

IRRIGATION.

Significant Features of the Recent Utah Conference.

Advantages of Public Irrigation Systems--Trans-Missouri States Will Act in Harmony.

[San Francisco Bulletin, September 23d.] "The convention was a great success," said W. H. Mills to-day, in speaking of the recent irrigation conference at Salt Lake, to which he was a delegate. "The convention certainly did all it set out to accomplish. Its results will be heard from during the next session of Congress, a special committee has been appointed to go to Washington. There were 340 delegates, representing sixteen States and Territories. We had two days of solid discussion. Senator Stewart of Nevada presided over us as a Committee of the Whole most of the time, although C. C. Wright of Modesto was President of the convention.

"Many interesting points were brought out in the discussion, but the sentiment of the convention crystallized on the following features: (1) That all Government lands capable of irrigation should be ceded to the several States for the development of irrigation and indirectly the promotion of education. (2) That the forest lands should be regulated by a systematic forestry system. (3) That the plains and grazing lands should not be lured by continuous grazing and entire destruction of vegetation, thus increasing the radiating surface. (4) That all capital invested in irrigation works should be public capital, never to be returned or repaid, and that lands irrigated should not be devised in any greater quantity than may employ the industry of one agricultural holder and his family.

"The Government is to be asked simply to give such State all the arid lands now under Government title for the sole purpose of the development of irrigation. This legislation is simply supplementary to that of last Congress relative to irrigation surveys, location of reservoirs, etc., and in no way conflicting. During the convention the subject of water rights in harmony with its plans were read from Secretary Noble and from the Commissioner of the Land Office. The idea is that in each State there shall be a trust fund created. Suppose, for example, we could manage to irrigate by some system 200,000 acres of public land in California. The idea is to sell it at a price that would be a fair price for the cost of the irrigating system would not only be defrayed, but a surplus created which would be turned into the school fund.

"It was brought out very clearly that private capital in irrigation systems is not so desirable by any means as public capital. In private systems the water privilege becomes a perpetual mortgage on the land. One Utah system requires every land-purchaser to pay $8 an acre for water and $1 an acre rent every year thereafter. Settlers will hesitate at such investments. It is considerably different from pre-empting or paying $125 an acre for 160 acres, and the water on the basis for irrigation. The water must go with the land forever in order to sell it readily. The land-owners must be water-owners, and the water must be made the convention pleased with our Wright law. It was admitted that our system is in advance of all others.

"The barring of country and grazing lands is an important feature in considering the conservation of moisture. In Texas over 100,000 acres, once covered with luxuriant grass, is now entirely bare. Forestry methods were discussed at length.

"A significant point of this convention politically was the indication that all the trans-Missouri countries desire to act in harmony and to act together politically in this regard. The assembly was referred to not as the Irrigation Convention, but as the Trans-Missouri Conference. Geographic reports of the proceedings will be published and widely circulated."

Carpenters' Meeting.

The Carpenters' Union held a meeting last evening at Federation Hall. After disposing of the regular business an open session was held, during which there were several speeches on the subject of the tariff. The talk took quite a political turn and naturally was animated. The conclusion reached was that the laboring people were taxed too heavily by the government in comparison with the taxes imposed upon corporations and rich people.

It gives us pleasure to refer to the advertisement of Dr. W. H. Tuttt, which appears in our columns. For over twenty-five years Tuttt's Pills have been before the public, and each succeeding year their valuable properties become better appreciated. They now stand second to none for the relief of that much abused and overtaxed organ, the bowels, and for the removal of that cause of so many ills, constipation. They are used in every civilized country, and carry with them voluminous testimonials of their safety and efficacy. Tuttt's Liver Pills should have a place in every household.

SUBSTITUTIONS OF WELL-KNOWN advertised articles seem to be the order of the day. We deem it only justice to our patrons to warn our readers against this form of piracy. When you want an article, ask your merchant or druggist for it and don't accept a substitute.

RELIGIOUS.

Preparations for the Ecumenical Conference of Methodists.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.--Preparations for the great Ecumenical Conference of Methodists, which is to open here on October 8th, are rapidly approaching completion, and all indications point to the greatest gathering of religious brain force ever seen in this or any other country. Hundreds of delegates from two continents will be present, and although a city of large and important conveniences, Washington will regard this as the most important gathering of this decade. The conference will last till the 20th of October, and in the discussion of various topics, such as the "Influence of Modern Scientific Progress on Religious Thought," "Ecumenical Methodism," "The Christian Church," "University Education," "Romanism," "International Arbitration" and many other religious problems by the foremost minds of the day, bids fair to hold for a time the attention of the religious world.

ST. THOMAS ISLAND.

It May be Purchased by the Government for a Naval Station. NEW YORK, Sept. 23.--A Washington special says: It is reported here that the Administration is considering the advisability of making overtures for the acquisition of the island of St. Thomas, W. I., as a naval and commercial station. It is understood the negotiations have now reached the point where the United States has been given the refusal of the island for several years. They signed for a trip to Iceland, and the local union here told the men that if they got tired they could compel the Captain to return, not by open opposition or refusal to work the ship, but by passive resistance, such as a failure to catch fish, etc. When they got to the station they heard from a later schooner that the union in Boston was boycotting fishing vessels till the Captains offered better terms. The men thereupon made the same demands, and being refused determined to compel the schooner to return to port. The conspirators then refused to catch fish. They put out lines and nets, but shook the fish when hauling them in. Thus the fresh bait got out. They stopped up the chimney in the Captain's cabin and nearly suffocated him with coal gas. Seeing resistance was useless, he came home with Winchester, were before United States Commissioner Hallett, charged with mutiny in his annual message to Congress next December a sufficient appropriation for the purpose of the purchase.

