

GRANDURS OF YELLOWSTONE.

A Trip Through the Famous National Park of Wonders.

A Most Interesting Lecture by Rev. Dr. Dille—Something About the Great Geysers.

Rev. Dr. Dille, formerly of Sacramento, but now a resident of Oakland, lectured to a very large audience last evening at the Sixth-street M. E. Church, on the wonders of Yellowstone Park.

Dr. Dille is a magnetic and eloquent talker, and his powers of description are admirable. He possesses a fund of humor, and that is refreshing. Last evening he had a stereopticon, and a large variety of views of the wonderful National Park, which greatly added to the effectiveness of his lecture.

He began by giving a brief description of the experiences and surprises a traveler has who first visits Yellowstone, and of the awe he is subject to when he gazes upon the great geysers, hears the rumbling beneath the earth, and looks up at the great mountains and perpendicular cliffs.

The ground upon which one has to tread all through the geyser basin is of a decidedly shaky and nerve-straining character. A constant rumbling noise is going on under one's feet, and it is as if one was walking on a very thin piece of pie crust. Even in the hotel near this particular geyser the same sensation was felt.

There are places there where the earth has sunken considerably, and Dr. Dille said he would not be surprised some day to see the hotel sink out of sight.

The speaker took his audience to a little knoll which protruded from the waters of a pretty lake. In the center of this knoll was a hot spring. While this was being looked at, Dr. Dille told a story. That knoll, according to his story, would be a splendid place for a shipwrecked party to land.

From here, a road was traversed, which was of a considerable length. Though only a mile long it cost $14,000. It was built on an almost solid rock. It passed through a series of canyons called the Golden Gate, on account of the golden color of the rock.

Some of the Yellowstone forests were seen on this route. The forest here does not amount to a great deal, but this is due up for by the presence of the wonderful petrified forests.

So grand to behold. In the Yellowstone valley were great numbers of antelope, buffalo, elk, deer and other animals. They were protected by law from the ravages of the huntsman. Next was seen the famous glass mountain, a solid mountain of one of the most wonderful features of the park.

It is composed of glass. Great difficulty was experienced in building a road around it. It could not be successfully drilled or blasted, so large fires had to be built, and then, by throwing on water, the glass would crumble away to a sufficient depth for the road.

"There used to be some Indians in the park," said Dr. Dille, "but they are not there now. The deadly fire, and the deadlier fire-water, of the igneous white man made sad havoc with poor Lo."

The next interesting sight was the great "steam vent." This was a immense hole in a still more immense rock, from which belched forth great bodies of superheated steam in regular pulsations. And the odor emitted was not the pleasant. The speaker said it struck him as being a good deal like that he used to inhale near China Slough when he resided here. This vent was near the Geyser Basin Hotel.

"FAINT-POTS." Were next seen. These were a number of mounds with craters, looking for all the world like many pots. They were filled with mud, and the mud, throbbing colored mud—or something like it—looking more like paint. The steam would gather beneath the mud, gradually raise it, bubble-like, and then the whole would burst, throwing the colors from the spring in the shape of a beautiful rose.

"It is pleasant," said Dr. Dille, "to stand there and watch the roses as they bloom in the spring, tra-la." The next stop was at Midway Geyser, and thence to Excelsior Geyser. The latter, when in eruption, throws the boiling water and steam 300 feet into the air, and is a grand sight. These eruptions only take place every three years, but when they did occur they shook the entire valley. Five hundred feet from the Excelsior geyser, the water was boiling. This was another feature of wonderland. Every color in the rainbow could be seen in the lake.

From Midway geyser to the Upper geyser region there were some 440 geysers, of all sizes, in all stages of activity. While some of them were quiet and regular in their play, others were like a great many people—ready to spout on any occasion.

The Fire-hole River was next seen, and from here Dr. Dille took his guests to the Old Faithful geyser. This one spouted every sixty-three minutes, year in, year out—not varying two minutes in its regularity during a whole day. It threw the water 200 feet high. The twin Giant and Giantess geysers were next seen, and then the Grotto, Castle, Spout and Oblong geysers.

A SURPRISED CHINAMAN. These hot springs, contrary to the general idea, were not good places to wash clothes, explained Mr. Dille. While they were in the deep and yawning Yellowstone cauldron, they were a bar of soap to them, for if it should happen to fall in there it would be an explosion. Soap always makes the springs sick, so the old-timers in the park say. The speaker then related a funny incident that was told about a Chinaman who stepped over one of the springs and proceeded to do his washing. He let the soap slip and fell in. The Chinaman was picked up on the other side of the well.

In conclusion Dr. Dille showed his audience the beautiful Yellowstone Lake in the heart of the Yellowstone river. He followed the river down to the famous falls. They were a series of great tumbling cascades which were beautiful to behold. The first fall was 150 feet to a shelf of solid rock below; then a plunge of 350 feet was taken, followed by several other shorter ones, until it was swallowed up in the deep and yawning Yellowstone cauldron below. Several views of this canyon were had. On either side of it walls of rock rose 2,000 feet high and were almost perpendicular. In fact, no human being has ever yet been able to scale them, and probably never will.

