

FOURGOURS TELLS HIS STORY.

He Says His Wife Drank to Excess and Was Very Abusive.

She Attempted to Shoot Him, and in the Struggle the Revolver Went Off.

The trial of August Fourgours, the Frenchman who is accused of murdering his wife, is drawing to a close. The evidence for the defense--tending to establish the fact that Mrs. Fourgours' death was accidental--is all in, and only the rebuttal evidence is yet to be heard.

Fourgours occupied the witness-stand during the greater part of yesterday, and told his story of the tragedy through an interpreter. Fourgours is not a bad-looking man, dresses neatly and is a typical Frenchman--being all of the gestures, shoulder-shrugs and facial contortions when conversing, especially when excited.

He gave the history of his life in France from the time of his birth until he was given employment in the mines at Oezit. Here he met with an accident from which he says he never fully recovered, being constantly troubled with pains in his head.

He arrived in Sacramento in 1880 and went to work in the railroad shops. He married the deceased in 1880. She was older than he by twelve years. She was much stronger and larger than he, too.

AT LAMET'S HOUSE. "A few months after our marriage," continued Fourgours, "my wife forebore to move with Mr. Lamet, the baker, who resided on J street. I afterward moved several times to please my wife, finally taking a house on Tenth near U street.

"I worked at the shop almost every day, and I gave all my wages to my wife. At home I did the housework, but always cut the wood. I made wine several times, but never would have done so had not my wife requested it, and she was very fond of it.

"One day, a short time before the homicide, I came home and found my wife had no supper prepared for me. I asked her why it was so, and she gave me no answer, but told me to go to the cellar and drink a glass of wine.

THE WINE GONE. "I afterward went for the wine and found the demijohn, which was in the morning, was empty. I asked my wife what had become of the wine. She did not answer me, but said: 'Wait, I will get you some more wine, and I will broom and break the handle over my head. She then picked up a hatchet and threw it at me, striking me in the face, cutting a gash under my left eye.

Attorney Johnson here referred Fourgours to the testimony given by the witness Mrs. Armbruster, and Fourgours became greatly agitated, and he looked at Mrs. Armbruster as "a liar and a drunkard like her husband," and had to be admonished by the court not to get so demonstrative. "On several occasions during his evidence, when the names of various witnesses for the prosecution were mentioned, he seemed particularly angry against Lamet, the baker, whom he declared had robbed him of his wife's affections.

STORY OF THE KILLING. Fourgours told the story of the homicide in a dramatic way. "Surely," he said, "I remember the Sunday of her death, got up at 6:30 in the morning and got my breakfast at the Garibaldi House. I did not eat at home because my wife was doing the housework at Lamet's. She had been working there about twenty days. After I had eaten my breakfast that Sunday I went to Lamet's with my wife and then came down town. I went to see B. Ferant, then to Grosjean's, the barber, where I got shaved, and then I went home. I got home at 10:30 A. M. I drank no liquor while down town. My wife was not at home when I got there. I did various chores, and about 12:45 my wife came home. I did not drink any wine at home before my wife came. She came in rapidly and I said: 'I was not expecting you yet; you need not bother yourself. As soon as she entered the house

SHE BEGAN TO GROWL. And said: 'What have you done?' I told her I had washed the dishes, made a fire, split wood, swept the house, fed the chickens and done all the housework. She asked her what did she expect and why did she growl so much. I said: 'Besides, you bring me nothing to eat.' She said: 'Yes, I did,' and set out four chicken legs and two chicken heads. She told me to get some wine, I did so, and asked: 'Do you want to eat a bite with me?' and she said: 'Yes, I am very little to eat.' She sat at the table and took a chicken head and some limburger. I noticed she was making very good, and I told her she must have been thirsty. She said I begged her the wine she drank, and I told her I begged her nothing. Then we had some words, and she went to attend to my wood and not to mind her. I asked her for a clean shirt, and she said the Chinaman would bring it next day.

MRS. FOURGOURS' DAUGHTER. "Then I went out to split wood, and when I came in Minnie Heisch, my wife's daughter, was there. I asked her why she came on Sunday, and she said she would be at home, and she said she knew her mother would be at home. My wife told me: 'Let us talk quietly; you attend to the wood.' Then I asked about a shirt, that I might go out, and she said: 'You don't want a shirt; if you get a shirt in time to go to work to-morrow, it will be time enough.

"I went out again and soon saw Minnie going away. I went in and saw that my wife was mad, and I told her that Minnie came there and put things in her head. I went out and called to Minnie that she gave my wife bad advice, and that I had told her not to come. My wife said I had no right to forbid people coming, and I said I was boss in my own house. Then I went in again and the trouble began. I accused her of being false, and she abused me. I went out into the back yard again to get quiet."

