

DOE SOUTH.

"Len" Finishes the Notes of Her Southern Trip.

A Quaint and Curious Style of Descriptive Writing—Home at Last.

San Diego has a fine Courthouse, that cost $15,000. It impressed some of our party so that they said if they had any country to do they would like to locate there. Five and a half miles of cable road, forty-two miles of street railway, gives the traveler every chance to see the city. One day we chanced on a car driver that did not seem to be particularly proud of his eyes were as the plus mark, he was minus a finger, and when the car went off the track every passenger arose to get it on its base before we could pursue the tenor of our way.

We went over the hills and far away to see the San Diego Mission. When we reached the turn-table we could see the Mission some two miles away. Distance lent enchantment, although we did not want to borrow any. The Mission itself there. The good saints will pardon our omission in not walking those two miles. We did our duty visiting bazaars and cario places, and looking at the beautiful drawn work and raised embroidery of the Mexicans, but for repose, or raised embossed work, or even drawn work, San Pedro fields are the most interesting.

We said good-bye to San Diego with regret, and took the picturesque ocean-side route to Los Angeles. The afternoon was warm, but the breeze from old ocean to us was cool, calm and collected. We found the angels all well, and off their boom; settled down to thriving business, that has more fruit than any other. The trunks and cable-cars were always packed with people.

The Hollenbeck, Nadeau and Westmister are the handsome blocks that have been built within four years. Many business blocks, built of dark gray Ventura granite and pressed red brick of a dark tinge, with architectural designs, and as specimens of architecture compare with any large city East.

The restaurant is numerous and good. Bayard Taylor said restaurant was derived from res, a thing, and tourist, a bull; therefore, a bully thing for hungry travelers. The Green Hotel is another fine hotel, the other half is another fine hotel, the other half is another fine hotel.

There seemed to be a lack of evening amusement here for a city the size of Los Angeles, so we took a cable-car out to the cemetery, and exchanged epitaphs all the way back to the Hollenbeck. One was: "Mary Ann lies here at rest, with her head on Abraham's big, but awful foot on Abraham."

Just as this was given a man boarded the car and handed around for our inspection an egg the size of a bowl. When one asked if it was a low-begged hen laid this, the conductor laid away his bell-punch, and the orange blossoms in the hair of the headlight wilted, and we stepped off.

We went out to Pasadena—"Crown of the Valley"—passing Governor Markham's pretty home, and the big Raymond Hotel, now closed for the summer. The Green Hotel is another fine hotel, the other half is another fine hotel, the other half is another fine hotel.

Pasadena is a temperance town, and we were all as dry as Pomegranate. As would not see any more of the cause that is spirited when first poured out, it comes under the head of spirituous liquors.

I grew warmer in Los Angeles and we left for Redonda, and from there took the steamer Corona. Stopping at Port Harford we met the Captain, had a word with Captain Hall, and then took the train for San Luis Obispo, and spent most of the day in this town surrounded by high hills. The big Ramona is another fine hotel. The southern soil is adapted for raising these mammoth irms. San Luisites raise honey, beans, olives and the county grows the most asphaltum being mined the most. One Eastern man said he "just was filled with awe at the sights he saw in California."

He was told that the safe to express himself so in California; he'd be staid out for a claim the first thing he knew. We visit the Mission here and are in time for the answering notes received by a noted Vicar-General. Oh! but his robes were gorgeous. He kept his hands turned to us, but could not find it unbridled so we looked. "He was lovely in the beauty."

The adobe part of the Mission has concluded not to stick to its contract forever and it has given up in many places. We viewed the spots left with interest—ten per cent.

In the meantime the Corona is loading freight—a full supply of it here. I see lots of flaxseed going on board. I don't know if the flaxseed is to be used for big person probably, as there are sacks and sacks of it.

Captain Alexander of the Corona is a genial gentleman, and tells some fine yarns. He takes the Queen after this trip. She is a much larger boat. Evening brings a fog that holds the land and sea in thrall, and foreshadowing hangs from the halcyons. The fog chokes the Corona's whistle, and she seems very house as she blows a warning note. As would not see any more of the cause that is spirited when first poured out, it comes under the head of spirituous liquors.

Morning comes and the fog raises. "What high land is that?" asks a deck-walker. "Cascara Sagrada Range," promptly replies the deck-walker. Suddenly a "golden glamor stole as through a tiny seam," the waves were lit with glory as we crossed the bar. The city clocks struck midday, and we came to the Broadway wharf, with loud and long regrets that our course was not due south for a longer period. We have seen much, we have made many friends, and if my vis-a-vis at the Captain's table—a professional man of Sacramento—sees this, I would like him to know our party expects cards and cake if he knows of any, all right.
