

WORK OF THE SALVATIONISTS.

Miss Blanche Cox Delivers a Very Interesting Address.

Referring to the Work in Foreign Countries and at Home—Six Sinners Repent.

By her address last night on the "Social and Rescue Work of the Salvation Army," Miss Blanche Cox substantiated all the kind words said of her as a very interesting speaker.

She is tall and slender, and but 27 years of age. She wears a gray, sympathetic expression, and by her grace, holds and entertains her audience until she finishes speaking.

Last night the Methodist Church, where she delivered her address, was crowded. Staff Captain McFarlane led in the services, assisted by Captain Burke, the ex-prize-fighter, and other army notables. The services opened with the "singing" of a "volley" of "amens," followed by a song and then a prayer by Mrs. McFarlane.

In introducing Staff Captain Cox, the officer said it was just fifty years ago that the Young Men's Christian Association was founded in London; twenty-seven years ago since the Salvation Army commenced to battle for Christ with but a single soldier; eighteen years ago since the Women's Christian Temperance Union was established in the United States, and just twelve years since when (Christian Endeavor Societies, now numbering over 1,000,000 converts, were heard of. "Staff Captain Cox," he said, "let the home of the wealthy parents, where she lived in luxury, to battle for the Army. She has worked in the darkest spots of London and India, and is now engaged in a tour of Canada and the United States. She has spoken to large, refined audiences in Chicago and other places, and last week even the Mormons gave the use of their grand temple at Salt Lake City to Miss Cox. I am sure she has not been so well flattered by the Mormons (laughter), and I know she will interest you."

Miss Cox, brimming over with smiles, assured those present that the Mormons had no effect on her. Although she was born in London, she felt that she was an American. She complimented those in attendance by saying that some of the men in the Salvation Army, but she did not believe those within the sound of her voice were of that kind.

"In a small town in Iowa," she said, "a few weeks ago the whole Salvation Army was run in for beating their drums and singing their songs—by the way, on Liberty street. But we were not on our feet, for there was not room enough in the prison to accommodate us all. There was no place for women, so I escaped being locked up, although I beat the drum. The prosecuting attorney was a gruff old fellow and would not speak of us as the Salvation Army, but as the so-called Salvation Army. He did not believe we accomplished any good.

"But we have done something, and we are very proud of it. The flag of the Salvation Army floats in thirty-two different countries and we have over a million soldiers.

"The Salvation Army believes in going to the slums and garrets and administering to the wants—not to talk about the bread of life, but to give a loaf of bread to the poor, starving and homeless mortals, to adapt ourselves to circumstances, by this means save thousands of souls which could not be otherwise reached.

"When I lived in India, I walked like the natives, talked like them, and if we do bluster our feet—that makes no difference. We go to the hospital, spend a week and then go out to work all the time. I am fortified. Our people in India act as if we were like the natives as possible. They go almost naked and live in mud huts. With the great good we do this way it can not be said we are extravagant, for our brothers and sisters live there for $25 a whole year.

"The members visit the poorest of the poor; where abject poverty and gaunt starvation lurk in their most hideous forms; where men, women and children are in such stress as to induce them to commit any act in order to get a crust of bread.

"We go among these classes of people—in the slums, the hovels and the tenements, we take their babes and wash them, scrub their floors and give them some palatable food. I have seen many black babies dipped into the water, and brought out white. This is the way we work."

"We don't do as much as we would like to, because we are not financially able. But the great secret of the Salvation Army is in being in touch and sympathy with the people. We do not try to touch them with a ten-foot pole if they happen to be dirty and lowly, we grasp them firmly by the hand, love them and give them a cup of tea, coffee, or the like.

"An old woman friend of mine, 70 years of age, first came to the Salvation Army in New York, ragged and filthy. She had not taken a bath, she said, for twenty years. She was a slave of the world and was a slave of whisky. We told her we were after her kind of people. We had to bribe her by offering her a dress in order to get her to bathe. She is known to us as 'Old Telegraph,' because she was such a wonderful communicator of news. I suppose some people claim all women are the same way, but she is queen of them all. After she took her first bath she enjoyed it. This old woman is now one of the most esteemed old women in the army and testifies that she is now clean within and without.

