NEW CROP OF CALIFORNIA CLAIM HUNTERS.

The last session of Congress reserved from the operation of the homestead laws or any other manner of Government disposition, about 1,200,000 acres surrounding the cession heretofore made by the Government to the State of California of Yosemite Valley.

The geologist, John Muir, is also interesting himself in the matter of retaining the reservation of these six townships. Mr. Muir is introduced into the case for the purpose of giving the reservation a kind of mountain respectability.

The designer of the scheme does not claim for it merit if operated upon a large scale--at least, not upon the outset. He believes that it should be operated by small groups of growers, organized sufficiently to protect the reputation of the producing section, by preventing the forwarding of inferior productions.

The plan has so far met approval, that an organization has been effected to try the experiment of this advertising and selling California fruit. It certainly is worthy of serious consideration, and would seem to warrant trial.

The San Francisco Chronicle is not content to await trial of the new ballot law. Pending its passage the Chronicle hotly opposed the bill--the bosses, indeed, could have had no warmer champion.

The Government made the reservations for the sake of preserving the scenery which attracted visitors and gave these turnpike roads prospective profit.

ants. The frantic efforts to retain the six townships within the reserved limits is being made chiefly by prospective claimants. If their motives are patriotic, let the owners of stage roads, built for private profit, and out of which the reward already earned is ample, make an award of their claims to the people of the United States.

DISPOSAL OF FRUITS BY RETAIL. Before the Fruit-Growers' Association, in annual session at Marysville last week, David Lubin of this city presented a simple plan, which the association seems to have indorsed, for obtaining profitable returns for California fruit sold in foreign markets, and to enlarge the business of disposing of such fruits, either green or dried, and presumably the system suggested could be applied to disposition of other products sold at retail.

The plan eliminates the middleman. It substitutes an agent, employed directly by the grower or groups of growers, to be located in a foreign market--any market, indeed, to which shipments can be profitably made. This agent in turn employs a number of peddlers, either with baskets, with hand-carts, or with horses and wagons, as their capacity may justify.

On the announcement of the expected arrival of a consignment they are called in by the agent, and when the fruit arrives it is priced and given to the peddlers to alone sell direct to the consumer, to be cried on the street or at the door of the consumer. Every peddler makes return at once to the agent, receives his percentage of the sales and the remainder, less the costs of handling, is transmitted to the producer.

By this means the author of the scheme believes that California fruits, green, dried or canned, will be more rapidly introduced than by any other, more and better advertised, and will not larger returns than by the system that employs the commission merchant, who disposes of shipments to retailers and who, in turn, await the coming of the consumer. It is, in short, a sort of object-lesson scheme--this carrying of the product direct to the consumer, and calling his attention to the product, through the evidence of the senses of sight, smell and taste.

It is held that this system will give the producer the maximum price, and will secure him a far wider and better distribution than is possible by any other scheme. The market is, in essence, the consumer, all others related to it being the producer and middle-men. The latter, for causes largely personal, may depress or inflate the market. They may prefer one class of goods to those of rival production. By lack of skill, or unfortunate investment, they may be unable to handle and rapidly distribute consignments; they may occasion a glut by massing the shipments, though the retail price may not fall; or, they may create a scarcity by withholding or by inefficient distribution.

The designer of the scheme does not claim for it merit if operated upon a large scale--at least, not upon the outset. He believes that it should be operated by small groups of growers, organized sufficiently to protect the reputation of the producing section, by preventing the forwarding of inferior productions.

The plan has so far met approval, that an organization has been effected to try the experiment of this advertising and selling California fruit. It certainly is worthy of serious consideration, and would seem to warrant trial.

simply because the names of candidates are grouped according to the titles of the offices to which they aspire. Again, no voter will have presented to him a ballot with 500 or 600 names upon it. A large number of names of nominees will be those for offices voted for in districts. Hence, while all nominees may aggregate 400 possibly, upon no one ballot will all the names appear. But if they did, under the rearrangement for information referred to, the voter will not suffer any embarrassment.

The New Metal. The rapidly with which a new metal is applied to purposes hitherto undreamed of is peculiarly characteristic of our times. Among the latest evidences of its progress is the use of aluminum in the construction of stringed musical instruments. It has been found to possess a latent quality, so it is asserted, which makes it highly valuable for the purpose, the "metallic" tones produced by the use of other metals being conspicuously absent, and it possesses an elasticity capable of sympathetic vibration uniformly throughout a wide range of tone pitch, which renders it in this respect superior to wood. A piano-making firm in New York is now making a piano with an aluminum sounding board, in order to test the practical worth of the discovery.

Through Suez. Bonaparte broached the plan of re-entring through Suez. Half a century later Engineer De Lesseps did it. He actually changed geography. He broke a continent in two for the purpose of commerce. An old man now, Count De Lesseps writes for The Youth's Companion, in humorous, charming vein, how he came to build the canal.

I HAVE been a great sufferer from catarrh for over ten years; had it very bad, could hardly breathe, some times I could not sleep and had to walk the floor. I purchased Ely's Cream Balm and using it freely, it is working a cure. I have since recommended several friends to use it, and with happy results in every case. It is the most reliable all other catarrh, and it is worth its weight in gold. I thank God I have found a remedy I can use with safety and that does all that is claimed for it.