OTTUMWA, Sept. 23.--An immense crowd of Republicans turned out to hear Major McKinley speak at the Coal Palace to-day.

We Eat Too Much Meat.

Of course, it is very important to bear in mind the principle at stake. In the old days the diet of the schools, so graphically described by Dickens, died in the present day in many parts of the North of England--it was customary to serve the dinner before the meat. A heavy, greasy soup pudding with gravy came first, and the meat followed. Throughout the greater part of France the ordinary dinner consists of a piece of beef boiled, the liquor in which the beef was boiled, with the vegetables and a quantity of crusts of bread soaked in it, is served first; the piece of meat is served afterwards. We can carry out this idea, only in a more elegant and artistic manner. What we require is something savory, to accompany a large quantity of plain, cheap and wholesome food. If we study true economy, and we wish to have really cheap dishes, we must remember that it is a great mistake, if we have healthy appetites, to start at once on butchers' meat. The meat should follow some kind of lighter food. This mode of living is better for the human body. Great meat-eaters are too often men who indulge in alcoholic stimulants; and in the opinion of many medical men in the present day a large quantity of meat gives rise to a craving for stimulants while on the other hand taking stimulants gives rise to a craving for meat. To certain extent one is the antidote for the other; but what a terrible waste to pay for a poison and an antidote when we can do without both--Cassell's Family Magazine.

The Pen.

The earliest mode of writing was on bricks, tiles, oyster-shells, stones, ivory, bark and leaves dried, and from the latter the term "leaves of trees" is probably derived. Copper and brass plates were in use, and a bill of freeness on copper was some years since discovered in India, bearing the date 100 years B. C. Leather was also used as well as wooden tablets, and the papyrus comes into vogue, and also the parchment of the papyrus was superseded by parchment. Paper, however, is of great antiquity, especially among the Chinese; but the first paper mill in England was built in 1583 by a German, at Dartford, in Kent. Nevertheless, it was nearly a century and a half--namely, in 1719--before Thomas Watkinson, a stationer, brought the paper-making to anything like perfection. The first approach to a pen was the stylus, a kind of iron hook, but the Romans forbade its use on account of its frequent and even fatal use in quarrels, and then it was made of bone. Subsequently, reeds, pens and split, like pens at the present day, were used.

At famous Armenian actor, Atamian, has died in London. He gained his fame as a tragedian in Russia, Greece and Turkey, and at the time of his death was arranging for a tour in France and England. He played Shakespeare by preference, Othello and Hamlet being his best roles. In looks he was much like Rubenstein.

THE MAYBRICK CASE.

Secretary and Mrs. Blaine Interested in the Matter. BAR HARBOR, Me., Sept. 23.--The Secretary and Mrs. Blaine left for Augusta to-day. Mrs. Blaine has in possession many letters constantly in receipt of letters urging her to use her influence with the Secretary of State and induce him to communicate with the British authorities in the matter. About two weeks ago a petition for Mrs. Maybrick's pardon, signed by the members of the Canadian Society in Lincoln for presentation to the Queen.

Among those present are Senator Faulkner of West Virginia, Congressman Ely of Indiana and Charles H. Blacker, resident of the National Association of Democratic Clubs. The address of welcome was made by State Senator Dunn of Tacoma. In response Mr. Blaine has in possession many letters constantly in receipt of letters urging her to use her influence with the Secretary of State and induce him to communicate with the British authorities in the matter. About two weeks ago a petition for Mrs. Maybrick's pardon, signed by the members of the Canadian Society in Lincoln for presentation to the Queen.

Harvest Festival.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 23.--The harvest festival was celebrated here to-day. The buildings were covered with bunting, and many of them showed sheaves of wheat bound in fantastic forms. NEW PUBLICATIONS.

A. W. Spalding & Bro., New York, has issued new official football rules for the season of 1891. It is the most complete book of the kind they ever sent out, and to those interested in the game every page is important. Walter Camp, the best-known football authority in America, has not only edited the book, but has written an admirable article explaining the changes in the rules and the causes that led thereto, and also describing in a most interesting manner the different modes of play now in vogue. He speaks of the origin of the now famous "trick" and also of the manner in which it was so much and so successfully used in the past season.

The famous "wedge" trick is also dwelt upon, and in fact every point of the game, including kicking, passing, running around the ends, etc. In addition to this article and the official rules of the American Intercollegiate Football Association. The article written by Mr. Camp is not only copy-righted, but is the only official football guide published this year.

From the accomplished author, Eleanor Jones, comes a new work, "The Way to Health and Beauty." It is a book of practical value. We have examined this book with interest and are prepared to commend it as a pamphlet which every citizen can read with profit.
