blood that flowed from a frightful knife wound which encompassed half his head and face.

He was trying to hold the edges of the gash together with his hand, and as he did so he would say that he believed he was about to die, and desired the services of a Catholic clergyman. He was perfectly sober.

Jailer Clark at once conducted the injured man to the hospital ward and telephoned for a hack to be sent for a priest. It soon returned with Rev. Father Gleason, but in the meantime the City Physician had come and sewed up the wound.

Several steamboat men followed the injured man to the station, and said that the cutting was done by Gus Shultz, a pilot on the same steamer on which Murphy was employed. They did not see the difficulty, but knew that Shultz and Murphy had had a fight at Front and N streets.

About midnight, while Officers Lowell and Wilson were looking for Shultz, they found a man lying in the gutter on L street, near Second. They found the man to be the very one for whom they were searching. He was almost unconscious and bleeding from numerous cuts and bruises about his face and head.

He said that a gang of Murphy's friends had met and assaulted him. When brought to the Police Station he looked as if he had one bad gash over his right eye. Shultz denied that he had cut Murphy, but when searched an open jack-knife was found in his coat pocket.

The officers returned with their search for Shultz that Murphy and he had quarreled on Sunday while going on a trip up the river, and that Murphy last night assaulted Shultz in the gutter on Front and N streets. Shultz was talking with a man named Colombo at the time. He disclaimed all knowledge of any cutting. The doctor was again sent for, this time to dress Shultz's wounds.

Murphy's wounds commenced near the top of the head and runs downward behind and under the right ear and thence across the cheek nearly to the nose. After the officers returned with Shultz, Murphy admitted that he struck Shultz because the latter had lost a great deal of blood, but will probably recover.

THE CRAVENS CORRAL.

It Contained a Fair Number of Defendants Yesterday.

The session of the Police Court was begun yesterday morning at 9 o'clock in an order that the cases on the calendar might be disposed of before the day was over. There were not many of them, but the Ong Ah Foon assault-to-murder examination and the trial of Lon Morrison, charged with assault with a deadly weapon, would, it was thought, require considerable time.

Contrary to expectations, however, the latter case was disposed of in a very short time. There was simply the testimony of the complaining witness, and Judge Craven ordered the case dismissed. The Morrison woman was accused of cutting one Aliaman with a knife, but she swore that he attacked her and got his wrist cut by running against the blade of the weapon.

The case of James Somers, charged with disturbing the peace, was dismissed on motion of the City Attorney, who stated that he thought there was really nothing in the charge.

H. G. Grimes and Tom Flaherty, accused of being drunk, had their cases continued until today.

The case of Ong Ah Foon, charged with assault to murder, which has been on the hearing before the Court several times in the past two weeks, was taken up again at 11 o'clock, and also at the afternoon session. The examination of the witnesses is tedious, and the prosecution has not yet even rested their case, so it will be some time before the examination is concluded.

The examination will be continued again today.

SUTTER'S FORT.

The Work of Restoration to be Commenced Next Week.

The Board of Sutter Fort Trustees met at the Courthouse last evening. There were present F. D. Ryan, President; C. E. Grunsky, Secretary; and Eugene J. Gregory, Treasurer.

James Seadler, who was recently selected as architect and superintendent of the work of rebuilding the fort, made a report concerning the present condition of the property, and also offered recommendations to cover the work incident to its restoration.

The views of Mr. Seadler met the approval of the board. A resolution was adopted whereby suitable committees were appointed with authority to proceed immediately with the work of restoration.

The meeting then adjourned, subject to the call of the Board. The board confidently expects to commence the work in good shape on Tuesday next.

YESTERDAY'S FIRE.

Damage to a Residence—Serious Accident to a Fire Engine.

The residence of H. Horsfield, on H street, between Twenty-second and Twenty-third, caught fire yesterday from some dry vines in the rear, and before the fire department could reach there considerable damage was done to the roof and rear porch, amounting to some $250 or $300.

The driver being strapped to his seat, he could not free himself, and one of his legs was very badly bruised and the flesh lacerated. It is believed, however, that no bones were broken. The engine was so badly damaged that it will cost several hundred dollars to restore it to its former beauty.

McCLOSKEY MUST GO.

Bessie McGuirk Will Captain the Baseball Team.

McCloskey has been dethroned as manager, and good-natured "Bessie" McGuirk has been offered the exalted position which the Texas organizer will vacate. McCloskey does not have much to say about the change, and McGuirk mildly says he will assume authority and try to fill his new position as well as he knows how.

The public will be interested however in knowing the reason for Mr. Ginsberg's action. A RECORD-UNION reporter saw him yesterday, and after being informed of the change, asked why it was made.

"Well, I'll tell you," said he, "I just thought I'd do it to see if the luck of the team won't change. Just for luck, you might say."

The reporter insisted that there must be some reasons other than those given. Mr. Ginsberg, in his confidential way, told why he made the change.

"Anybody with half an eye," said he, "must have noticed, if he attended many of the games, that McCloskey has not got control over his players. They don't mind him at all, and whenever he tells them to do this or that, they laugh at him. Now, I don't want to say much about this affair for fear it might create hard feelings, but it has been my judgment all along that the boys were hanging together too much of their own way on the diamond, and also while in charge of McCloskey. They know him too well, and he does not appear to be able to stir up with them. I think McGuirk will make a good Captain, but if he does not, then there is a man in the team who can and will run it satisfactorily. That is my work. If McGuirk don't suit, then Works can have the management, and I have an idea that authority to proceed immediately with the work of restoration."

