

MUTINIOUS SOLDIERS.

ANOTHER OUTBREAK IN THE GRENADEER GUARDS.

Ill-Feeling Among Many of the Corps on Account of Insufficient and Unpalatable Rations.

Special to the Record-Union.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—Military circles and the public in general were started to-day by the publication in the columns of Truth of the details of another mutinous outbreak on the part of the Grenadier Guards, who are now stationed at Windsor Castle. This second mutiny of the same battalion within six months had its origin in the ill-feeling permeating many of the corps of the British army on account of the insufficient and unpalatable rations which the men claimed, were served them for their meals on Wednesday, October 14th. The rations, they claim, were especially bad, and caused the smoldering feeling of insubordination to break out. The privates of Company One refused to eat the rations, and they were confined to the barracks for one day, and the Corporals of the same company were placed under arrest pending an inquiry into the mutinous conduct of their privates. The inquiry made into the outbreak showed that the Grenadiers had upon a previous occasion complained of the quality of the bread served to them, and the justice of their complaint not being admitted, the men threw the bread out of the barracks windows into the square. The Adjutant of the Third Battalion declared that he was not aware that the men had acted in the manner mentioned, adding that he was wholly ignorant of the entire incident, and that he had not received any report upon the subject. Thereupon, Truth says, the evidence of one hundred witnesses can prove these facts. If such an outbreak and its consequent arrests are possible without the Colonel or the Adjutant knowing of them, the worst said about the men is not far short of the truth. The officers of the Guards admit that there was a row, but refuse to give particulars, declaring the trouble of a trivial nature.

SHAMEFUL EXHIBITION.

Two Pugilists Engage in a Brutal Fight in Connecticut.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—About 200 sports from this city and Brooklyn journeyed to the road-house last night near Danbury, Conn., where they witnessed a kid-glove fight to the finish between Jack Bates of Ohio and Joe Daley of New York. It was after 1 o'clock this morning when the men entered the ring. Con. McAuliffe, brother of the famous light-weight champion pugilist, was selected as referee. The fight was a sort of go-as-you-please affair, and at one time the referee allowed the whole 200 were going to take a hand in it. The wildest excitement prevailed, while all hands were endeavoring to separate the fighters, who had their teeth fastened in each other like two bull-dogs. Fully five minutes was lost in trying to restore peace. The men started off in good shape, and for the first four rounds they fought fairly. Daley received some severe punishment, which induced him to commence using his fists. The fouling commenced about the latter part of the fourth round, and before the close of the fifth round everybody in the ring was shouting and jostling one another, and shouting "Foul!" at the top of their voices. In the sixth round, during one of the clinches, Daley managed to get his thumb into Bates' mouth, and managed to increase the size of it by running it up into the left cheek. Bates bled freely, and first blood was claimed for and allowed Daley. The men had to be separated frequently in this round, as they both fouled all they knew how every time they came together. At the call of time Daley evidently did not think things were evened up, as he followed Bates to his corner and bit a piece out of his shoulder. It was sold-blooded, but still it was allowed, despite all the protests of the crowd, who went there to see a fight to a finish, and so long as both men were fighting, the spectators wanted to see it out, and the referee wanted to see it out, and the seventh round was a rough-and-tumble affair of the most approved style, consisting of choking, biting, kicking, gouging and all kinds of unfair fighting. Daley, who started all the fight, got decidedly the best of that his own peculiar style of pugilism. He finally ran out of the ring to escape his punishment, but he was thrown back into the ring again by his own friends and told to fight his medicine. He made several more attempts to turn and make his escape, but each time he was headed off by the crowd and pushed back into the ring. The eighth and last round was of short duration, as all fight had been punched out of Daley, and his only aim seemed to be to get out of the ring as far away from the fists of Bates as possible. Finally, in his mad effort to escape, he smashed McAuliffe in the face and dived under the ropes, and was out like an arrow, and there was nothing else left for McAuliffe to do but give the victory to Bates, which he did, and then all hands started for their homes.

