EMPLOYERS AND GUARDSMEN. The organized militia of the Nation is the root of its strongest defense in case of invasion or domestic trial; upon the militia most largely the ultimate defense of the right to property, liberty and life may depend.

The National Guard is the organized representative of the whole body of the militia. It is the nucleus about which the reserve force of the Republic may be rallied in time of need.

The National Guard is, therefore, to be commended by all good citizens for the arm of defense it has proved to be in the past; the conservator of peace and order that it is in the present, and the hope entertained of it in the future of free Government.

The guard in this State is composed most largely of wage-earners; men who give of their time and youth to it freely, without hope of material reward.

A division encampment of these men is about to be held, the first since 1885, and is one of their representatives of the regular army are to be present to encourage, instruct and criticize. It is highly important that all the guardsmen should have full opportunity to go into this camp and partake of the benefits of this military school of instruction.

Employers of guardsmen should not only throw no obstacles in the way of this vacation by the men, but should encourage it and make it possible and easy. Indeed, we might well follow the example of England, where such vacations, in most cases, do not interfere with the continuance of wages. The wage-earner who is granted this "week off," returns better capacitated to serve his employer's interests and more devoted to them.

But aside from that consideration the people should encourage such encampments for the good they do the organized representative of ultimate power in the republic.

Every year the RECORD-UNION has made a similar appeal in behalf of the guardsmen, and each succeeding year we have been gratified to learn of a broader and more liberal spirit obtaining among employers in this matter. This year, which is to be signalized by a division encampment, the massing and movements of large bodies of men, and by evolutions which the guardsmen can be trained in only at long intervals, let there be no objecting whatever to any enlisted man going to the camp. On the contrary employers should encourage the men to go, make it a duty and a pleasure to aid in outfitting them, and applaud the patriotic spirit that moves them to enroll themselves in this essential and honorable arm of the service of free government.

A NOVEL SITUATION. The Mining Congress, which has just adjourned, has set on foot a scheme that may well cause the regular political parties much concern. It has resolved that

In all the silver States Presidential Electors shall be voted for independently of any political party nominations. These Electors are then to go to the Electoral College and cast their votes so as to defeat any man for the Presidency who will not agree to approve or withhold his veto from any bill Congress may pass relative to silver.

It is also proposed that candidates for Congress in the silver States shall be pledged to support no Presidential candidate, if the election is thrown into the House, who will not agree to non-interference with any bill Congress may pass relative to silver.

With Montana, Idaho, Nevada and Colorado going into the Electoral College with independent Electors, the situation might place in their hands the balance of power, and give them the opportunity to dictate terms. With four parties in the field with Presidential Electoral tickets, these independents would stand a fair chance to succeed.

It is therefore to be seen that it is possible for the lightning to strike in this matter; it is possible for a mere handful of Electors to dominate in the college. Whether, however, any of the Presidential candidates would get down on their knees and make pledges not in the platform upon which they ran, is doubtful. In that case there might be a very peculiar state of affairs, and in case of the election of President being thrown into the House, the power of the silver men to exact the pledge named might be sufficient to greatly embarrass the situation.

However looked at this attempt to seize the balance of power is one that will very much trouble the political managers and will bring about a great deal of figuring and speculation as to what may happen.

OVERLOADING THE PRESIDENTIAL OFFICE. Secretary Tracy made a notable speech at Woodstock on the 4th instant, in which he spoke of the gradual change in our system which has made the office of President one of drudgery, when it was intended that the chief and most absorbing duty of the President should be to study our foreign relations and the direction of fiscal administration and national economy.

It has long been the conviction of students of our system that the Presidential office is becoming top-heavy with detail and drudgery work. Its incumbent, besides attending to treaty submissions, informing himself of foreign politics, the condition of our trade with foreign parts, and the correspondence with other nations on a hundred points affecting our interests, the careful examination of proposed legislation, etc., is now required to make a vast number of minor civil appointments; and hence to receive a host of applicants and their friends constantly. It is said that four and a half appointments in a day must be made by the President for the Postal Department alone, and the papers in each case read. These are always voluminous, and involve the claims of from six to twenty applicants for each place. There are some six hundred applications for pardons yearly, and about a thousand Acts of Congress annually to be examined and passed upon within a given number of days for each.

In addition, he is head of the army and navy, and must examine records of courts martial, claims for promotion, reports of commanders, etc. He must inform himself of the Pension Bureau and the Land Department, and of the multitudinous affairs of the executive departments, several of whose heads have regular hours for consultation with him. He must be well posted concerning the Treasury and the fiscal system, and be alert concerning the working of the customs system, and yet give so much time each week to social receptions, to reception of representatives of foreign countries and to hearing the claims of representatives of States on matters relating to mutual State and Federal concern.

With the rapid growth of the country these duties are rapidly augmenting, until it is already simply impossible to discharge them all well. What shall be done? Enlarge the power of the Cabinet officers? Or that the people would be exceedingly jealous, and justly so. Yet it is Mr. Tracy's opinion that it must come to that. For instance, all matters of pardon he would have referred to the Attorney-General. Postal appointments he would commit wholly to the Postal Department, since these will amount in the next quarter of a century to no less than 100,000.

