THE CASE OF BULOZ. The Buloz scandal in Paris astounds the intellectual world. The journal Buloz edited, the Revue des Deux Mondes, was the brightest and best of models for cleanliness, purity of tone, high moral standard and all that. And now it turns out that Buloz was a white-headed scoundrel; that while he preached morality and paraded it in the Revue, he was in the hands of the Philistines, who blackmailed him right and left under threat to reveal his scandalous doings in violation of his marriage vows.

Buloz has fled, his wife has been granted a decree of divorce, the Buloz Academic Salon is closed, and the magnificent Buloz palace that was the resort of artists, literary men, scientists and politicians, poets and statesmen, the accomplished, scholarly and brilliant, has no open doors, and its windows are barricaded against public view by cotton screens.

Of course, the corporation of the Revue will remove Buloz, since he sold shares enough to meet the blackmailing demands to reduce his interest to one of non-control. The paper will not go down—it is of the most valuable of review property in Europe; it was founded and built up by the father of M. Buloz and left to his son with an unvarnished escutcheon. The elder man had no literary culture, but he had cunning and "a nose" for good matter of the highest order that it paid to print. He managed to draw to his columns the most famous writers of the age, Lamartine, Castelar, Dumas, George Sand, Thiers and a host of famous people and the best art and dramatic critics of the era.

Buloz, the elder, was close-fisted, unprogressive, unrelenting. He had no friends and few kindly words were ever spoken of him. But he had the business tact suitable for the conduct of his review. His son came into the property at a time when by the change of Government he was able to drop the political features of the review, which his father had mistakenly adopted, and as a result it became wholly artistic and literary and greatly augmented its power and money-making capacity.

Such a journal will not die because the editor proved to be a hypocrite; fortunately he did not make it alone; the men who he did the best work will continue to stand by it. Of course, the escape of Buloz will for a time injure the Revue, but as it is greater than its proprietorship, it will soon rise superior to him and live on and down the shame Buloz has brought upon it.

HERE we are now with grain and fruit crops, not exceedingly large, indeed small in one kind, but which cannot be saved except in small part, because the currency current is checked. Not all men, indeed but the few carry capital sufficient to float their business alone. Nearly all rely upon the flowing current continuing. Diminution in its volume and movement means for them, perhaps, total suspension of activity. It is so with the producers in California as a rule. What now are they to do? The banks are blamed, but is that reasonable when unwarranted distrust by the people compelled these institutions to padlock their money bags? It is now the time for genius to serve the State as it has never been served before. Who will come forward with a plan by which sufficient security may be made available to procure at the East, Chicago for instance, money sufficient to again put producing industries into action? True, the money is here that is needed, plenty of it, but probably if all the property of the State were pooled and loaned as security for the necessary coin to revivify the views of business, the banks would be powerless to advance the money. Some device must be adopted by which money can be put afloat on good security; failing that, we must be content to see the fruit crop beneficial only so far as shipping in the green is concerned. There are private money possessors enough in each community to afford relief if they will but consider their duty to their neighbors. There is money outside of banks in plenty to meet the needs of the present for saving every pound of the crops now in peril and it can be made as secure for its use to-day as at any time in the past.

THROUGHOUT Northern and Central California quartz mining is undergoing revival. It is mainly prospecting just now, but we believe that a good many fine properties will be extensively worked the coming fall and winter. We have always held that the quartz mineral wealth of the Sierra's flanks has not been exhausted, nor even half developed. The recent taking up and reopening of partly developed or prospected mines has resulted in very many of them proving rich. They were opened years ago when labor was high and scarce, machinery out of the question, and permanency not a feature characteristic of Californians. In scores of instances shafts were sunk but a few feet, small fortunes taken out and the mines abandoned. These old mines are now being reopened and nearly all are promising finely, while some are already paying their owners handsomely. But not one-half of these early prospected claims have been re-examined as yet.

MR. CLEVELAND is too fat and is to undergo treatment for reduction. Now this is the President's own business, his personal concern, and no one has the right in common decency to vulgarly parade the fact. Yet here we have a journal in San Francisco pictorially giving views of Mr. Cleveland's arm, leg, chest and abdomen. It is insulting, indecent and ungenerous and silly, while claiming to be high-minded and enterprising.

The rebel Brazilian, Admiral Wandenkoik, has been made prisoner, and his ship is now a prize and her officers and crew are under guard. It is likely that the Admiral will be made short work of; the Brazilians do not dally in such matters. While Brazil is a republic it is less merciful to traitors than was the kind-hearted and pitying Dom Pedro.

THE Lick Observatory has discovered that the comet of the last few days is a double. Another and lesser comet is mixed up with the tail of the greater one. This is satisfying; we knew no ordinary single-barreled comet could create so much trouble as this globe is now visited with.

THIS whole trouble between France and Siam is exaggerated. It is the outcome of a blunder on the part of the Siamese. France has no intention of conquest in that quarter. She knows that even if so minded the Powers would not permit her to grasp territory in Siam.

Fourth Brigade Matters. Adjutant-General Allen has announced in General Orders No. 8, as follows, concerning military matters in the Fourth Brigade:

G. C. Simmons has been appointed Major and Ordnance Officer on the staff of the commander of the brigade, vice Major August Heilbron, placed on the retired list.