TOOK HIS OWN LIFE.

Unhappy Domestic Relation Causes E. E. Marshall to Take His Own Life.

CHICAGO, Oct. 28.—Edwin E. Marshall of the United States Navy shot himself dead at his hotel this morning, as a result of trouble between himself and his young and beautiful wife. Marshall and his wife were married at Denver last February, but had not lived together happily. His wife finally left him, it is said, and made her way to California. The husband started in hot pursuit, and after scouring several Western States he was hunted down in Chicago. She quit the hotel about three weeks ago, and just a few minutes after her husband arrived. In desperation the wife charged herself in the city, fearing her husband would murder her. She commenced proceedings against him for divorce and a share in his property. The wife charged that her husband so abused her that she had to leave him. Marshall's rank in the navy is not known, but it is said he is connected with one of the United States men-of-war at Philadelphia.

PHILOSOPHY FROM TEXAS.

Cloves on the breath is a plea of guilty. The parlor is the matrimonial marketplace. A proverb is a clearly stated fact with whiskers on it. A DRAMATIC MEETING.

The Tragic Ending of the Man With the Cataract Eye.

The stage from Virginia City to Gallatin, Montana, has been "held up" so often that the horses seemed to know just where to halt and how long to wait. The road agents worked in pairs, as a rule, but sometimes there were three or four in a bunch. There were five of us on the trip I am telling about. Four of us were pretty well acquainted; the fifth man no one knew. He was not only a neatly-looking man in a general way, but he had a cataract covering his entire left eye and blinding it and this gave him a gruesome appearance. We stopped at Fort Ellis, looking sharply, and with a troubled expression of face, and when the opportunity offered, he slipped out of the car and hid in a bush. "Boys, I'm satisfied that the stranger is a road agent, and when the proper time arrives he'll show his hand. In case of attack leave him to me, and attend to the others."

SHALL WE DRIVE SLOW POISON FROM OUR BREAKFAST TABLE?

ALUM AND AMMONIA IN OUR BREAD.

A nuisance that troubled England fifty years ago is now rapidly spreading in this country, that is putting alum in the bread we eat. This question is causing a great deal of discussion at the present moment, and it is revealed that alum is being used in a substantial quantity in the baking of bread. A story is told that a very large percentage of the baking powder sold on the market contain either alum or ammonia, and many of them contain both these pernicious drugs. Much timely alarm is felt at the wholesale use of alum in bread, biscuit and pastry. To young children, growing into persons of weakly frame, alum bread eaten morning, noon and evening is the most harmful. It is the small quantities taken at every meal that do the mischief. Alum is cheap, costing but two or three cents a pound, while cream of tartar costs thirty cents, and the high price of cream of tartar has led to the use of alum in the baking powder. If the reader wants to know something of the corrosive qualities of alum, let him touch a piece of his tongue with a little of it, and he will find it a delicate taste to the stomach.

ONCE WAS ENOUGH.

An Old Veteran's Fear of the Bunko Men.

An old fellow in a Grand Army suit and still wearing a Colorado badge sat in the Michigan Central depot last evening, and depositing his satchel on the floor, sat down with a sigh of relief. Everyone who came near him was watched with a suspicious glance, and if anyone got too close he would hold his breast pocket with both hands, and finally other veteran who was just getting ready to go home, after using a few side-trip tickets for excursions from Detroit, approached and extending his hand, remarked: "How are you, comrade? Been enjoying yourself?" "Never mind me now; I'm all right; you just keep away," returned the old chap, snatching up his grip and rising from the seat. "What's the matter, friend?" Did I ever do you any harm?" inquired the other in astonishment. "I dunno as you did; but yet to blame inquisitive, that's all; keep away," and he raised his grip threateningly. "Say, comrade, don't get excited. I just supposed you had remained over from the excitement of the above company. I did get away, now."