THE KILLING. Fourgours hesitated a moment, running his fingers nervously through his curly hair, and then proceeded. When he attempted to return to the house again he met his wife at the door. She had his pistol in her hand and pointed it at him. At this point of Fourgours' recital he jumped to his feet, and in an excited manner, gesturing all the while, he related how he seized his wife's hands. A struggle followed, which Fourgours intimated was the while growing more excited. "I held her hands," he said, loudly, "and then she fell the floor. I fell upon her and begged her to get up, but she could not. Oh, God! how unhappy! My poor wife!"

Fourgours clasped his hands above his head, as if in supplication, and continued to talk wildly in French. The interpreter could not follow him, and so the jury lost much of what he said.

Fourgours appeared to be considerably exhausted when he had concluded his narration. He was then taken down, and Judge Van Fleet ordered a recess.

ON CROSS-EXAMINATION. In the afternoon Fourgours was cross-examined for quite awhile by District Attorney Ryan. Fourgours repeated in more detail the statements about his wife's habits. He said she was a bad woman, possessing an unusually violent temper. She often struck him and he did not dare to strike back. He claimed that he had never mingled much in the society of women before meeting her, and that she led him astray.

Fourgours denied that he left Lamet's house because he was jealous of Lamet. He was jealous of Lamet, but that was not the cause of his leaving. Lamet's son had blown cigars into his face, and when he reprimanded him he got into an altercation with the father, resulting in his leaving the house.

After the cross-examination of Fourgours several witnesses were called by the defense to prove Fourgours' good character, and then the defense rested. Rebuttal testimony was being taken when an adjournment was had.

AMUSEMENTS.

At the Metropolitan Theater this evening the sparkling new farcical comedy entitled "Dr. Bill" will be played. It is an adaptation from the French of Albert Carre. The Boston Traveller says of the play: "Dr. Bill," which has been hailed as the "laughing success of a 102 nights' run at the Madison Square Theater, opened at the Hollis last evening in the presence of a large and fashionable assemblage.

"Dr. Bill," from the start, caught the fancy and provoked the laughter of the audience, whose long continued and emphatic demonstrations of approval warranted the statement that "Dr. Bill" is a "go." The piece is a light and airy farce--heavily combed on conventional lines. "Dr. Bill" is a rich young physician in London who marries, and in order to escape from his theatrical and other too worldly friends decides to give up his practice. His plans to lead a strictly domestic life are frustrated by his father-in-law, who designedly causes his son-in-law doctor's name to be published in the press in such a connection as to overwhelm him with patients. In this way his old loves of the theatrical profession find him out. Chief among them are Mrs. Horton, now the wife of a police inspector, and the gay and festive Miss Faulstich, danseuse by profession. Once they are thrown together both by design and accident, there ensues a series of situations, laughable, ridiculous and at one time not altogether consistent with modern ideas of social propriety. The "kangaroo" dance was one of the taking features of the performance. Success was most pronounced. "Dr. Bill" has many elements of attractiveness. Its action is swift and changing, the dialogue, while not lacking in wit, is never dull, and the stage appointments are first-class.

PARDONED AND NOT PARDONED.

The Governor's Action on a Batch of Applications.

Loss of an Arm While a Convict Not Considered Sufficient Reason for Granting a Pardon.

Governor Markham issued a pardon yesterday to E. J. Beebe, who is serving a life sentence at San Quentin for the alleged murder of a man in Modoc County in April, 1884. The pardon was recommended by the Board of Prison Directors. It has been made to appear beyond question by the advocates of responsible parties, the statement of the presiding judge at the trial, the District Attorney and the special prosecuting attorney, that Beebe was convicted upon testimony which was false, but which at the time of the trial was not known to be so.

COMMUTATION OF A WOMAN'S SENTENCE. The sentence of Mrs. Julia Ryan, who was convicted of perjury in San Joaquin County in January, 1888, and ordered imprisoned for fourteen years, was yesterday commuted to nine years. The Governor gives the following reasons: "The commutation of the sentence of Mrs. Julia Ryan to nine years has been recommended by the Board of Prison Directors for her extreme old age; that the sentence was excessive; that her behavior while a prisoner has been good, and that she has proven herself a repentant and deserving person while undergoing incarceration."

JUSTLY SENTENCED. The following applications were refused: Jacob Funder, convicted of embezzlement in Alameda County in May, 1888, and sentenced to three and a half years imprisonment. The Prison Directors, after an investigation, have denied the application he denied for the reason that there is nothing to show his innocence. His sentence was not excessive for the crime committed, and his term will expire in January, 1892.

