

LOOKS BAD FOR CHARLES PERKINS.

His Alleged Complicity in the Late Jackson Robbery.

The Victim Thinks He is the Man-Circumstantial Evidence Bearing on the Case.

The examination of Charles Perkins for complicity in the robbery of W. F. Jackson on the 4th of this month was commenced yesterday before Justice Devine, but not concluded. It will be resumed at 10 o'clock this morning.

A City Attorney conducted the prosecution, and E. C. Hart appeared for the prisoner. The first witness called was W. F. Jackson, who told the now familiar story of how he was "stood up" that evening at the corner of Seventeenth and G streets by two men, and robbed. One of the men caught him by the shoulder and told him to stop and hold up his hands.

He was shown two pistols, and said they resembled those held by the men who robbed him. He was perfectly cool at the time, and noticed the men carefully, and then the prisoner closely resembled the man who first accosted him, and his voice is similar to his. From what he saw of him he was convinced that Perkins was the man who robbed him. In all other respects Perkins is identical with the robber.

The witness said that Starbird, who was killed by Hall a few days after the robbery, answered the description of the other man who had helped to rob him. A handkerchief was shown in court and Mr. Jackson said it looked like the one worn over the face of the man who first stopped him. It was the other man who went through his pockets, and he was quite nervous. The one who first stopped him wore a light-colored crumpled felt hat exactly like the one shown in court.

PERKINS' SUDDENLY ACQUIRED WEALTH. George H. Phinney, proprietor of a saloon at Seventh and E streets, testified that on the night of Sunday, February 4th, Perkins called at the saloon about 7 o'clock and got a can of beer. The can was one belonging to Starbird. Perkins called a couple of hours later and brought the crowd there. He presented a $20 piece, but witness could not change it.

Perkins said he was a brakenan and lived in Oakland. He said he got into a bokey-bokey game that evening and lost $80, but had saved out the $20 piece. Phinney said he never saw Perkins before that evening, to his knowledge.

George Livingston, a partner of Phinney, testified to having seen Perkins at Phinney's saloon when he offered $20 in payment for drinks. Perkins pulled a lady's purse out of his pocket, and hastily showed it back and took the $20 from another pocket. The witness never saw Perkins before. The purse was like the one taken from Perkins at the time of his arrest and shown in court.

MORE ABOUT THAT TWENTY DOLLARS. James H. Moore testified to having been present on that Sunday evening in a saloon at Sixth and E streets when Perkins tried to get $20 piece changed. Some twenty minutes later witness saw Perkins in a saloon at Seventh and G streets, where he got change for the $20.

A Kicker, who keeps the Seventh and G streets saloon, testified to having changed $20 for Perkins on the night of February 4th. He said he was a railroad man and was going out at 6 o'clock that night. He wore gloves at the time. He left as soon as he got his change.

PERKINS' THIRDS OF HONEST LABOR. Samuel J. Baker, a teamster, testified that Perkins worked a few days for his (Baker's) employer, Thomas Lewis, in January. He worked three or four days at $20 per day. He quit work on Saturday night before Jackson was robbed, and there was $32 due him. Later that night witness met him in a saloon at Fourth and K streets, and wanted to borrow a dollar, saying that he had spent his earnings.

On the following Monday night witness met Perkins again, and informed him that another man had been employed in his place, as he had neglected to attend to his horses. Perkins said that Lewis might go to jail—that he had money, and since Saturday night. He was pretty drunk.

Witness said that on the Saturday that Perkins quit work, he had spent most of the afternoon with him, and he saw them together again on Saturday.

When Perkins was paid off on Saturday it was expected that he would return to work on Monday.

THOSE SEANCES ON L STREET. A mulatto woman named "Willie" May was the next witness. She testified to having known Perkins since New Year's Day. She first met him in a lodging-house at Second and L streets, and had since lived with him. He was in the room at 8 o'clock Saturday evening, February 3d, when witness went out. She next saw him about 5 or 6 o'clock on Sunday. Witness asked him on Saturday for some money, and he said his employer had not paid him, but witness saw $1 50 in his pocket.