The meeting then adjourned, subject to the call of the Board. The board confidently expects to commence the work in good shape on Tuesday next.

JOHN MURPHY.

This Was the Correct Name of the Dead Policeman.

A Photograph of Him Received From Peoria Establishes the Fact—The Kingsbury Case.

Through the instrumentality of the RECORD-UNION the fact has been developed that the name of Policeman William Arlington—who was recently shot and killed in this city by a woman named Annie Manning, alias Wilson, with whom he had been consorting—was John Murphy, son of a prominent physician of Peoria, Ill.

When Arlington died the RECORD-UNION announced that there was strong reason for believing that the deceased officer's name was not Arlington, but Murphy, and that his father was a leading doctor in Peoria. This announcement was a surprise to the police officials and Arlington's friends, and correspondence was at once opened with Dr. Murphy.

Yesterday there was received from the latter a photograph of his son, which was taken five years ago while he was on a visit to his home, and a glance at it removed all further doubt as to the identity of the deceased officer.

The latter had stated at times to be a Virginian, and at others a Kentuckian, and while his friends gave themselves no concern about his early life, it was frequently remarked that Arlington had referred to his family, and had never been known to talk of his career prior to his coming to this State.

Two weeks ago the RECORD-UNION was the means of bringing to the notice of an aged father and mother in a little town in Massachusetts the fact that their long-lost son had met his death here among strangers.

Aside from the sentimental feature of cases like these, such discoveries are of importance in a legal sense, settling up estates and securing the distribution of property to rightful heirs. Inquiries by the score might have been made of John Murphy, had nobody ever dreamed that he and Policeman William Arlington were one and the same person.

Two weeks ago the RECORD-UNION, the man who was killed at Freeport. If the RECORD-UNION did not travel far and wide, it is probable that his death would not have become known at his home on the Atlantic seaboard, and in case of the death of his parents the settlement of his estate, under the circumstances, he a troublesome matter.

The facts of this latter case demonstrate the importance of a correct and complete official record of all unknown deceased persons. Fred Kingsbury has some money to his credit in a bank at his residence, 2210 G street, in honor of his recently established his identity before his relatives can get control of it. It is doubtful if this can be done, as no detailed description of the man who was buried here was taken by anyone. All who saw him admit that he answered the description of the man of the same name who had been killed at Freeport, Mass., but his exact height, peculiarity of features, etc., cannot now be known, and it is doubtful if the courts will declare the deceased to be the same as the aged father and mother who have recognized in the general description given their long-missing son.

Later Officer Clark has adopted the plan of having photographs taken of all unidentified bodies on which inquests are held, and henceforth it will be an easy matter to establish the identity of such persons.

BRILLIANT MUSIC.

Last Night's Grand Concert in the Public Plaza.

Perhaps ten thousand people gathered in the Plaza last night to listen to the music promised by the Artillery Band. The square was literally packed, and during the entire evening there was a perfect jam of people around the music stand, where they stood for two hours entranced by the charming airs rendered.

The programme had never been equaled in any open-air concert given in Sacramento, and the publication of its numbers was the cause of the large gathering. The general and unstinted applause from the multitude was certainly a deserved compliment to the band.

It was the last concert the same musicians will give for two weeks, on account of their leaving the city on Saturday for the encampment at Santa Cruz, and Leader Neale took a great deal of pains in arranging the selections with a view to making the concert a notable one.

Every number was a treat, and it would have kept the band playing all night had the air been repeated as frequently as the crowd demanded.

Charles Eilerman's rendition of the cornet solo, "Brown's Autograph," was a brilliant effort. He was given an excellent opportunity to display his fine powers of expression, and his delighted listeners were playing all night long, and cheered and cheered him, and in response to the repeated bursts of applause he played the selection with new vigor, and they wanted to hear it again.

The selection, "Old Scotia," was a grand melody of Scottish airs, and during the performance, the band played and their listeners were playing all night long, and cheered and cheered him, and in response to the repeated bursts of applause he played the selection with new vigor, and they wanted to hear it again.

The last number, a descriptive piece, entitled "Recollections of the War," was rendered with the greatest of skill, and the bursting of bombs, and a grand display of pyrotechnics.

The Hussar Band will give the next concert, and the program is being arranged for the occasion, and Director Cortez knows how to do it.

RESCUED FROM PERIL.

Three Children Saved From a Run-away Accident.

The little son of J. S. McMahon and two other children, daughters of K. Douglas, met with an accident yesterday that would perhaps have cost them their lives. They were riding in a buggy on J street, the oldest boy—who is about 11 years of age—driving, and when near Sixth street a cart driver, a man named Hanson, collided with their vehicle.

One wheel of the children's buggy was smashed, and the horse started to run off with them, when Conductor William Ashley, one of the electric cars put on his brake and jumping to the street ran after the frightened animal. After a short chase he succeeded in grasping the bridle and finally stopping the horse.

But for his prompt action the children would have been either seriously injured or killed. Those who witnessed the collision by the blame therefor entirely on the driver of the cart.
