SENTIMENTAL AND PRACTICAL REFORM.

A Nation Reform Convention was held at Pittsburgh last week. We have heard little of it in the dispatches, but will assume that its purposes are irreproachable and intended to bring about purification of American politics and the like.

But most of these reformers who operate by resolution, are themselves to blame for much of which we have cause to complain in political methods. That is to say, they with a vast body of other people, leave the business of political management to the very elements they assume to abhor.

The root and trunk and branch of all reform of political management is in the activity of the average citizen within the realm of duty. The conscientious citizen will not remain idle in the political field. He will be active in the beginning of political activity—in the caucus. The power he has to administer, rebuke and to overturn, he will exercise to prevent, by himself taking charge.

Hon. L. S. Coffin of Iowa read the reform convention a sharp lesson when he told it that the very good, the very clean, the purty, purty people, are themselves to blame largely:

We are a little too good, a little too clean; we are a little too busy to go to the primaries, where the initial work begins. Then, when the political tricksters have done all the havoc they can, we come into the caucus and cry out against the evils. Ought we not to go down to the root of the trouble? If the caucus is held in the saloon, in the dive, much as we dislike to do it, it is our place to go in to meet our enemy. Let us reform ourselves before we ask the people to reform.

There is nothing to be added or taken from that trenchant statement of unadulterated truth. It is crystallized wisdom; it is a blow from the front well planted and just where needed. The man who fails in his political duty-doing is estopped from complaining. The Chicago Inter-Ocean puts the subject into a nutshell of practical truth in these words:

Unquestionably there now is a strong drift of sentiment toward purification of county and municipal politics, but purification will not come by drift of sentiment; pure politics will come through practical politics, through caucuses of decent men bent on submitting and decent delegates to the approval of the voter, and bent on getting the decent voters to the primaries.

A WRITER in the American Journal of Politics argues that one of the most promising signs of the times, indicating National strength and resistless vitality in the American system, is the remarkable growth of independence of thought and action in questions affecting the public interest, or the fitness of candidates for public office. It is a sound conclusion; the liberties of the people are safe when the people themselves do political duty independent of the direction of political whip-crackers and vote-drivers. The cause for this increasing liberality of thought and action in matters political is found in the growing realization that a political party is but an association of men for carrying into effect principles held in common by them, and that there is no obligation upon any man to uphold a party, or labor in its interests, when its declarations and aims are opposed to his judgment. That is to say, the tradition has departed from among men that they are bound in good conscience to vote with a party simply because it is the organization with which they have in the past affiliated. But the benefits of party organization are not to be denied. Associated effort in all walks is the conservator of strength, and a means of education. But all such effort must command support because of the soundness of the principles for which it contends, and the cleanliness of its methods, rather than for the test by party shibboleths, or the enthusiasm to be aroused by a party war cry.

THE San Francisco News Letter, generally so level-headed and cool as to awaken admiration, goes off at a tangent regarding the Russian convicts in San Francisco. It insists that it would be the refinement of cruelty to return these men under the extradition treaty, because we cannot afford to recognize political offenses. It inveighs bitterly against the treaty, and condemns the United States Senate for approving it. The News Letter is all wrong in this matter. If it will refer to the treaty it will find that there is an explicit and clearly-worded provision that under no circumstances whatever will the United States return political prisoners, or recognize offenses held by us to be of a political character. If the News Letter will inquire further it will find that of the convicts in San Francisco the major part are vulgar criminals, counterfeiters, murderers and thieves. Only three are of the character likely to fall under the provisions of the exception of the treaty. These three are convicts because they circulated anarchistic literature, and sought to poison the minds of the people by inculcating the doctrines of terror by dynamite missionary work.

THE New York Evening Post says that the Monroe doctrine is used to cover up patriotic rascality. It declares that it was the outcome, in its announcement, of the craft of Channing, who inveigled President Monroe into declaring it in 1823. England wanted it as an aid to her own opposition to the Holy Alliance. "This raises the question," says the Post, "whether any true patriot can longer stand by a doctrine due to English dictation." We may not stop for an instant to discuss the question of fact. At this distance of time the origin of the doctrine cuts no figure in the American estimate of it. The fact is that the citizens of the United States cherish it as one of the few inviolable policies which have risen to the dignity of law. The assault upon Monroe's famous declaration of policy on the ground that its genesis was English is unbecomingly so dignified and able a journal as the Post. Indeed we rather suspect that our contemporary is really poking fun when it uses the sentence we quote above.

