A "WRITE-UP" FRAUD. A San Francisco morning paper reports that Frederick A. Hunt is missing; that he has left behind him in San Francisco, Sacramento, Stockton and other places numerous creditors.

Frederick A. Hunt came to San Francisco some two years ago. He immediately announced himself as an employe of the San Francisco Post, which was published at that time by Heazleton & Hirsch.

The perfectly honest man has been found. Seventeen years ago he stole a ride on the pilot of a locomotive, because he had no money to pay for the ride.

AND NOW it turns out that the Valkyrie might have won the third race had not her mast sprung, rendering it impossible to set her balloon jib topsail, such as the Vigilant wore.

It may be remarked in passing that the most profitable business known to the average solicitor is the portrait business.

So Hunt, appealing to the vanity of a number of people in San Francisco, solicited their portraits, charged them space, and on the plea that he could not get up cuts and have the engraving done on uncertainty, secured advances.

Now, what shall be said of the newspaper management which absolutely loans its name to a scheme of this character? The fact is that legally the Post is responsible for the money the public have lost in this way.

THE Kern County Californian gracefully apologizes for crediting an original article to another journal which was taken from the RECORD-UNION.

RAH! for Indiana. After all these years a Hoosier jury has been found that is not afraid to convict a band of Whitecaps and send the whole kit to State Prison.

The public are interested in this matter. It is the simplest thing in the world for itinerant agents of metropolitan newspapers to obtain from a thousand to five thousand dollars in a city like Sacramento, Stockton or San Jose.

how grossly mistaken the patrons of such institutions are. We are deeply and sincerely grateful to Frederick A. Hunt for illustrating how easy and how convenient it is to swindle the public when they pay for write-ups and portraits in advance, and how flimsy and ethereal souvenir editions are.

It is perhaps fair to the present proprietor of the Post to say that Mr. Frederick A. Hunt could not have made such an arrangement with him; and that he would not have been a party to a fraud so glaring and transparent.

SO SERIOUS has become the question of home fitness and capacity for women in Massachusetts—so few women being qualified to care for a home—that schools of a public character are being established all over the State for the study by native women of home economy and to train them in the most ordinary housewifely arts.

THERE is hope for mutes. A Parisian physician and an inventor have constructed a machine that enables the mute in whom the larynx is destroyed or incapacitated to express in vocal sounds all his wants.