These walls glowed and glistened in all their colors, and the clouds formed a picture that no man could paint. The lecture was a most successful one and was heartily enjoyed by all who attended.

Considerable interest is being taken in the race-meeting between J. L. Gilbert, Alenyaga, and there will be quite a number of the visiting wheelmen present. It will be remembered that Upson and Alenyaga ran a three-mile race in Stockton on the fourth of July, in which Mr. Upson was fouled by Mr. Alenyaga unintentionally, and to-morrow's race has been arranged up to decide the relative merits of the two men.

SANSOM CONVICTED.

"Bull Neck" Kelly's Partner in the Iowa Hill Burglary.

John Sanson, the notorious stage-robber and safe-cracker, who, with the equally notorious "Bull Neck" Kelly, robbed J. F. Brown's store at Iowa Hill of $2,000 worth of jewelry several months ago, has been convicted of that crime.

Sanson is one of the oldest and most desperate criminals in the State. Shortly after this last burglary the police of this city got on his trail, and Officers Arlington and Higgins captured him in Stockton on the night on the Yojo side of the bridge, where he was waiting for Kelly, who was supposed to come up from San Francisco in a three-mile race in Stockton with which they were to do several jobs in this city. But "Bull Neck" did not come up, as he had fallen into the hands of the San Francisco police. Officers Simmons and Gibson of this city recovered most of the stolen jewelry.

NOT QUITE "SKUNKED."

A Hunting Expedition That Was Not Wholly a Failure.

A constable and his deputy went hunting yesterday. They went out in a conveyance drawn by two horses, and were armed to the teeth for quail, train robbers or jack rabbits. They carried shotguns and a description of desperado Dalton.

They had quite an afternoon's hunt in the brush east of the city, and they bagged a couple of suspicious-looking traps.

When the camp was struck the constable braced up, and the deputy looked so cross that the game quailed before them and made no attempt to fly. The officers were not out merely for a day's hunt, but for business, and if they did not get just what they went after it was not their fault.

AMUSEMENTS.

The beautiful piece of mechanism, "The City of Babylon in Miniature," will be shown this afternoon and evening at Turner Hall for the last time. The exhibition will be taken to Stockton on Monday. Those who have not seen it, and are at all interested in historical reading, should visit Turner Hall to-day.

The box-office for "The President" engagement opens at the Metropolitan Theater at 5:30 this morning.

Will be Sent to the Hospital. John Anglan, one of the oldest residents of this city, lies at the Receiving Hospital in a very feeble condition, suffering from asthma and a complication of ailments.

He was taken there from the St. George lodging-house, and will this morning be sent to the County Hospital.

It is said that the patient owns considerable property here, and that he has well-to-do relatives.

Bell's Saturday Sale. To-day, at 10 o'clock, Bell & Co. will sell at auction, at their saleroom, 1004 J street, horses, buggies, wagons, harness, etc.; also, one Antislip piano.

At 11 o'clock they will sell the furniture, mirrors, glassware and stock of a saloon; also, a house of furniture removed to saleroom for convenience of sale.

Died Away From Home. Last night Chief of Police Drew received a telegram from the coroner of Mendocino County requesting him to find and inform Mrs. C. H. Lemery that her husband is dead at Ukiah.

The directory does not contain the name of any such person, and the Chief is at a loss to know how to find her.

Residence at Auction. On Tuesday next, at 10 A. M., Bell & Co. will sell at auction the north three-quarters of lot 5, in the block between D and E, Twelfth and Thirteenth streets. The lot is 90x20, with a new house of six rooms, and is set out to fruit trees and shrubbery.

It costs nineteen cents to send a letter to the Transvaal Republic.

Formation of Hail.

A direct observation of hail in the process of formation is recorded by Professor Tossetti, who, in the afternoon of a squally day, looking eastward through the hills of the Northern Italy, Italy, with two others, entered the court, saw the rain which streamed down from the roof to the right caught by a very powerful breeze one must have driven back and up in thick drops. Suddenly a south wind blew, and the drops, tossed about in all directions, were transformed into ice-balls. When the south wind ceased this transformation also ceased, but whenever the south wind recurred the phenomenon was reproduced, and this was observed three or four times in ten minutes.

Vapor Poison and Its Antidote.

The morning and evening mists that pervade the atmosphere of malarious localities cannot be breathed with impunity. A safeguard is needed to render harmless the dangerous miasma with which they are impregnated. The surest, safest defense is Loeffer's Stomach Bitters. It is an antidote to the poison which has already been inhaled and borne fruit, an adequate preventive of its harmful effects. Very prepared for brothers of miasma tainted air or drinkers of malarial poisoned water like the Bitters. It completely neutralizes the otherwise irresistible onset of the serious and dangerous symptoms of land, excavators of canal routes (notably that on the Isthmus of Panama), western pioneers and emigrants—in short, all subjects to malarial influences in air or water find in it a benign remedy, an effective safeguard. Disorders of the stomach, rheumatism, kidney complaints are remedied by the Bitters.