"The Salvation Army has a colony of 1,100 acres of land, where we have some one very hardy wild birds. We are taking care of the criminals who are working their way back to honor, prosperity and heaven. If the Salvation Army does nothing more than to reclaim these poor unfortunates, our work, I think, is a glorious one.

"The last night I was in India a native, known as the greatest desperado in that country, came to the camp, raised his arms and spoke in Hindi, and the army had done for him. He related some of the crimes he had committed in wrecking trains, robbing and killing his comrades, and said when he got out of prison the Salvation Army took him, and did for him what the Hindus, or fire worshippers, could not do.

"There are now 600 officers in India—more than half of whom are Hindus—and the army is marching steadily along."

Miss Cox interrupted her discourse for the taking up of a collection, after which she conducted a prayer service and succeeded in capturing about half a dozen converts.

Miss Cox goes from Sacramento to San Francisco, where she will deliver a number of addresses.

TOKEN OF REGARD.

The Federated Trades Present Rabbi Levy a Testimonial.

The hall of the Federated Trades was last night the scene of a very pleasant gathering, the occasion being the presentation of a testimonial to Rabbi J. L. Levy, who is shortly to remove to Philadelphia. W. F. Gornaley called the meeting to order, and stated it was called to bid good-bye to one who had been in their midst for some years, but was about to leave them, and to render to him a slight testimonial of the esteem in which he was held by the members of the Federated Trades, with whom he had been associated.

U. E. Harber delivered an address, in which he referred to the interest Mr. Levy had taken in all matters relating to labor, his addresses in its behalf and his efforts for its advancement. The Council deemed some recognition of these things fitting, and had prepared a testimonial for him to take with him to his new home that should always keep in his mind the feelings with which they regarded him. He asked him to accept it as the expression of the feelings that had prompted it.

The testimonial was nearly three feet square, with a finely executed border in colors. At the top is the monogram of the organization, composed of the letters "S. C. F. T." The text is in German letters, of various colors, and the whole was most artistically done with pen by Carl Eischenschel of San Francisco.

It states that the council wished to testify its gratitude for his efforts in the cause of organized labor; bears testimony to his many amiable qualities; commends him to all sister organizations, and wishes him unlimited success and prosperity.

Rabbi Levy responded in a brief but feeling speech. He hoped his friends would excuse him if he did not attempt to offer them a speech. "The Bible tells us," he said, "that 'out of the fullness of the heart the mouth speaketh.'" His heart was full. It was the proudest moment of his life. His gifts are always appreciated. How much more, then, should a gift be appreciated which comes like this from the best of men—from workmen with whom his associations had been so pleasant. This enhanced its value to him greatly.

He thanked each one kindly and said he felt he should tender his public thanks to the Council for the feeling displayed in this beautiful testimonial, and that the same of him to his new field of labor.

If he had raised his voice in behalf of labor it was because he recognized the fact that the cause of labor needed championing; that its status must be improved; that many of the curses that hung over labor must be removed.

"I do not take an interest in labor," continued he. "Labor is the gift of God. The only condition imposed on our first parents when they went from the Garden of Eden was to work. Labor should have the respect of everyone, due to it as God's gift."

The name of America, said he, stands not for the lone one, but for the bright hope of the bright future we shall have when we worship one common Father as his children. The time will come when the rich man will say, 'If you want full value for your pay, you must give full value for your labor.'

He thanked the members once more, and assured them that this testimonial should occupy the most prominent place in the most prominent room of his Philadelphia home. His kindest feelings and best wishes will always linger with them, and if ever the time comes when he could aid them he hoped they would call on him.

A PLEASANT AFFAIR.

The Entertainment and Dance of Fair Grangers' Hall last night by the ladies of Fair Oaks Relief Corps, No. 13, was a very pleasant and happy affair. All were in for a good time, and they had it.

