

CLEVERLY DONE.

An Ex-Convict Caught in the Act of Burglary.

How Captain Lee Dropped on Gus Ammond's Little Job—The Fellow Caught in the Act.

Police Captain Lee and Officers Lowell and Simmons did about as pretty a piece of police work last night as one could wish.

About 10 o'clock the Captain left the Police Station and started on his usual round. He walked down Second to L, up L to Third, and thence across to K. In passing the grating in the sidewalk alongside Considine's saloon, on the corner, he saw a man there with a light, filling a basket with coal, which he soon brought up.

Then Lee sauntered around the corner, and through a smaller grating on the E. street side he saw another faint glimmer of light. Stopping inside, he asked S. T. Burkhardt, the barkeeper, if his man had left a light behind him in the basement, and Burkhardt ascertained that he had not.

"Then there is something in the wind," said the Captain. "Where do you keep your money—in a safe?" "No," replied Burkhardt, "here in this pocket behind the bar," showing one of a row of lockers, but the only one with a padlock.

Lee was certain that, whatever was going on below, the operator would return for some little time, so he went over to L street and got Officer Lowell to go and keep watch by the grating, that being the only means of access from the basement, while he (Lee) looked up Officer Simmons.

For nearly two hours the officers stood there in the cold north wind, but no one came up from the basement. Then Captain Lee sent Lowell and Simmons in to inquire of Burkhardt if he had heard any noise from below, but he had not, being busy moving back and forth.

But the officers heard it, and it was plain that somebody was boring through the floor. They waited until about 11 o'clock, and the latter decided to wait no longer, as it was then nearly 1 o'clock in the morning, and bitter cold.

Noisily the officers raised the grating and descended to the basement, and there they saw a man, with a lighted candle to guide him, perched upon an improvised platform and boring upward through the floor with an auger.

Lowell was the first to reach him, and covering him with his pistol made him raise up his hands. When Captain Lee got a good look at him he said, "Why, hello, Gus! Is that you? Don't you know me?" "Yes, I know you, Captain," replied the burglar. "I see you know me. I acknowledge the corn; you've caught me."

"Why, it's ten years since I saw you," said Lee. "How long have you been out of Folsom?" "Seven months," replied the prisoner. "Seven months?" replied the officer. "Yes; but you got only five years from here?"

"Yes; but I got five more from San Jose." The officers marched their man out to the Police Station. He left behind him a lot of holes in the floor which would have made an opening right behind the locker, where the money and other valuables of the saloon had been kept. His purpose was to then cut through the back of the locker and help himself.

The measurements were exact, and if Captain Lee had not made his timely discovery the thief would have made a clean sweep of the contents of the locker. On arriving at the jail the Captain noticed that his prisoner, whose name is Gus Ammond, alias "Dutch Gus," had a good coat on, and that he had given him that he had passed him a few days before on the street when he did not have the coat on.

He asked Ammond if he did not meet on the street, and the latter replied that he did, but he saw that Lee did not then identify him. "Where did you get this coat?" asked Lee. "Have you cracked another place since I saw you?" "No, exactly," replied the prisoner. "I walked into a hallway and helped myself to it."

Captain Lee is very happy over his capture, as he regards Ammond as one of the cleverest and most determined burglars in the State.

CHINESE EXCLUSION.

Bills Introduced in the Senate by Senators Stewart and Cullom.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Senator Stewart to-day introduced a bill supplemental to the Chinese Exclusion Act. It makes it unlawful after the passage of the Act for a Chinese laborer to enter or remain in the United States for any purpose whatever. The Act, it is provided, shall preclude the entry into the United States not only of Chinese laborers who have never been here, but of all who have been here and departed, also all Chinese persons who may desire to pass through or over the United States for any purpose whatever.

Senator Cullom also introduced a bill on the same subject. It provides that for ten years after the passage of the Act the coming of Chinese laborers to the United States shall be prohibited. During such time it shall be unlawful for any Chinese laborer to come, or having so come, to remain within the United States. Every Chinese person other than a laborer who may be entitled by the treaty of 1850 or this Act to come within the United States shall obtain a permit, and be admitted as so entitled by the Chinese Government or other foreign Government of which at the time such Chinese shall be a subject. This certificate shall be required by the United States' diplomatic or consular representative. The provisions of the Act apply to all Chinese except diplomatic or consular agents and their attendants. Chinese found unlawfully within the jurisdiction of the United States shall be removed to China. The Chinese now in this country must obtain a certificate within ninety days.

