SENSATIONAL JOURNALISM.

One of the ladies connected with the movement for the purification of the press, in a published interview, declares that it is not the object of the movement to antagonize sensational newspapers, or to attempt to force them to accept the reform; that the object of the movement is to prove that the majority of people in California do not enjoy the sensationalism found in the columns of the press, and then leave the result to the discretion of the publishers.

If this is all there is in this movement, it will have a few days, possibly a few weeks, run as an item of interest in the columns of newspapers. Every newspaper, even including those of the sensational class, will approve of the movement, and then at the end of a few days or a few weeks it will die and be heard of no more for years.

Publishers have an excellent opportunity of knowing what the public will buy. They are in the possession of statistical facts not accessible to other people. They find when they publish a sensational story, however nasty, that the paper sells; that decent families with growing daughters buy the paper, or have it left at their door steps; that the paper may be reeking with prurient suggestion, beastly detail and gross sensuality, and yet decent people, or people who think themselves decent, will buy it and pay for it and make its reading accessible to their children.

If the ladies of California are inaugurating a movement simply to show that there are some people yet living who have decency enough to protest against the prostitution of public morals constantly practiced by sensational journalism they are attempting a weak and ineffective thing. The publisher who admits to his columns the best details of divorce scandals, "crim-con cases," seductions, abortions, and the like, because the paper will sell, will not be amenable to the argument which the ladies propose to present. And when the amiable lady stated to an interviewer that the society did not want to antagonize these newspapers she was grievously mistaken in the methods by which reforms are accomplished. If all the people who have sufficient intelligence to understand the effect of sensational journalism upon the morals of the rising and the arisen generation will simply refuse to allow a sensational paper to come into their homes they will neutralize the influence of the patronage of the dens of vice upon the course of these papers.

The case may be stated in a nutshell. Every publisher publishes what he admits to his columns because he believes the readers wish to read it. Therefore the publisher who admits to his columns obscene matter does it for pay. He expects to get that pay through the sale of the paper and the increase of circulation, and the increase of advertising due to that circulation. He will not need a different mental condition to take pay to publish the most obscene stuff in the world, if there is any money being expended in that direction. Failing to get pay from some one who desires to demoralize the public, he gets his pay by indirection; the publication of obscenity and the resultant immorality is paid for by subscribers and advertisers, and it is to attract such subscribers and such advertisements that the obscenity and nastiness are admitted to his columns. The fact is there is a market for obscene literature, while on the other hand, there is but a feeble protest against its introduction into decent families. If there were decency would refuse the patronage which the publisher hopes to gain by the publication of obscenity, he would have something to lose as well as something to gain.

It follows that if the published interview is to be accepted as an indication of the character of this movement, things will be worse than if it had not been undertaken. It will confirm the publishers of obscene newspapers in San Francisco in the opinion that by the publication of obscene matter they have much to gain and nothing to lose. This movement will accomplish a vast good, if it organizes into effective operation a determination on the party of decency to resent the publication of impure matter, and to withhold its patronage from all papers offending this way. So long as newspapers find the road to indecency profitable, and so long as papers acquire "the largest circulation" through the publication of debasing criminal details, that long publishers will be found to publish that class of newspaper. It is an undeniable fact that the quickest way to build up a great circulation is to print a carrion newspaper, not because the vultures are more numerous than all other species of birds, but because all other species of birds will sit down to a feast with the vultures and without protest.

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND HER REPROACH. Our northern and central valley and foothill counties have not gained in population and material wealth as they should have done. It is lamentable and humiliating fact, and it affords the best of reasons for their now arising and shaking off lethargy, seizing the opportunity the Midwinter Fair affords to advertise themselves as they deserve, and thus win the attention that has proven so profitable to our brethren in the south.

Blessed with better climate, greater certainty of rainfall in plenty, better domestic markets, richer and more prolific soil, greater economy of cultivation, more bounteous yield, greater wealth and people equally intelligent and high-minded, there is not only no reason why the northern and central counties should refuse longer to be outstripped, but every reason for them to accept the gage of rivalry, and prove to our friends of the south that this section of the State is the better portion of California, and more deserving the attention of brain and capital from abroad.

But let us look at the facts, nor fear to confront them, for their contemplation becomes necessary in view of the new contrast that is threatened to be made unless we bestir ourselves.

In the ten years—according to the official census reports—between 1880 and 1890 the great rural county of Colusa added but 1,522 to her population. In the same period the equally as wealthy and favored fruit and grain county of Butte lost 788, while her three chief towns gained 172 in population.

Tehama, the vine and grazing county, added but 615 to her population, or not 300 in excess of natural increase by birth. Sacramento County in the decade gained but 5,949 in population, and of that this city alone absorbed 4,966. San Joaquin County in the ten years added but 4,289 to her population, of which Stockton and one small town are to be credited with 3,639.

Solano, a specially favored section along with Sacramento and San Joaquin for grain, fruit and commerce, gained but 2,471, and of this population increase six towns absorbed 1,390. Yolo, a county with every reason for rapid advancement in all directions, gained in the ten years the insignificant number of 912, of which 618 is to be credited to two towns.