The musical and literary programme was well-rendered, and was as follows: Recitation, Sallie Haskell; duet (man and guitar), Fred Schadt and C. H. Hild; recitation, Mabel Bronson and Maggie Monaghan; recitation, Susie Van Horn; vocal solo, Miss Edna Hicks; Little Shaking Quakers—Master Law and Ward; Beth Hill, Ada Burns, Eugene Stafford, Myrtle Bell, Belle Van Guelber, Mabel Dotson, Florence Larkin, Ethel Burns.

Attending to the duties of the programme dancing was indulged in until a seasonable hour. The members of the Executive Committee, who are responsible for the success of the affair, were Mrs. Walker, Mrs. Van Horn, Misses Addie Shields, Sallie Haskell, Louise Hagelstein.

AMUSEMENTS.

The box-sheet of the Metropolitan Theater for "The Trust of Society" engaged to be open at the Grand Opera-house this morning. The piece will be played Friday night by Manager John Stetson's company of players from the Globe Theater, Boston. While there have been several adaptations of this work, "The Trust of Society" has met with by far the most brilliant success of the day. The company includes many who have been favorites on our stage for many seasons.

"The Pulse of New York" had a good audience at the opera-house last night. It is a strong melodrama and sensational play. Mr. Waldron and Miss Calef have congenial parts, and have appeared in nothing that better develops their versatility and talent. Mr. Waldron's song of "Around the Corner" scene, won a most deserved encore. Mr. Waldron has a trained voice of sweet tone and full of melody. His performance of "The Pulse of New York" in a new role for him, exceedingly good in a new role for him, that of a policeman. May Powers in her songs, and Maude Caswell in dance and song, are equally successful in every good impression. The great fire scene, the elevated railway scene, the dance-dance scene and the pile-driver act, with the element of snuff, are thrilling bits of sensation work, and won rousing applause. The scenery is throughout very attractive and most of it wholly new. The same piece to-night.

DYING IN THE STREET.

Sad Ending of John Mackey, Jr., in San Francisco.

Not Yet Known Whether He Died From Natural Causes or Otherwise.

Last evening's San Francisco Post contained the following account of the death of John Mackey, Jr., son of John Mackey, the Superintendent of Haggins' Sacramento farm, which occurred at the County Hospital yesterday morning under somewhat peculiar circumstances. Says that paper:

He was picked up in an unconscious condition at an early hour this morning on the corner of Nineteenth and Valencia streets and was taken to the City and County Hospital in a patrol wagon. He died at 10 o'clock this morning. The keeper of the Seventeenth-street police station was notified by telephone that the patrol wagon was wanted on the corner of Valencia and W. Valencia streets. The sergeant in charge of the station called was immediately responded to and when the officers arrived on the ground they found a young man lying on the sidewalk unconscious. He was immediately taken to the hospital.

The intelligent policeman at once jumped to the conclusion that the man was a victim of some extraordinary accident, and they hustled the inanimate form into the hurry-up wagon and drove to the Seventeenth-street station. When requested to look the prisoner, made an examination which satisfied him that the case was a much more serious one than simple intoxication. No signs of life were detected on the unconscious man's breath, and the deathlike look on his face convinced the sergeant that it was a matter for medical investigation, and he requested the patrol driver to take the man to the City and County Hospital.

Before he was again placed in the wagon a search was made of his clothing and it was discerned that the unfortunate young man was John Mackey. Upon the arrival of the patrol wagon Mackey was examined by Dr. Fitts, the Superintendent. He could not discover any abrasions on any part of his body, and from his lips and the working of his face the doctor concluded that the man was dying and he said so. His verdict was correct. Mackey expired about 9 o'clock this morning. The cause of death was not ascertained. Subsequent investigation shows that the deceased was employed on the Call. He was buried a short time ago, and he had been suffering from a disease, but there is no reason to believe that he committed suicide. The Superintendent of the hospital thought that Mackey might possibly have been suffering from a disease, but he is not sure.

Young Mackey was born here twenty-five years ago and passed his early years at the home of his parents on Point Lobos avenue, near the stock-rail track, where his father kept a public training stable.

After receiving a liberal education in the public and private schools of this city, Mr. Mackey went to Sacramento and accepted a position on the Rancho del Paso. He remained there about a year and then came to New York to enter a veterinary college.