On Sunday evening, when Perkins came to their room, Starbird was with him. Perkins had a pistol, which he exhibited at the time—it was the same shown in court. Starbird went out first, and Perkins went with witness to supper. It was shortly after 6 o'clock. As they returned from supper they met Starbird, and he went with witness and Perkins to their room. About a half-hour afterward the two men went out.

Between 10 and 11 o'clock that night Starbird and Perkins returned to the room, where witness was in bed. They showed signs of liquor. Perkins went to bed, and Starbird sat down and remained for a couple of hours. He also lay on the bed for a while, and left about 1 o'clock.

Early on Monday evening Starbird called again on Perkins. The men went out soon afterward. They came back about 10 or 11 o'clock. Lili Horsey was with witness at the time. They all had some beer and Starbird paid for it. The witness denied having heard either of the men refer to "a nice little lady's gold watch."

On cross-examination the witness said Police Captain Talbot told her soon after her arrest that if she refused to testify in the case she would be prosecuted as accessory. The watch was shown in court the witness identified as hers.

THE SOLD THE PISTOL. Ike Zemansky, the well-known pawnbroker, testified to having sold the pistol found in Perkins' room. He was unable to say to whom it was sold.

THAT LADY'S WATCH. Addie Wilson, another female brunette, testified to having seen Perkins at Second and L streets, in the May woman's room. She also saw him there three or four weeks ago. It was on Sunday. On the following Tuesday the witness and Willie May were going up J street when the latter told her about the lady's watch. (She was not permitted to relate the conversation.)

At 3 o'clock on Monday morning Starbird left Perkins' room and went for beer. He had been there that night with Perkins and Willie May. She was quite certain she saw Starbird and Perkins there about 3 o'clock on Sunday evening.

THE TWO PISTOLS. Officer D. W. Higgins identified the pistols found in Starbird's house the day after the latter was shot by Hall.

Lily Horsey, who was by the way, is as black as the proverbial ace of spades identified Perkins' pistol, having seen him have it one Sunday afternoon in his room at 2 o'clock on Sunday evening.

Owing to the absence of Captain Talbot the examination was continued till this morning at 10 o'clock.

THE STARBUCK INQUEST.

Testimony of Hall and Others as to the Killing.

Verdict Returned by the Jury That Starbird Was Shot by Hall in Self-Defense.

Coroner Clark held an inquest last night on John P. Starbird, who was shot by Hall a few nights after the robbery of W. F. Jackson.

The main testimony was the same as published in the Record-Union the morning after the shooting.

George Phinney testified that Starbird moved into the vicinity of his saloon at E and F, Sixth and Seventh, about four months ago. He knew him well, and worked for him in the morning. Perkins was in his saloon on the night of February 4th, called for drinks and wanted to change a $20 piece. Witness refused.

Officers Douglas and Higgins asked him on the day of the shooting if he could identify the man who wanted the $20 piece changed. Witness asked Hall to go with Starbird to identify the man. Starbird asked if he was suspected of anything, and witness told him no. After the shooting Hall returned and said he was not a doctor.

S. C. Thornton said that Perkins came in for a drink one day when witness was helping Starbird out up a tree. Witness was in the saloon when Hall and Starbird went out on the night of the shooting. Hall asked witness to lend him his pistol, which he did. Hall said he was going for a walk, but did not think he would need it. Starbird drank and was quarrelsome sometimes.

Joseph T. Owen testified that Starbird and Hall came into his saloon on the morning of the shooting. Hall walked into the back part of the saloon and Starbird asked witness how much he owed him, and was told it was not much. They went out together.

Ex-Chief of Police Rodgers was on the corner of Fourth and K that evening, and Hall came to him and told him that the party who robbed Jackson was around there somewhere, and a man who was with him was going to point the party out. Witness recapitulated the conversation.

Witness could see that Starbird was suspicious of Hall. After the shooting witness saw Hall, and the latter told him that they went to Starbird's house and Starbird called him a stool-pigeon and shot him.

W. J. Harly swore that he went in the patrol wagon to the Railroad Hospital and brought Starbird down. The latter said he knew who shot him, but refused to tell who it was.

