SUMMER VACATION AND REST. The vacation season is now in full tide, and from this time for a month yet will be at its flood.

So, too, the summer rest will do no good to him or her who overtaxes the frame by muscular exercise and extraordinary demands upon the system.

Take men or women of 40, who have for ten years in home life been accustomed to rise at a given hour and breakfast at a specific time.

When they go to the mountain resort or the seaside and attempt a complete revolution of habit by rising an hour or two earlier than usual and breakfasting at a time foreign to their custom.

Under conditions wholly abnormal to their habit, engaging in exhaustive exercises such as mountain climbing, long beach walks, hard rowing and the like, which they never attempt at home.

The evil of the summer vacation is the mistaken idea with which many enter upon it, that they can accomplish in a few weeks a complete revolution of their lives.

It is not a complete revolution of their lives; it is a complete revolution of their habits.

The rest of the vacation period should be not merely change of scene and air, or of habit as to sleep, or mental employment, or physical exercise.

It is not a complete revolution of their lives; it is a complete revolution of their habits.

outing he is bound to adopt habits and exercises to which his body and his brain alike have been utter strangers for a year.

In short, we should take our summer rests as we would a generous meal, slowly, moderately, and to comfortable fullness.

ANARCHIST OUTCROPPINGS. The arrest of Knold and the discovery in his rooms of anarchistic literature, correspondence, cipher letters, ciphers, and keys to same, blood-demanding papers and inflammatory circulars, together with lists of anarchistic societies, prove that anarchism is not dead in the United States.

We do not believe that the American atmosphere is congenial to the growth of the detestable doctrine. It finds here only recruits among a class of discontented, lazy and jaundiced souls, who have no higher ambition than to destroy and to preach of an ideal condition of society that is impossible under humanity as we know it.

Their motto is "down with the law, absolute freedom from all restraint, absolute substitution of the individual for the State."

In the main the units of the American anarchist societies are foreigners; reckless, mentally diseased, and intellectually impoverished outcroppings of Europe.

Not one of them who has ever been exposed to the search light of publicity has been found fit to be a citizen, or a man to command by bearing or ability any respect from the public.

These fellows, however, can pull a trigger or cast a dynamite bomb. Being in the main fatalists they are reckless. Some of them are sincere believers in the loftiness and holiness of the cause to which they are attached, and like the idolatrous devotee are ready to lay down their lives for the doctrine they champion, and in this complete abandonment of self the chief danger from them resides.

We shall probably be bothered with this class of destructive cranks for all time; it will not be possible to prevent their ranks being mildly recruited. But the crop of anarchists will never be very large in the United States.

In a country that does not put a limit upon human energy, or prescribe bounds for human industry; in a land where to all the opportunity to better their condition is equal; where the right to freely speak and write is guaranteed; where property possession is recognized and the laws may be invoked as readily by one as another, anarchism cannot flourish.

The criminal laws outlaw its followers who attempt to practice its precepts, and the people who have votes, who are self-governors, from whom emanate all authority and who dictate all laws, will never permit the anarchist societies to much assert themselves.

They will be tolerated to preach, but as they attempt to execute they will be punished as are other vulgar criminals.

The discoveries made incidental to the arrest of Knold and Bergman will have the effect of putting the anarchist colonies under a cloud for a while.

But they will crop out from time to time with an assassination here and there and an occasional bomb-throwing.

So long as the bars are down and Europe is permitted to ship these wretches to us, we will get new supplies of anarchist priests, and these will make each year a few converts. But that the societies will ever grow to large proportions in this country, or become a source of national danger, is wholly improbable.

THE RIVER AND THE LEVEE QUESTION. The Trustees, with the City Surveyor, have made soundings in the river for several miles below the city.

They find generally and surprisingly deep channels. This proves that confinement of the current between levees gave additional scouring capacity to the stream.

It does not disprove the necessity for systematic levee building. On the contrary it makes it more evident that the work is imperative.

For the choke of last winter was not due, it is shown, to bars in the stream backing up the water, but it was due to the fact that the levees held and the river was water choked, precisely as Mr. Grunsky, the experienced river engineer, and Mr. Drescher of Nicolaus explained in these columns not long ago.

We are glad that the Trustees made the soundings. It was a wise thing to do, for it demonstrated that with a deep channel we may have high water here and low water both below and above the city.

But the area of discharge past this city is narrow. Now if we had, under such conditions as the time of high water last winter, experienced a rise in the American River, there would have been results that might have been very disastrous.

The thing to do, therefore, is to make our levees completely high and strong. Patch work will not do; indeed, we ought to go with the work as far up on the levees as we possibly can. It may not be sufficient to quit as far up as Seventh street. There are many citizens whose opinions are entitled to respect who think we ought to keep on out on the north and east as far as time, and money possible to raise will permit this season.

But whatever we do, no more patch work. Between 1881 and 1891 we spent out of $140,000, $100,000 in patching; a little rip-rap here, a little raise there; stopping a gopher hole yonder; grassing a section beyond; in high water throwing up temporary barriers, sand-bagging low places; paying watchmen and shovelers and teamsters; paying high prices to turn out gangs of men by night; putting in cobble guards on this levee face; driving piles here and making wing-dams yonder—and so on, all patch work. Necessary, no doubt, because of emergencies upon us due to our failure to systematically and uniformly build.

Let there be no more of this neglect. There are millions enough at stake in Sacramento, the permanency of industries enough menaced, the values of property enough involved to make it pure economy to seize the situation by the foretop and expend if need be $150,000 or $200,000 to put the levees safe and sound above all danger, and so faced and broadened as to make them impregnable.

It will be wise, more than wise, to do this now, and it will be a splendid investment, because the money borrowed would do it, will actually profit us ten times the interest and principal in increased values and renewed investments and established confidence.