BONNER'S SUNOL.

The Great Palo Alto Mare Arrives Safely in New York.

New York, Dec. 10.—Sunol, the famous queen of the turf, arrived in this city this morning, and was immediately taken to Robert Bonner's stable. The mare seemed to have suffered very slight fatigue in her long ride across the continent.

Bonner was probably the happiest man in this city this morning. He said: "Sunol had been lame before I bought her, but I did not know it until I had paid for her. The lameness was caused by a slight defect in the hind hind foot. I telegraphed Marvin, telling him what kind of shoe to use, and instead of using a number of decoctions, as California rumors say, he followed my instructions to the letter. He was not indignant at my suggestions, but on the contrary sent me a letter in which he said: 'If I had known as much about the balancing of the feet of horses twenty years ago as you have taught me, I would have lowered the world's record several times before this.'" Bonner added: "I can't imagine how the story about Sunol's lameness could have been started. I never regarded her lameness any more serious than mud splashed on my shirt bosom, which could be easily removed. It was no doubt started by some of the many trainers and owners to whom I have refused to impart my knowledge, gained by thirty years hard study and practical experience."

The greeting between Bonner and Marvin did not betray the existence of any feeling other than the kindest. Bonner called Marvin's attention to the printed accounts of Sunol's lameness.

"She is sound and well," said the trainer.

"She hasn't a ripple on a windmill on her. She was not lame when we left California, and hasn't been seriously lame in her life."

MARINE INSURANCE.

The Country Drifting into Dependency on Foreign Underwriting.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Commissioner of Navigation Bates, in his annual report, dwells on marine insurance and says: "We are fast drifting into dependency on foreign underwriting. The manifest decadence of underwriting power is of national concern. It is necessary to have marine underwriting of our own as commerce of our own or shipping of our own. Marine insurance is a facility and power for the command of trade useful in peace, but essential in war. The underwriting of our enemy is not to be thought of. That of a rival never should be depended on."

The Commissioner recommends the appropriation of $100,000 to be used for a building which prevents the building of armed vessels on the lakes and the repeal of the Act of 1852, authorizing the nationalization of foreign vessels.

AMUSEMENTS.

At the Metropolitan Theater this evening the talented actor, McKee Rankin, will appear in a wholly new character in the drama "The Canuck." He will be supported by his daughter, Miss Phyllis Rankin, and by a company of competent people. McKee Rankin is well-known upon the coast as a versatile, palmarizing actor of strength, taste and high ability. He has been successful in whether at the head of a stock company or when starring, he has had success in a number of dramatic comedies, and is an artist of the superior order. In "The Canuck" he is said to have brought a new character upon the stage, and made it a study of the dramatic art. It is a wholly new feature and an interesting one.

"About twenty years ago Dr. Walton bought a pair of chestnut-sored horses for $500," said Tom Felt to a Nashville American man, "and after keeping them for a short time he sold them for $150 to Mr. Teasley. I bought him from Mr. Teasley for $150, and for nine years and McKee and I lived together nearly all the time."

"Part of the time I lived in the country and one rainy night the lot of the stable, with sixty-five barrels of corn in it, fell in and the horse went down to the ground so he could hardly move. I did not hear the crash, but I afterward found out it occurred about midnight. Next morning I went out to the stable, and it nearly broke my heart to see the horse that I loved better than anybody or anything in this world in such a fix. He lay directly in front of the door, and he was dead, and I could not help crying. After awhile we got him out, and I just know from the way he rubbed his nose against me that he knew how much I loved him and how I suffered to see him pinned down to the ground that way, with sixty-five barrels of corn on top of him."

"About ten years ago I sold the horse to Shirling Walker, and he promised not to sell him any more. But after he had kept him for a long time he traded him to a man up in Springfield, who afterward sold him at public auction down here on the square. A man named Griggs, in North Carolina, bought him, and now I'm going to tell you something funny."

"Day before yesterday I was passing along Buena Vista street when I saw a horse standing on the other side of the street. I was thinking about anything in particular and just walked on. First thing I knew that horse had crossed the street and was rubbing his nose against me. 'Was my old horse, and he hadn't seen me in ten years. But he had remembered me.'"

Ability to Write.

There are to-day more chances than ever for special literary work. There are more papers and periodicals than ever in a good case. During such time the locker, where the money and other valuables of the saloon had been kept. His purpose was to then cut through the back of the locker and help himself.