A SAN FRANCISCO newspaper offered to the women who advocate the reformation of the sensational press that they take charge of one day's issue of that paper to run it precisely as they please, putting in all they deem proper and excluding all that they hold to be immoral or in any way unclean. The women have declined to accept the offer, and very properly. The experiment would have been of no value whatever, unless the women were practiced newspaper people of long experience. It cannot be held to be a fair proposition, any more than would be an offer by an engineer to permit one unfamiliar with the management of his engine to run it a whole day. The offer of the newspaper proprietors ought to have been replied to by the women with sharp rebuke and exposure of its seeming fairness, for it possessed not a single element of fair play. If the proprietors had said to the women, "Take the paper for a month, select and control the force of the paper and take power to instruct the agencies at the fountain-head of news," there would have been more of fairness in the proposition.

THERE is a rumor, coming from Washington, that the Administration will take no part in the Brazilian trouble, even if it should turn out that Admiral Mello has pronounced for the re-establishment of imperialism. But, it is added, if there is any outside attempt to aid him to effect the establishment of an empire, this Government will interfere. It is to be hoped that this news is verity. We cannot afford to view with complacency the schemes of European powers to set up a kingdom on the South American Continent, to the destruction of a republic with which we hold friendly relations. The almost universal voice of the American people will be lifted to commend the policy of President Cleveland if he proclaims it as it is now said he will do.

IT is to the credit of all the people in the lower San Joaquin Valley that they gave no support or countenance to the Evans-Sontag so-called dramatic company. In some places they were refused halls in which to show, and in others the people warned them away—at least, they gave them notice they would have no audiences, and induced them to cancel their dates. There is better taste and more sense of the proprieties in the interior than in the metropolis, where the miserable travesty on a play was financially successful.

OUR Republican friends should take warning and not whoop it up too loudly that the recent State elections at the East were Democratic defeats and Republican triumphs. Careful examination of the press discussion east of the Rockies makes it clear that, save in one case, to Democratic local revolt, to purely local causes and to personal popularity are the results of the polling to be attributed, in most part.

THE free-coinage men give notice of intention to resume the silver fight on the opening of Congress in December. That was expected, but there will be no lengthened contest, to the interruption of other business, this time.

If those intolerable fighters with jawbones, Corbett and Mitchell, do not and will not give the public a rest, pray will not the news agents knock them both out?

The testimonials published in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla are all honest, straightforward statements, given and signed by the people themselves, and nearly all entirely unsolicited.

The Hero-to-Hero. A friend has lately told me the following story: In the western part of Massachusetts a man had a fine stock farm; that is, a farm for raising cows and horses. But a few weeks ago a fire broke out in the barn, and burned not only the building and the hay, but most of the animals also. After the fire the owner walked over the ruins. It was a sad sight to see the charred bodies of his fine Jersey cows and his high-spirited horses, to say nothing of the money lost with them. But at the end of the barn he saw a sight which touched him more than all the rest. There sat an old black hen. He wondered if she did not move her head to look at him as he came near her, but he thought she must be asleep. He poked her with his cane, and to his surprise the wing which he touched fell to ashes. Then he knew that she had been burnt to death. But out from under her came a faint little peep, and pushing her aside with his cane the man found—what do you think?—ten little live yellow chickens! The poor hen had sacrificed her own life to save them, and had held her place in the fire as Casabianca held his on the burning deck. That sight touched the man more than everything else, and he was so moved that his eyes grew a little more moist than usual.—Churchman.

The Jury Charged. A good story is told on a calamity Justice of the Peace somewhere in Kansas. A case before his Honor in which a young man was on trial for stealing a saddle. The time came for the County Attorney to say: "Your Honor, you will please charge the jury." After considerable hesitancy the County Attorney delivered the following charge: "Gentlemen, I know you are all hard-working and oppressed men. The iron heel of Shylock is grinding you down. I hate to do it, but at the command of the County Attorney you know I must. I therefore charge you twenty-five cents a piece." The case was appealed to the District Court.