On the other hand, in the same period, according to the same official reports, Los Angeles, San Bernardino, San Diego, Santa Barbara and Ventura Counties increased in population from 94,391 to 187,763—that is to say, the net gain in ten years in seven of the great valley counties of the north was but 14,961, while in five counties of the south the net gain in the same period was 93,402, or 78,441 in excess of the gain of seven counties richer, better situated, more blessed by Heaven, more desirable because of topography, scenery, climate, yield and all other advantages.

The reasons for this contrast are near and easily found. Land monopoly has throttled settlement and taken home building by the throat; lack of enterprising spirit has operated to keep our section in the background and make us less prominent in the eyes of the world. As a result the north has suffered, and for her vigor, persistent advertising and her unblinking pushing to view the south has gained in population, wealth and all the comforts of civilization and refinement.

It is a simple fact, testified to by all who have returned from the World's Fair, that in the California building strangers expressed no surprise at the exhibits made by the south counties, but were amazed, as a rule, that the northern counties could make even such an exhibition of their capabilities as they did, though it is notorious that not one-third of an exhibit was made such as should have been.

With the Midwinter Fair at hand we have an opportunity that if not seized and held will operate to our eternal disgrace. The only thing to do, if we wish to retrieve something of the loss of the past, is to unite in a common effort the valley and mountain and foothill counties of the north and center, erect a fine building and make therein an exhibit that will become the starting-post for a new era in the history of the State and section, and that will once for all remove a reproach that is the natural result of our own sloth. The tridding sum of $1,000 from each of these counties will give us a structure and fitting that it will not be possible for the south to eclipse, while within the building each county can make exhibits which in the aggregate will fairly, fully and creditably present Northern and Central California as her resources deserve.

SHE DON'T WANT TO TELL what made her beautiful. Yet it's only what other women know. Wealth of beauty comes only with a healthy body. Health is a set of good habits. Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription assists nature in establishing these habits. Women have yellow faces, dull eyes and hollow cheeks, to get rid of these low spirits, when they are made miserable with disorders, derangements and weaknesses peculiar to their sex. Health is regained, after periods of dizziness, nervous prostration and excitability, or other manifestations of derangement, or displacement of the womanly organs, when the "Prescription" is used. Besides, it's sold on its merits. The proprietors take the risk. It is guaranteed to benefit or cure all the disorders, diseases, and weaknesses of women, or money is refunded. Catarrh is cured by Dr. Sage's Remedy.

THE LABEL CASE

Royster Gets a Verdict. But It Will Cost Something. After being out all day yesterday the jury in the case of George P. Royster against the publishers of the Bee for libel, in which the plaintiff asked for $20,000 damages, returned a verdict in the plaintiff's favor for $200.

When the judgment is for less than $500 the "successful" party to the suit is required to pay the costs. In this case the costs will, of course, greatly exceed the amount awarded in damages.

I had good medical attendance, but it failed to restore me to the enjoyment of my former health. I then tried the favorite prescription of one of the most renowned physicians of Louisville, Ky., but to no purpose, whereupon I was induced to try Simmons' Liver Regulator. I found immediate benefit from its use, and it ultimately restored me to the full enjoyment of health."—A. H. SARTLEY, Richmond, Ky.

PROSPECTUS

Jennie Lind Gold and Silver Mining Company. Location of Works, Grass Valley Mining District, Nevada County, California; Principal Place of Business, Grass Valley, California.

THIS CORPORATION, ORGANIZED AND existing under the laws of the State of California, was incorporated August 21, 1893. The company have altogether 100 acres of mining ground, including the Jennie Lind gravel mine.

The Jennie Lind is an old gravel mine worked extensively in the early fifties, and which yielded handsome profits to its owners. On this claim there is a bedrock tunnel 300 feet in length at this date and is still being extended and driven ahead. It was first started in 1850. When this claim was first worked it paid the miners $20 per day per man, and good pay gravel is now being found.

The Weed property is virgin ground. The tunnel was never followed into this ground, for the reason that the owner held it under an agricultural patent and heretofore refused to allow it to be worked at any price. The adjoining claims are the Goutley and Atlas Nos. 1 and 2, formerly known as the famous Blue Lead, out of which has been taken many millions of dollars, which fact can be verified in Grass Valley.

The main gravel channel is undoubtedly under the Weed property, as the ground has been found to pay well all around it. The stock in this corporation is divided into 100,000 shares at a par value of $1 per share. Of this stock, the company proposes to place shares upon the market for sale at 25 cents per share. The proceeds of the sale of this stock will be used as a working capital and will be expended in placing the mine upon a dividend-paying basis.

For further information apply to JOHN F. COOPER, President, Jennie Lind Gold and Silver Mining Company, Sacramento, Cal. Or to ARTHUR H. POWELL, Secretary, Jennie Lind Gold and Silver Mining Company, Grass Valley, Cal. P. S. Since the above was written richer gravel has been struck.
