C. T. Wheeler Succumbs to a Complication of Diseases.

He Was One of Sacramento's Best Known and Respected Citizens.

—His Career.

Cyrus T. Wheeler, of the firm of Booth & Co., died at his residence, Front and K streets, last night.

The death of Mr. Wheeler was not sudden, yet it was unexpected. He had been ill for about a fortnight and was suffering from a complication of diseases which his friends thought he would survive.

Mr. Wheeler was a native of New York, 61 years of age, and was unmarried.

Mr. Wheeler was a member of the firm of Booth & Co., wholesale merchants of this city. He was a member of that house when it was L. A. Booth & Co., and had its location on J street, between Seventh and Eighth.

Subsequently Governor Newton Booth became an active member, L. A. Booth retiring, and the firm moved to its present quarters on Front street.

Mr. Wheeler was a man of genial disposition, humane impulses and very kindly nature. Human suffering always excited in his heart the liveliest sympathy.

At the time of his death the physician, who had been called in a short time previous, refused to sign the death certificate, believing that her demise was the result of a criminal operation performed on her.

He had a big, warm heart, and he liked him very much. For many years he was a director of the Howards. But he disliked office of any kind, and when his last term expired refused re-election.

But he always remained an active member. I remember when in the flood we had the sufferers in the old Pavilion he labored with all of his strength, and how he stood his watch on and off to help us preserve order day and night.

I remember how he was foremost in loading a car with provisions when Virginia City was burned, and how he labored to send a boat load of provisions to Marysville when that city was flooded.

He was a very active, a very generous man, a man of very charitable and tender heart.

Mr. Wheeler, as everybody know and called him, was a man of positive character, fearless in expression of opinions and decided in his judgments.

There was nothing weak or vacillating in his character. He was accustomed to conducting his business, and rarely allowed himself rest or indulgence in recreations.

He was a familiar figure upon the streets of Sacramento so long that it is very difficult to think of seeing him no more.

He took a lively interest in public affairs, but never made himself politically prominent. He believed in republicanism, and never lost faith in it.

He had positive views on all questions of municipal concern, and from these views frequently advanced propositions for the general welfare that met with acceptance and adoption.

He had a wide circle of friends in this community, who regret his death and deeply mourn his loss. His life was so intimately interwoven with the history, growth, vicissitudes and business concerns of this city, that to attempt at the late hour when this is written to give an adequate sketch of his career would be impossible.

AMUSEMENTS. The Clunie Opera-house will be opened this evening by Washington Norton, the veteran manager, with a stock company, with the intention of keeping the house open continuously.

Mr. Norton will also revive the matinee business for Saturdays, which in recent years has in this city almost gone out of existence. The opera-house has been repapered, lighter colors and warmer tints displayed, the dark green and gold colors previously prevailing. Heaters supply new registers so that the auditorium is now comfortably warm.

The scenic art has been improved by H. P. Duckert, from the Alhambra, London, who will remain here as regular scenic artist. New carpets are being laid in the house, extra doors have been supplied cutting off all draughts, and generally the house has improved.

The company here organized consists of Percy Hunting of Boston as leading man, Miss Ada Sterling of Chicago as leading lady, and Miss Renon Stover, Miss Mary Herne, Roy Gifford, Warren De Lano, Albert G. Edwards, W. B. Benfino, Miss Ida Aubrey, Miss Florence Axell, Mrs. A. E. Miller, Mrs. R. M. Stover, Miss Mary Herne, Roy Gifford, Warren De Lano, Albert G. Edwards, W. B. Benfino, Miss Ida Aubrey, Miss Florence Axell, Mrs. A. E. Miller, Mrs. R. M. Stover.

Mr. Norton will be treasurer of the house and Inigo Tyrrell an expert and dramatic actor. E. A. Garlich will be orchestra leader, and James Roach scenic artist. In a card to the public, published on Saturday, Mr. Norton said: "A commercial city is handicapped if it does not afford strangers invited to it a place of legitimate amusement."

Transients, accustomed to visit theaters, avoid places in which to deal where such entertainment is not offered regularly. I have come as an amateur to stay, but my success must depend upon you. I have put the prices of admission very low not to indicate cheap plays but to give you the opportunity to see the contrary. I will produce only legitimate, entertaining and amusing works, worthy the attention of refined, critics and of the acting theater-goers. A well filled auditorium at low rates is better than a thin house at high rates, and people of modest means excluded. Clearness of vision, excellence of cast, modesty in department, politeness by all attaches, fairness to all and favor to none will be the rule of the opera-house."

This very clearly outlines the policy of the new management, and if adhered to we believe we will be successful. The play for to-night and the whole of this week will be Mr. Tyrrell's arrangement of the sensational drama, "His Natural Life," which will be given with scenery and three striking, special sets and mechanical effects. The Brooklyn play, "The Millionaire," is a strong play, and Mr. Sully, the San Francisco actor of the 5th inst. said: "The piece has been seen here before, and then caught the audience. It is catching the people just as it is now. The matter of the play has current interest. It deals with the rich and the poor; with the struggle of a man to become a millionaire starting with nothing but his brain; and with the difficulty he has in emerging from the operative class, who are envious of the man who takes advantage of all the means the United States gives him on the road to fortune, which he reaches at last." Mr. Sully is remembered here as a peculiarly vigorous, a manly and painstaking actor, who draws his strength from his own resources and is faithful to the individual. He is a close observer of the human life he portrays, and has the power of depicting his humorous as well as his pathetic side. His support is represented by good
