ONE GOOD TO RESULT.

One good to come out of the recent unrest now ceasing, will be the opening of the eyes of the people to the criminality and un-Americanism of that imported thing the boycott, which has had its greatest manifestation in the railroad or Pullman boycotting trouble.

Whoever employs the boycott for one purpose is estopped by his own act from protesting against the use of the boycott by another in retaliation; when this return blow is delivered we have conflict, carried out in all fullness, turns every man's hand against every other man who refuses to do as he bids.

But it is replied by the radical labor journals that capital being cowardly is susceptible only to fear, and hence the boycott is the only peaceable and proper weapon to use against it.

Proscription is force, and when proscription is employed by either of two elements in society that are dependent upon each other, there most follow deplorable results.

The public is to-day arriving at a just estimate of the boycott, because it has had in the last three weeks a close view of it, and been brought to realization of its utter indefensibility, and hence we conclude that the attempt to boycott that has brought about the present distress has not been devoid of good.

COMPULSORY ARBITRATION.

There is a vast deal of talk about enacting laws to bring about compulsory arbitration. There can be no such thing. Arbitration involves consent of two or more to submission of an issue and agreement to abide by the judgment of a majority of the arbiters.

Now it needs not a thimbleful of brains to understand that as consent is the essence of arbitration, where it is not had there is and can be no submission of the issue.

The power of the Government may be interposed to prevent great public injury because of an issue between contending parties, but not to compel them to arbitrate, for the simple reason that there will then be subversion of individual liberty, and because any consent that is the result of coercion cannot be binding.

FLAVOR all your cold drinks with ten to fifteen drops of Angostura Bitters, to keep free from summer diseases and all sorts of indigestion.

precisely as upon a regularly rendered judgment.
But this is not compulsory arbitration, but voluntary submission, by which the parties to the issue substitute arbitrators for the court and jury.

Let us suppose that A, operating a factory, reduces the wages of B, an employe thereof; that B protests and strikes and compels A to come into a board or court of arbitration. B and A there submit their respective cases, with full knowledge that each must be bound by the judgment to be given.

It is replied, "but B may, if unwilling to return to work on the terms of the judgment, refuse, and still the judgment of arbitration will have been effective, for it will have placed B in the wrong and have deprived him of moral support, and he will be restrained from making war upon A."

As to that, he can be so restrained now, but are the friends of compulsory arbitration willing to accept the other horn of that dilemma? Suppose the decision is against A, the employe, and he, not being satisfied, concludes to cease and close up his factory, will B concede it, or insist upon the wheels turning and the payment of the old wage? If B grants to A the claim made for himself—that is, the right to refuse to work under compulsion—then what good has been accomplished?

No, if compulsory arbitration has any virtue whatever in its composition, it will be found in the capacity to enforce the decrees of the arbiters, and that means involuntary servitude, which is slavery.

In all this recent contention, the remnant of which is still visible, the Populist party has attempted to turn to its own advantage the incidents and issues of the strike. In doing so, it went to the extent of indorsing lawlessness, of encouraging overt acts of violence and resistance to the lawful authorities, and of contributing to the moral if not material support of those who were in an open resistance little short of rebellion to the law and the Government.

Hence it is just as unwise, wrong and cruel for labor to attempt to force itself upon capital as for the latter to attempt to coerce labor to service without its free will and consent.

The San Francisco Bulletin, in an effort to excuse its failure to publish the news, says, in the course of an article abusing Colonel Graham: "Since Colonel Graham took charge of the levee at Sacramento no reporters have been admitted within the Federal lines." That is a flatly false statement, as every newspaper man on the ground knows, and common justice demands that it be so branded.

While the railroad trains were tied up by the senseless and foreign boycott, the bicycle proved its value. It was the swiftest and most reliable vehicle for keeping lines of communication open between towns. In fact the bicycle has risen several notches in public esteem because of the service it has done the public the past three weeks.
