

REGISTRATION CONCLUDED.

The Clerks Stayed Up Until Midnight to Accommodate.

Looking Out for "Stuffers"—A Candidate Spilled Down Stairs—Why They Were Late.

Registration closed at midnight last night.

Of course, as might be expected, hundreds held off until the last minute, but still the rush at the registration office in the Courthouse was as heavy as was expected, and Mr. Rhoads' force of efficient clerks proved more than equal to the occasion.

Many of the late callers gave excuses for not being around sooner—and the clerks invariably put them under oath. Some had "been workin' an' forgot entirely"; still others "never know'd 'bout it until 'jest now"; again, they had sick mothers-in-law at home, teething babies, hadn't read the papers, or supposed the "old register" was sufficient.

One of the belated ones livened up matters by falling down the flight of stairs leading up to the registration rooms. He got up in a "never-touched-me" style, and they put him on the list. He happened to be a candidate for a constableness, and had been "out wid' th' boys," and was not in condition to climb stairs. But he got there just the same, as he subsequently explained to one of the clerks.

George Irvine, Deputy Assessor, watched the registration with his eagle eye. He had been there all day and was on the lookout for "stuffers." It was generally understood that he was put there by the Citizens' Association. Another young man, whom no one seemed to know, was also on duty for a while. Irvine got along nicely until he received a note to attend a secret meeting that was then in session. While he was gone the hobos piled in by the wagon-load, and George is liable to be a little mad when he finds out that he was "joshed."

HEAVY REGISTRATION.

When the Great Register closed at midnight it was found that the number of voters enrolled was 10,826. This is a good showing, and indicates a heavy vote at the coming election, which in turn warrants the belief that the Republican candidates will be elected by large pluralities. A full vote is always resulting in that way, at least in Presidential years.

It is safe to assume that of the voters on this new register the percentage of re-novates, etc., will be very small.

MR. DIXON'S STORY.

He Was Asleep—A Blonde Man Stole the Brandy Bottle.

W. Dixon, a colored man of the "colored maduro" brand, was tried for petty larceny before Judge Cravens yesterday and found guilty of the crime. Mr. Dixon went into a saloon, took a glass of beer and sat down to read a paper about "Red-nosed Mike, the Irish detective."

The story was very interesting, according to Mr. Dixon, for he fell into a doze, and while he was slumbering in the chair the proprietor of the bar went in and was shortly followed by his wife. This left Mr. Dixon alone in the bar-room, but he was asleep.

When the proprietor and his wife returned the brandy decanter was missing from its place by the side of the other bottles, and its absence was noticed by them both.

Dixon was questioned, and he said a man had come in while the proprietor was out, and he dropped off to slumber again, but the proprietor came in and withdrew the missing decanter, minus one drink, from Dixon's inside pocket. He then sent for an officer who placed the colored man in custody.

After this testimony was given by the saloon-keeper and his wife, Dixon made a statement that he had a fairy story. "I went in an' had a drink of beer," said he, "an' I dropped down into a chair to read a paper. First thing I knowed, they lay me out, an' I fell ter sleep. Just then a tall slim man, with a blonde face, and rubber soles on his boots, teched me on the sholder an' says, 'Ye 're want to buy this ter or deller an' a quarter?'"

"I sez 'yes,' an' I paid him the money and went ter sleep again?"

"Did the tall, blond man have a glass eye?" asked Judge Cravens.

"No, sah," replied Dixon, "he didn't need no glass eye. He had two good ones. I would know him if I seed him agin, but I don't know whar he seed him agin." "Well," said the court, "in his absence I'll have to find you guilty; judgment to-morrow."

ILLEGAL PRACTICES.

How Persons are Kept in Jail and Denied the Right of Bail.

The injustice of imprisoning persons against whom complaints had not been filed was demonstrated rather forcibly Sunday night and yesterday morning.

It appears that some youngsters were annoying the Salvation Army warriors, and one of the latter, William Durham, and one of the crowd and seized the first boy he laid his hands on. The latter proved to be a 14-year-old "kid" named Benny Rawles, whose father works in the railroad shops. Durham was appointed a Deputy Sheriff some time ago, and he marched the youngster to the County Jail. Although requested by several citizens, who did not want to see the boy remain in jail all night, to swear to a complaint then and there, Durham, it is said, refused, remarking that it "would do him good to spend the night in jail."

The boy's parents applied at the jail about 11 o'clock and had bondsman with them, but Deputy Sheriff Alter, who acts as night jailer, said he could not release the boy, nor could he designate what amount of bail would be necessary, as

ART SCHOLARSHIPS.

Three of Them Conferred on Deserving Young Ladies.

The Good Work Done by the Ladies' Museum Association—How it Aids Young Girls.

The Ladies' Museum Association have just purchased of the California Museum Association three one year scholarships in the Sacramento School of Design, to aid manifest ability.