Dr. G. A. White described the wounds which caused Starbird's death and produced the bullet wound in Starbird's hand. He was standing up when shot.

Miss Ada Yeomans saw Hall and Starbird standing at Seventh and F on the evening of the shooting. Witness told Starbird to ask Hall to come in, and he did so. They appeared friendly.

Miss Minnie Ross was with Miss Yeomans that night and corroborated her testimony.

Officer Douglas said that the day after the robbery of Jackson he asked Phinney if he had seen the robbery and the latter said he had not. Witness told him about it and Phinney told him that a queer-looking fellow came in and got some drinks and wanted a $20 piece changed. Phinney described the man and witness was satisfied it was Perkins, as he had seen him and Starbird around the saloon several times. Witness told Phinney to keep a lookout and let him know if Perkins came around again.

Perkins came up two or three times, but witness could never catch him. He was looking for Perkins on the night of the shooting, but although he got track of him he did not find him. Phinney told witness to go to Starbird, and he would point Perkins out to him. Hall did not want to go, but went to oblige him. Witness recapitulated the circumstances as told by Hall and said that he (witness) learned that Perkins was hanging around Starbird's house till after 9 o'clock on the night of the shooting, but did not dare to go in.

Officer Higgins said he and Douglas had been looking for Perkins for several days, and heard of him at Sixth and E streets one day. They had called on him at Starbird's house that day, but did not see Starbird. He told how he found Starbird's pistol the day after the shooting.

Officer Allen detailed the conversation between Hall and ex-Chief Rodgers on the night in question. He saw Starbird and Perkins together late at night repeatedly, and also in the daytime. When Starbird saw Hall talking to Rodgers he turned pale, and said: "Bill, what does this mean? Are they trying to work me into anything?" Witness told him no, and Starbird said Higgins had been up to his house frightening his wife.

Captain Talbot heard of the shooting, and went up and saw Hall, and called his story. He went down and arrested Perkins. A woman who lived with Perkins told him that Starbird had been in the room of the latter a number of times.

John C. Hall testified that he got acquainted with Starbird on the night of the shooting. Phinney asked him to go with Starbird, who would point out a man who exhibited a $20 piece on the night Jackson was robbed. Witness did not want to go, but went as a favor to Phinney. They went down town, but Starbird did not seem anxious to go. They saw Chief Rodgers at Fourth and K.

Witness told Rodgers what they were after and they went away but did not find the man. When Starbird and witness were going home, the former told him that Phinney had been using him as a stool pigeon. Witness said he thought Phinney had used him as one just as much. As they went by Fifth and L, Starbird wanted to go around by the slough bank. Witness objected, but went, Starbird going ahead. As they came by some cars some man came out and spoke to Starbird, but witness did not know who it was.

They went to Starbird's house, and he insisted on witness going in to drink some beer. Starbird went into a back room, after drinking a glass, and speaking to his wife. As witness sat there, Starbird partly opened the door and shot him, saying: "This thing has gone far enough." Starbird's wife stood between witness and the middle room when the shot was fired and she ran away at the second shot. Starbird shot four times and hit witness twice. Witness struggled with him and finally got out his pistol and shot Starbird.

He shot Starbird twice and was going to shoot the third time, but remembered there were only three shots in the pistol and that the other man might be waiting for him outside. He was speaking to Mrs. Starbird when the first shot was fired. Starbird had a shot in the chest and that the other man might be waiting for him outside. He was speaking to Mrs. Starbird when the first shot was fired. Starbird had a shot in the chest and that the other man might be waiting for him outside. He was speaking to Mrs. Starbird when the first shot was fired. Starbird had a shot in the chest and that the other man might be waiting for him outside.

Witness borrowed the pistol because he thought he was going into a hard part of the town. Witness saw Perkins in Phinney's saloon on the Sunday night previous, and Perkins threw $20 on the bar to pay for drinks, and said he had been beaten out of $20.

The jury found that Starbird came to his death by a gunshot wound inflicted by John C. Hall in self-defense.
