FAULT ON BOTH SIDES. Junius Henri Browne in a late magazine develops as a philosopher in matrimony in a manner that entitles his expressions to respect of men, and of women also.

Mr. Browne holds that there is a good deal to be said for a good many men who spend but little time in their homes. The excuse he offers is that wives too often fall to be companions. He dwells mostly, however, upon the natural love of woman to deck herself; a disposition he does not condemn but rather commends.

But when the wife dresses only for the world outside of her home the result is that the husband falls into the belief that she is indifferent to his tastes and "indifference is more to be feared than misunderstanding and rancor. These seldom last, but indifference is seldom headed."

So long as the woman as the queen of the home seeks to elicit first the approval of the inmates of the home for her attire, all goes well. These appeals for admiration at home contain much of the secret of her power. As Mr. Browne puts it, "grave social, fundamental and moral questions are bound up in a woman's clothes. They frequently have a significance she does not comprehend, an influence she cannot forecast.

Trivial as they may seem they assume momentous shape and conduce to momentous results. If the inward history of the day could be written, it would be seen that the first discords of many were spawned in clothes." He concludes with the bit of proverbial philosophy "that a woman is best dressed when she looks best in the eyes of him who loves her."

All this is very well, and no serious issue will be taken with the propositions laid down. But there is another view of the matter that cannot be ignored. How many husbands and members of the family are indifferent to the personal appearance of the wife and mother in the home? How many a woman has had the iron enter her soul because of the apparent indifference of the husband to her home attire? If she should seek admiration at home because of her care to appear neat and well dressed at home as well as abroad, how much more should the husband be quick to accord the reward of such efforts.

It is not enough that he should entertain for the labor of the wife in this regard the highest admiration; he should make it manifest. We undertake to say that if there is blame-worthiness for the woman because of negligent attire in the home, there is, in nine cases of ten, equal reason for laying at the door of the husband as serious blame for failure to recognize openly and in frank commendation the right effort on her part.

Mr. Browne is right so far as he goes in his domestic philosophy, but he stops short of the whole truth. Unappreciated effort is the source of as much trouble as the failure to deserve appreciation. It is not enough that the members of the family appreciate in their secret hearts the endeavor of the wife, the mother and the sister to command admiration; there must be that delicate, open and sincere expression of it that counts for so much and costs nothing of self-sacrifice.

THE St. Helena Star has discovered a way to purify the press. It is a specific of that there can be no doubt. The plan is for the good women now seeking to gain the purification end by petition to begin a complete missionary work among the people, to induce fathers and mothers to cease reading the sensational press and to educate their children to shun it as they would any other unclean thing. This proposition proceeds upon the true plane, of course, and is that which should underlie all reforms, namely—the correction of the tastes and morals of the people, since upon the people all immorality and uncleanliness feeds. But the difficulty is that such reformation of public morals cannot be done piecemeal. Whatever is accomplished in the fundamental way must be done by an all-embracing and sweeping correction of public taste and thought. It is millennial in its outlook and must be millennial in its results. While, therefore, we wait for sweeping correctives through the means of moral reform among the people, we are not to neglect those restraining and regulative means which society has found to be necessary in all time to check the vicious and hold evil by the bit.

THERE is a bit of trouble in the Southern California section over the Mid-winter Fair business. Some of the counties are growing about the prominent part Los Angeles proposes to play in the Southern California building, and declares that while each has to bear a share of the expense, the city of Los Angeles is going to reap the lion's share of benefit. To which the Los Angeles Press replies that they cannot help it; that the city is the largest in the district, and attracts more visitors than the lesser towns. This however does not satisfy the San Bernardino and Santa Barbara people, and some very serious protests are being sent up. All which is the opportunity of Northern and Central California. No jealousies disturb us in this quarter. All we want is union of all the north county exhibits under the cover of a building to be known distinctly as Northern and Central Californian. Inside that structure the counties of the section should make the very best showing they can, each for itself. The result of these efforts is what we look forward to impress visitors with a truth to which they have been blind, in large part, in the past.