All lesser Acts of Congress he would have the President approve or disapprove upon the advice of the Department of Justice, and generally the Secretary advises that the official responsibility of Cabinet and department heads be enlarged in order to relieve the strain upon the Presidential office. Evidently something of this kind must be done; but it is there must be new guards thrown about these departments. It will be a very grave departure to make the change indicated, and will be criticised very sharply by the people, since the distribution of powers will bring with it new perils, and enlarge the opportunities for venality and maladministration. We have now probably 65,000,000 of people; when we have 100,000,000 it will be simply beyond the capacity of any man to properly discharge Presidential functions under the system that attaches to them such an infinity of detail and such a variety of duties. It will be a case of overload and of breakdown, or else of gross but absolutely unavoidable neglect of some duties, that will result in great harm to the Nation.

MR. CLEVELAND has seen fit to write a letter denying that he considered religious affiliation in making appointments while he was President, and asserting that he is a Presbyterian. Mr. Cleveland should have treated the charges that drew out the letter with contempt, but being a politician he has done precisely the thing he should have refrained from doing. We had never considered him so weak as he confesses to be.

SACRAMENTO TO LONDON.

The First Special Fruit Train Starts To-morrow Evening.

It Will Consist of Five Cars, and Regular Weekly Shipments Are to be Kept Up.

To-morrow night the California Fruit Transportation Company, of which Geo. H. Appel is agent, at 1006 Second street, in this city, will send out its first special expedited train of five cars loaded with fruit for London. The fruit will be transferred at New York to the fastest steamship of the White Star Line for Liverpool. This arrangement should land the fruit in London inside of two weeks.

Mr. Appel states that only the better qualities of fruit will be forwarded in these shipments for London, made by the leasing shippers here, and the fruit will be loaded down there at a cost for transportation of net to exceed $5 75 per hundred pounds.

The five carloads to be sent out to-morrow will be in the nature of an experiment, but Mr. Appel states that the parties in England who are holding up that end of the scheme are confident that it will prove a great success. All the arrangements are completed for the sending out of five-car special trains from Sacramento every Tuesday night.

This fruit, it is estimated, will all be purchased by the wealthier classes of England, who do not hesitate to pay as high as twenty-five cents apiece for superior peaches, apricots, pears, nectarines and grapes are used among the nobility of London for table decorations at swell dinners much as flowers are used in this country, and the cost quite little or no figure.

The only question to be solved is that of getting the fruit there in good condition, and of this the promoters of the enterprise entertain no doubt.

If the experiment succeeds with the success anticipated, Mr. Appel says the shipments will be increased sufficiently to place the fruit within the reach of the middle classes of the Empire, and to forward to the time—and in the very near future that when a thousand or fifteen hundred carloads of fruit shall be forwarded in a single season from Sacramento to London.

This new enterprise will, it is hoped and believed, be the beginning of a new era in the California fruit business. We already have the great East for a market, and it can be successfully extended to England, fruit culture in this State will receive an impetus not hitherto dreamed of.

FORTUNATE PEOPLE. Premium Note Company—Large Gains, No Possible Loss.

The Premium Note Company of San Francisco says it has agencies all through Sacramento and all towns of California. What is it? The company says it is a regularly organized corporation of the State; that it issues notes of the face value of twenty-five cents, which are secured by a mortgage on the property of the holder, for which a high rate of interest is charged. It is a success to offer certain premiums to the holders who may have numbers corresponding with numbers of the Louisiana Company; that the note bought cash for payment of its face and interest in one month; that there is no possible loss of the face value of the note, while one may receive a great deal more because of the investment made by the company, as indicated.

The company, it is set out, is composed of men of wealth and integrity, whose names are a guarantee of good faith and honest dealing. The scheme is by no means a new one. In several of the large European cities it has been a successful operation for a number of years with beneficial results. Says one of the stockholders: "Our expenses are exceedingly light; we do not draw salaries. Our system is simple, and all our business is transacted by agents, who sell our paper at a profit. All profits except 6 per cent are placed in a fund in the premium fund, and are distributed to the holders of our notes once a month. Our system is becoming popular. We have been in existence over a year and have already disbursed over $100,000 in premiums. This will prove that we are not scheming, but are ready to stay and to be a benefit to the public at large."

The San Francisco Post of the 13th tells of two Italian Agents, Agnes and Antonio Tehama street, and Julia McEvrae, 783 Stevenson street, who received respectively $1,250 and $225 on the July notes. One Sacramento woman was equally fortunate, it is added.

CHAMPAGNE. KRUG & CO., Reims, Private Cuvee.

MESSRS. HELLMANN BROS. & CO. OF San Francisco have just received by rail from New Orleans the first shipment made by Messrs. KRUG & CO. of Reims of the famous "Private Cuvee," and they are now on hand, after the lapse of some years, to place this unexcelled wine again upon the market. Many connoisseurs can attest to the fame this Champagne attained in San Francisco and on the coast during the stirring times of the Comstock bonanza, when it was universally conceded to be the reigning favorite. The great success of late years of this brand in the London and colonial markets has induced Messrs. HELLMANN BROS. & CO. to reintroduce it here, and by reason of its exquisite flavor and bouquet they can confidently assert that it has no superior and very few equals amongst the many Champagnes now imported. The taste of this market has been carefully studied, and has led to the belief that Messrs. HELLMANN BROS. & CO. are to be congratulated upon being again appointed the direct agents for the coast for the finer particulars, samples, prices, etc., apply to HELLMANN BROS. & CO., 525 Front Street, San Francisco.