Commissions have been issued to the following: Fred P. Tuttle, Captain Company D, Second Infantry; Fred S. Kottmann, First Lieutenant, and Frank A. Tyler, Second Lieutenant of the same company, Auburn.

Colonel Guthrie and Lieutenant Smith have been to Auburn and report that company D as being looked after carefully.

Desiccated Garbage. [San Jose Mercury.] The attention of the world was sharply called to sanitary matters last year by the prevalence of cholera in Europe and its threatened outbreak in this country, and as a consequence there has been an almost universal interest taken in all subjects connected with the cleanliness and the health of cities. No part of this complicated sanitary problem has been more earnestly investigated than that of the disposal of refuse matter or garbage, and toward the solution of none have more various attempts been made.

The scientific methods have been presented for the disposal of garbage: one by incineration and the other by desiccation. The first of these has received much more attention than the other, because it is simpler and promised cheaper results. It has therefore mainly occupied the minds of those who worked at such problems and as a consequence a large number of cremating furnaces have been devised for burning refuse, and many of the more progressive cities of the Union have adopted them with considerable success. The desiccating process has not been so prominently put forward, but its advocates claim for it a decided superiority over any possible process of incineration. That it is not so simple to appearances does not imply that it may not prove to be more simple when scientifically worked out, and though it may not be so cheap at first cost, it may yet prove to be more economical in its results, inasmuch as the desiccated garbage has a high calorific value.

The difficulties in the way of applying the principle of desiccation have heretofore prevented communities from attempting it, but it is now that a system based upon that principle has been successfully operated at Blissville, N. Y. The main feature of the method is said to be the use of a rotating process of cremation and animal matter as collected is dumped into air-tight tanks, from which it does not emerge until completely disinfected by a volatile substance. It is then devoid of grease and putrid moisture and reduced to pulp, which requires slight additional drying to make it a merchantable article in the form of fertilizing ingredient. It is claimed that in the operation of the process all foul odors and gases are condensed and destroyed, and that there remains nothing objectionable in the material when taken from the tanks into which it was dumped.

The advantages claimed for desiccation over the cremation of garbage are great, and since the Common Council is now engaged in the consideration of this problem, it might be well for it to obtain some fuller information in regard to the Blissville experiment before deciding to adopt any one of the many cremation furnaces that are offered.

STANFORD'S MEMORY.

How It is Cherished by the Citizens of Sacramento.

The Memorial Prepared by the Committee of Citizens Appointed by the City Trustees.

At yesterday's meeting of the City Trustees, H. Weinstein and Thomas M. Lindley, of the committee appointed to draft resolutions on the death of Senator Stanford, submitted the following:

The Citizens' Committee appointed by your honorable board to frame resolutions in relation to the loss sustained by the death of Senator Leland Stanford, beg leave to offer the following and to say that, in place of the customary form, they have deemed it best to adopt a method which they believe also expresses the complete expression of the feelings of our people:

TO THE MEMORY OF SENATOR LELAND STANFORD.

"How sweet the thought that whatever the destiny be that awaits us beyond the portals of the grave, whatever the awakening be from our final earthly sleep, though we have ceased to be, still among the living we are not forgotten; that there are loving friends left behind to keep our memory fresh and to honor our name!"

It is this thought, this desire to keep fresh his memory and to honor the name of our late fellow-citizen, Senator Leland Stanford, that prompts the people of the State of California, regardless of race, color, creed or occupation, to thus publicly express their deep sorrow for the irreparable loss sustained by his death to our City, our State, our Nation and to the world at large.

As citizens of Sacramento, the city to which Senator Stanford came nearly forty years ago, with limited means and comparatively unknown; the city in which he spent nearly twenty of the best and most useful years of his life; the city in which his greatest triumphs were conceived, matured and carried to successful results; the city in which his only and deeply cherished son was born and lived his childhood years; the city whose people aided him with all their might and main, morally and financially, in all his political aspirations and in the colossal and courageous undertaking to span by rail the great Western Continent; the city which sent him forth to broader fields, wealthy, renowned, powerful, respected and honored; as citizens of the city whose history and interests are so closely identified with those of the honored deceased, we cannot but deeply lament his death, and express to his bereaved and sorrowing family our feeling that his loss is not theirs alone, but ours as well.

Great as was the inspiration of his life, his memory, his name and his deeds are destined to remain a lasting and noble move the living to higher aims, nobler thoughts and loftier aspirations.

Long after we, who were his friends, his neighbors and his fellow-citizens, shall have been numbered with the dead and his memory forgotten, his noble virtues, and the memory of his achievements will stand forth to inspire and to teach those who are to follow us how to overcome difficulties, and how to dedicate their lives and their means to the service of their fellow-men. Long after we shall have passed away, our sons and our sons' sons for ages to come will lead their children reverently to the doors out of which he was carried to the grave saying: "Look! This was the house; this was his chamber."

Signed: T. M. Lindley, A. P. Catlin, W. P. Coleman, Nelson S. Hill, James Turner, G. L. Simmons, H. Weinstein, Citizens' Committee.

On motion of Mr. Conklin, the report of the committee was received and adopted as the sense of the board. The Clerk was instructed to forward the memorial to Mrs. Stanford.