A SIMILAR CASE. Frank Wilson, convicted in February, 1887, for grand larceny, in San Francisco, and sentenced to five years' imprisonment. The Board of Prison Directors recommended that the application be denied for the reason that the injury occasioned in prison (his arm was cut off in the reason that the character of the some officer of the State, should not be considered a ground for pardon.

Couldn't Pay His Bills. The Entrance saloon on K street, kept by T. H. Hart, was closed by creditors yesterday. Frank Rubinstaller, attached the place because of the non-payment of a bill of $234. Paul Packy, a bartender at the saloon, also has a bill of $138 for wages.

Thanksgiving and Spring Races. There will be a meeting of the members of the Capital Turf and Driving Club at the Golden Eagle Hotel on Saturday evening at 8 o'clock. The meeting is called to arrange for Thanksgiving races and decide upon the character of the spring meeting. Every member of the club and interested horsemen are asked to be on hand promptly.

Folsom Brandy Wins a Premium. A citizen of Folsom has received the first premium for his exhibit of brandy at the Missouri State Fair, held recently at St. Louis. The brandy was made from grapes grown near Folsom.

Normal School Directors. The Governor yesterday appointed the following Directors of the Chico Normal School: F. H. Greely, Marysville, J. S. Cone, Red Bluff, A. H. Crew, F. C. Lusk and John Bidwell, Chico.

Block of Land at Auction. At 10 o'clock A. M. to-day Bell & Co. will sell at auction the fine block of land between Thirteenth and Fourteenth, U and V streets. Also, two lots, corner Tenth and T streets.

NEW ARMY TACTICS.

Something More About the Radical Changes Proposed.

The Upton School Will Be Departed From Entirely--New Manual of Arms.

In addition to the changes noted by the RECORD-UNION a week ago in the new drill, may be mentioned the following: The "about face" is executed by turning on the right heel and ball of the left foot and bringing the left foot beside the right. The facings are done by turning on the left heel assisted by a pressure on the ball of the right foot. In "parade rest," the right foot is drawn back six inches instead of three. The salute with the hand is in two motions, raising the hand to the forehead and dropping it by the side--a change for the better decidedly. There are seventeen "setting-up" exercises instead of four as in Upton.

"ORDER" INSTEAD OF "CARRY." When the men fall into line with arms, the pieces are at an "order" instead of "carry," and the chambers must be opened before and after drill. In "order arms" the butt rests evenly on the ground, and the hands are before. This will cause the barrel to incline to the front. The piece can be brought to the "right shoulder" from the "order" or "carry," and is returned to either from the right shoulder.

The command will now be "port arms" instead of "arms port," and this can be executed from "order" or "carry" also. Arms are brought to "port" from right shoulder and the reverse. Bayonets can be unfixed from "port," and the position of "charge" from the "order" as well as the "carry."

LOADING TACTICS. Troops can "load" from the carry or order also, each rear-rank man stepping off obligingly with the left foot to the right, the front-rank men half facing to the right, etc. "Stacks" will not be made with the bayonets if the rifles have the stacking swivel. The bayonet "slung" arms is introduced. When a company or squad "falls in," the man on the right steps to his position, facing to the front, and the left hand, placing his knuckles next his body, above the hips, back of the hand to the front. The next man dresses up to him until he reaches number one's elbow with his right arm, and then number two places his left elbow as did number one, for the third man to dress on, and so on to the left. When the recruits have all fallen in and the DRILL IS VERIFIED. The left arm of each is dropped to the side, the right arm is raised to the level of six inches between the men. To preserve this interval in marching to the front, they may occasionally glance toward the guide, but the head is as little as possible. The bayonet drill seems to be simple and effective.

In the School of the Company the men are grouped in platoons, each comprising seven men, with a Corporal, who is the leader. Two or three squads are termed a section, with a Sergeant as chief. There are two sections in a company, and two sections in each platoon. To form the company

THE FIRST SERGEANT Takes his position in front of where the center of the company is to be and commands, "Fall in." The Second Sergeant places himself facing the front where the right of the company is to rest, and the left arm of the company is to rest in the manner described for the formation of the squad.

The commands and movements of the company drill are pretty much the same as in Upton, and there will be no difficulty in making the changes if a due degree of intelligence is given the subject by the officers and men.

RADICAL CHANGES. The greatest changes are in the extended order or skirmish drill. The Captain is the instructor. If the firing line consists of a platoon, it is commanded by its Lieutenant. The First Sergeant is near the Captain. Scouts are sent out in advance of the firing line and send back information by hand. The drill will be found to be most complete, and if studied thoroughly will enable a commander to maneuver his troops as if in actual battle.