It ought to be the verdict of the people at the polls to-day that the time has gone by in Sacramento when the fact that a man is the nominee of a political party insured his election, regardless of merit and capability. Candidates for office of administration of the local affairs of the community, the care of streets, the direction of the police, the regulation of business by license, the lighting of the city, the water supply, the health ordinances, the system of sewerage, the conservation of economy and the like, must now and hereafter have stronger claims on the suffrages of the people than mere connection with this, that or the other political party. Liberty of thought characterizes the people of the day. Of that liberty is born political freedom. In municipal government, more than any other, is this political liberty essential to good government, economy and business care in the conduct of local affairs.

EVEN a capable man who is not free from political control is more dangerous as a City Trustee than one less competent intellectually, but who is not tied to the apron strings of bosses. We ought to keep in mind to-day that six men in the Board of Trustees who are under obligations to the ward autocrats will constitute the city government, and that they will be merely the proxies of the political whip-crackers. But there are capable, free men in nomination in every ward, so that if the people do not choose wisely to-day it will not lie in their mouths to complain if a solid six develops in the new board, and if citizens who have causes to present to the local Legislature find it necessary to consult outside parties as to who shall fill the offices of appointment and what ordinances shall be repealed and what passed.

THERE is and of right ought to be no politics in to-day's election. Neither State, National nor any other political policy hinges upon the outcome of the election in Sacramento to determine whom the people deem the safest men to administer the domestic affairs of the city. Let no voter be led from his better judgment by party appeals to-day. Officers should be chosen with an eye single to their fitness, their administrative capacity and their freedom from the control of men who make ward politics a business.

"We propose to have in our building the banner exhibit, and to make it such a magnificent showing that visitors will think that the whole fair is a Southern California institution." So speak the committee in charge of the Southern California preparations at the Midwinter Fair. Unless the counties of Northern and Central California act in concert, with energy and the inspiration of local pride, the prophecy of intention by our cousins of the south will become reality. But the north can eclipse the south—let it be done.

YOUNG WOMEN CHRISTIANS. The Third Annual Convention at San Jose.

Miss Alice E. Bailey, General Secretary of the Young Women's Christian Association of this city, sends the RECORD-UNION the following account of the doings of the third annual Convention of the Y. W. C. Association at San Jose: The convention opened last Friday afternoon with devotional exercises. Captain R. Kelso Carter and E. L. Hunt, College Secretary International Committee Y. W. C. A., addressed the meeting during the afternoon. Permanent organization, reports and other business followed.

The other sessions were full of interest. The address by Rev. E. R. Dille, D. D., of San Francisco on Friday evening, and one by Rev. E. S. Chapman, D. D., of Oakland on Saturday evening, were greatly appreciated. Other speakers were J. L. Spears of Sacramento, Harry Hillard, College Secretary Y. W. C. A.; Mrs. Carrie Judd Montgomery of San Francisco, Miss Mindora Berry of San Francisco, Miss Emma Reeder, Coast Secretary Y. W. C. A., beside local ministers and workers.

There were about fifty delegates in attendance. Good reports from the twenty-six associations on the coast show marked advancement in the work. On Saturday afternoon a most delightful outing was enjoyed to the University of the Pacific where there are beautiful grounds and buildings. The lovely weather and kindness from the people of San Jose made the short stay in their midst indeed a pleasant one.

For Indigestion and Nervousness, USE HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE. Dr. T. H. Horn, Colorado Springs, Col., says: "I have used it with success and great satisfaction to myself and patients, in indigestion and nervous debility."

Pepper is second only to rice and tea as the principal export from Siam.

My Experience.

"I have been afflicted for many years with Dyspepsia, Sick Headache and affection of the kidneys, caused by a Torpid Liver. During last fall and winter I was obliged to suspend the most of my labor in my field of Home Missionary work on account of my health. Early this spring I was induced to try Simmons Liver Regulator, and have had more real good health than for years before. I have also used it successfully to ward off bilious attacks.—Joseph E. Wheeler, Cumberland Pres. Minister, Lebanon, Mo.