He studied two years and then returned to California, where he engaged a short time in newspaper work at Sacramento, and accepted a position as purchasing agent for W. O. B. Macdonough, who was about to start a breeding establishment. He attended several sales in New York and brought Fair Lady and other famous bloods.

During one of his trips to Chicago he married a young woman from that city, who went on to meet him. The match was not highly satisfactory to his parents, and it seemed that his fortune marked him for a fall from the heights of his position. His wife took sick and failed gradually until, after a lingering illness, death came to her relief.

Mackey again resorted to newspaper work, and attained considerable success as a police and writ writer, and by his generous and open-hearted way gained the friendship of his co-workers who came in contact with him.

Since the death of his wife his friends noticed that he changed in manner, and in place of his former jovial disposition he seemed to grow morose and reserved, and some claim that his troubles so worked upon him that he committed suicide. He had a habit of maintaining a serious illness, and was not known to suffer from any complaint liable to cause his death.

During the past few weeks deceased had resided with his mother and sisters at 115 Valencia street. The young man had gone to the house of his parents and left the following morning on a card, which he pushed under the door: "Have rung and rung. Guess you don't want me."

The officers further discovered that the young man told his mother that he was going to kill himself after the marriage of his sister. Of course no one believed this, as he was of an excellent temperment and in the habit of saying rash things when he was in trouble.

The mother and two sisters of the deceased visited the morgue this afternoon and viewed the body. When the cover was removed and the face of the dead was revealed they went into hysterics, and it took an hour before they could be induced to leave the remains of their beloved dead.

GRAHAM ON THE STAND. He Denies That He Maltreated Elsie Posey—The Wife's Statement.

Justice Henry was engaged all day yesterday in listening to the testimony in the case of "Dr." Graham and his wife, who are alleged to have abducted Elsie Posey. Assistant District Attorney Jones conducted the case for the prosecution on account of District Attorney Ryan being engaged in the Superior Court. Graham was the first witness called and was on the stand for several hours. His testimony was to the effect that he is a graduate of the Rush Medical College. Graham denied all the statements made by little Elsie Posey that he had criminally maltreated her, and acted very cruelly at all times. He endeavored to show that Elsie was willfully a very bad girl. He claimed that the child was given by her father to Mrs. Graham.

Mrs. Graham was put on the stand. General Hart endeavored to have the witness testify that she was approached by certain officers and offered her freedom if she would testify to criminate her husband. This line of questioning was objected to by the prosecution, as it was immaterial and foreign to the case. Justice Henry sustained the objection.

Mrs. Graham testified that Posey, father of Elsie, gave her to him, and at the time he did so she says he offered to sign papers relinquishing all claims to the girl. She had no knowledge of any untrue relations of her husband with Elsie, and her testimony throughout was about the same as her husband.

J. E. Kuggles, formerly of the Stockton Republican, testified that he saw an advertisement published to the effect that Graham was going to Oregon and would be responsible for his debts, and that he made no concealment of his departure, and he made no concealment of his departure, and he made no concealment of his departure.

The case was continued until 10 o'clock this morning.

The Case of William Cook for Alleged Battery on Robert Griffin. William Cook, charged with having committed battery on Robert Griffin, a tailor, was given a hearing by Judge Buckley yesterday morning. Griffin, the complaining witness, said he was assaulted a week ago last Sunday, night with Cook, on the corner of Second and L streets, just after coming out of the dance hall located there. Without provocation, he says, Cook knocked him down, beat him in the face, and carried him to his home.

Milton Frantz corroborated the testimony of Griffin, and was positive that Cook knocked him down.

Officer Aern testified that Griffin was insensible for fifteen minutes, and that he arrested Cook for the crime.

John O'Hare testified that he was with Cook and that a row was going on at the corner, and, with Patrick Sullivan, the three went back to see what it was about and saw Griffin on the ground. He denied that Cook struck him.

Patrick Sullivan said he did not know who struck Griffin, but he did not believe he was Cook.

Judge Buckley took the case under advisement until this morning.