These scholarships have been filled by the names of Miss Mary Hinckson, Sacramento; Miss Minnie Beitzel, Sutter Township; and Miss Mabel Eadon, Dutch Flat.

This makes fourteen scholarships the Ladies' Museum Association has provided, and for which it has expended over $1,200 in the last three years. Many of the pupils thus placed in the school by the Ladies' Association have proved the best workers in the school. Some of the pupils who studied under these scholarships are now teaching in different parts of the State. One of them was early made art teacher in a leading college, and in every case the ladies feel that their efforts to aid the school have been fully rewarded.

The Ladies' Association has now 150 members, each of whom pays into the association a fine of one dollar. Occasionally the ladies give entertainments to swell this fund and accumulate enough to purchase more scholarships. It is a worthy work, and the California Museum Association frankly admits that had it not been for the ladies' auxiliary the School of Design would long since have been closed, because of the fact that its artistic success has been complete, and that it is run at less expense than any institution of the kind in the United States.

The regular class of the school now numbers twenty pupils, and the Saturday class six. The first ought to be double that number, and the latter should have at least a dozen. The advantages offered by the two being such as are not surpassed in the State.

There are probably a hundred persons in Sacramento dabbling in designing, who ought to go to the school and take a thorough course and fully develop their talents, and who are able to do so. There are probably twenty or thirty others, young people, not able to attend the school, who have ability that, if trained, would make them independent.

It has long been believed by the two associations that the wealthy lodges, societies and people of the city ought to search out the dormant talent and place it in the School of Design, and thus for the meager sum of $90 to $70 a year in each case, put deserving and desiring ability on the road to art success, and at the same time insure the stability of the school, which is a source of such pride and credit to the Capital City. The amount of good that can be done in this direction is incalculable, and the cost less than the sum of people of means waste in indiscriminate aid to the undeserving yearly.

IN BOYNE'S FAVOR.

James G. Patterson Withdraws From the Senatorial Contest.

There are now but three candidates for the Senate in this county—E. C. Hart, Republican, William Boyne, People's party, and John P. Gage, Prohibitionist.—James G. Patterson, the Democratic nominee, having withdrawn in favor of Boyne. Following is Mr. Patterson's letter of resignation, addressed to W. S. Leake, Chairman of the Democratic County Central Committee:

"I have accepted the nomination on the Democratic ticket as a candidate for State Senator from the Thirteenth Senatorial District. I believe that I believe the best interests of my party, I believe that my candidacy is a benefit to the legislative and National Democratic ticket. Since that time, however, the Supreme Court of this State has rendered a decision which virtually removes the causes that prompted me to allow my name to be used as a candidate.

Under the existing laws, I believe that I have been served by my withdrawal from the contest in favor of the candidacy of William Boyne. I therefore resign my nomination as a candidate for State Senator from Sacramento County. Trusting that my acquiescence in this matter will meet with the approval of the Democrats of this county and State, and that they will give cordial support to Mr. Boyne, I am, very truly yours,

J. G. PATTERSON.

The report also is that the Democrats have secured a promise from Boyne to vote with the Democrats for United States Senator in consideration of his receiving the support of that party in this county. This report is to be justified by Patterson's statement that he withdraws in favor of Boyne.

As the Prohibitionist vote will not cut much of a figure in the result, it leaves the race practically between Hart and Boyne, with the former at the pole and far away in the lead.

MARCELLUS' CHARMER.

Another Victim of the Courthouse Practical Joke Mends.

The practical joke fiends who infest the Courthouse have been at it again.

This time their victim was Marcellus Gratz, the handsome Registration Clerk. Marcellus, be it known, became enamored of a pretty young actress who visited Sacramento recently—or rather she became enamored of him, so Marcellus always said. When she left town to play an engagement in San Francisco he was greatly dejected and the "boys" determined to cheer him up, even if for only a few minutes. One of the rascals arranged with a friend who was in San Francisco to forward a "fake" telegram to Marcellus. When the latter received the message he was so pleased that he went to the depot and waited. She was not on the first train, but that did not matter—she would be on the next one sure, and still Marcellus waited. Several times he still Marcellus waited. Several times he still Marcellus waited. Several times he still Marcellus waited.

Freshly shaved, powdered and scented, with his best clothes and shoes beautifully shined, Marcellus tied himself to the depot and waited. She was not on the first train, but that did not matter—she would be on the next one sure, and still Marcellus waited. Several times he still Marcellus waited. Several times he still Marcellus waited.

The next train came and then the next. No charmer. Marcellus was heart-broken. Then, to make matters worse, here came a villain from the Courthouse, with a grin on his face a yard wide. "Ah, waiting for somebody?" Then another imp implored him to view, wearing another grin, and asked the same question.