The officers must be prepared to discuss the various changes and evolutions, so that all may understand them alike. The brigade staff should attend as well as the regimental officers.

THE EVENT AT AUBURN.

An Auspicious Opening of the New Opera-House.

Governor Markham and Other Notables in Attendance--It Was a Brilliant Affair.

AUBURN, Nov. 19.--The opening and dedication of the new opera-house to-night was an event which will go down in the history of Auburn. The new play-house is without doubt one of the handsomest and costliest in any city on the coast outside of San Francisco. Auburn has a gem, and its citizens deserve great credit for their enterprise. A full description of the opera-house was recently given in the RECORD-UNION.

The entrance to the theater to-night was cramped beneath a veritable pyramid of choicest flowers and ferns, and presented a beautiful sight. Inside the theater were also many beautiful floral decorations--the orchestra and footlights being almost buried under them.

A special train arrived from Sacramento at 7 o'clock, bearing Governor Markham, Colonel J. B. Wright and other notables. The train stopped at Roseville, Rocklin, Penryn and Newcastle, and took on many guests who desired to attend the opening.

The management could easily have packed the theater, but wisely refrained from doing so. As it was the audience was a very select and fashionable one--a metropolitan audience. In fact, it was nothing provincial about it. One of the stage boxes was occupied by Governor Markham, Colonel J. B. Wright, Edgar B. Carroll and wife, Miss Laura C. Clark, Mrs. Fred Birdsall and Miss Etta Birdsall, all of Sacramento; the other box contained Major S. A. Hildreth, and wife and Mrs. Agard. Among the audience were noted B. R. Crocker and wife, J. Henry (manager of the Sacramento theater) and wife, W. H. Hamilton (who designed the new theater) and wife, Dr. Perkins and wife, Dr. Deuel and wife, Mrs. William Beckman, Mrs. Allen Towle, Colonel E. R. Hamilton and wife, Adolph Schell, J. D. Kelly, W. C. Collins, and others.

When the Governor entered he was loudly applauded. He graciously acknowledged the compliment. The evening's entertainment opened with an act "curtain-raiser" called "Sunset," which was followed by the farce-comedy entitled "Dr. Bill." Between the two pieces Lincoln Baker, a member of the company, delivered a neat dedicatory address. He commented the new theater highly, and said it surpassed the playhouses of communities far more pretentious than Auburn.

The Newcastle band and orchestra furnished the music for the evening and acquitted itself well. The programmes distributed were beautiful specimens of the printing art, and were intended as souvenirs.

Praise is due Edwin F. Wright, the young man who has the management of the new theater. He has all the qualifications necessary in making a successful theatrical manager.

The theater is illuminated entirely by incandescent lights. The handling of these lights is a fine thing. The lighting was excellent in the dark scenes, and proved that electricity can take the place of gas easily in theatrically.

BRIEF NOTES. Next Sunday Dr. Crook, President of the University of the Pacific, will preach in the Sixth-street M. E. Church at the morning service.

Court Capital, Ancient Order of Foresters, will give a party at Turner Hall this evening. The grand march will take place at 8:30 P. M.

The case of P. Spain, charged with threats against the life of his daughter, was continued in the Police Court yesterday until Tuesday next.

The interment of the late William Winkelman was not in the Grand Army plot, as was supposed, but by the side of his little son in the family plot.

Last night a novel and enjoyable party of the "clothespin" variety was given at Turner Hall by Summer Corps, G. A. R. There were about one hundred literary exercises before dancing commenced.

E. A. Scott, one of the men who are said to have recently won $125 from L. B. Green, a saloon man, by a swindling gaming trick, has been arrested by the San Francisco police, and will be brought back here.

Otto Bell, Organizer of the American Federation of Trades, having received the charter and supplies for the Springmakers' Union, has delivered them to the union and given final instructions as to the conduct of the union's business.

A SCARED PEDDLER.

He Gives a Young Man a Ride Into the City, and Declares That the Latter Then Assaulted Him in His Wagon--Rescued by a Citizen.

Last evening a Jewish peddler called at the Police Station to procure a warrant for the arrest of a young man named Harnett, who he said had beaten him.

His story was that he was coming to town in his wagon, when he met Harnett a mile or two below the city, on the Freeport road, and gave him a ride. While driving down the Y-street levee, and when nearly opposite the brick-yards, Harnett, he says, asked him what he had in some boxes that were in the wagon, and when he refused to tell him Harnett assaulted him.

During the scuffle that ensued the horse backed the wagon down into the canal, where it was wrecked. The peddler said he got hold of a monkey-wrench and beat his assailant with it, but a man came along and separated them, and then Harnett got away.

Louis Kinkella, a night waiter at the Saddle Rock Restaurant, who lives at the corner of Y and T streets, witnessed a part of the affair. He saw the peddler and another man ride past his house, and soon afterward heard a cry of "Murder!" being uttered from the wagon backed into the ditch, and the men scuffling in the vehicle. He ran to the place, when the peddler cried out that the other man was trying to kill him.

Kinkella got the young man off the peddler and out upon the levee just as a couple of teamsters drove up. He asked them to hold the man in a prisoner, whom he did not know, and take him to town, as he had barely time to return home, change his clothing and get down to his work at the restaurant. When he came out of his house again he saw the teamsters had gone toward town, while the peddler's assailant was making off by information by hand. The man then gave up, as he had no time to spare.

When he left the place the peddler was unloading his horse, which remained on the edge of the ditch. The wagon was badly wrecked. Captain Lee was understood to say that the peddler merely accused Harnett of having assaulted him, and was told to return this morning to swear to a complaint.

Battalion Drill. Companies A, E and G gave a battalion drill last evening at Armory Hall. The turn-outs of the companies were not as large as they ought to have been, but there were quite a number of men in uniform. Colonel Leitch conducted the drill, and was assisted by Lieutenant Colonel E. H. McKee. A large number of spectators were present.

All Roberts Indicted. A telegram from Auburn yesterday stated that the Grand Jury of Placer County had indicted Al Roberts for participation in the Colfax train wrecking. It was surprising to all when the Justice of the Peace at Auburn, who has recently examined with his brother Jeff, discharged him.

Wants Damages. Mrs. Mi Hoover, the milliner, has commenced suit in Justice Henry's court, against photographer Beals, for $75 damages and costs of suits. She alleges that her stock was damaged to that extent by water dripping through from Beals' laboratory into her establishment.

Pickpocket Convicted. George Moore, alias Cartwright, and Ike Golden were tried before Superior Judge Catlin and a jury yesterday, for attempting to pick the pockets of M. S. Oren during the recent State Fair. The jury found a verdict of guilty.

Legitimate Investments. Parties who contemplate or are desirous of going into business will do well to their interest to consult the Carnall-Hopkins Co., w. o. Upton, agents for the Commercial Agency Department, which offers business opportunities. Offered companies include: restaurants, lodging-houses, hotels, groceries, drug and general merchandise stores, etc., etc. in San Francisco and throughout the State. Address all communications to the Carnall-Hopkins Co. Commercial Agency Department, 624 Market street, San Francisco.

THE GREAT LOTTERY.

IT IS A DANGEROUS THING NOW-A-DAYS to write anything about a lottery, as the Postmaster-General may see it to exclude the paper from the mails, and thus deprive thousands of our readers of some of the prizes won. The editor of this particular department is going to take chances, however.

Life is nothing but a lottery, and the best prizes are those who win good health. Mr. W. B. Triggs, residing at 612 K street, this city, in a living demonstration of what medical utility can accomplish. He tells the story over in his own signature.

MR. W. B. TRIGGS, 612 K street, states: I realize that I was a sick man. I would arise in the morning feeling that my health was being unstrung, and there was a perceptible absence of ambition, and could not eat or sleep well and began to go into a decline. I preferred good health to sympathy, and instead of waiting until I was just human and I visited the Doctor Williams Dispensary, and was cured of my general debility. I took four weeks' treatment, and was discharged a perfectly cured man.

Many others have also been cured: W. A. Cox, 529 O street, Sacramento, cured of rheumatism and kidney trouble; W. S. Kall, 324 K street, Sacramento, cured of catarrh and nervous troubles. Mrs. Wheeler, El Centro, cured after suffering 13 years.

THE DOCTOR WILLIAMS DISPENSARY is a Medical and Surgical Institute, located permanently at 612 K street, for the cure of all diseases, affections and disorders. A staff of physicians and surgeons, having diplomas and the endorsement of the best colleges of medicine and surgery, skilled specialists, who have had long experience in treating acute and chronic diseases, are in constant attendance. The great advantage of this institution of this character is its self-demonstration. How often has an individual physician been erroneously diagnosed a case, our patients have the advantage of having the entire medical and surgical staff of the dispensary, and all communications received in secret confidence.

Open daily from 9 A. M. to 4 P. M. and 6 to 8. In order to accommodate those who cannot call during the week, we have established Sunday office hours from 9 to 11 A. M.
