

GRADUATES FROM THE HIGH SCHOOL.

They Gave Their Closing Exercises Last Night.

A Crowded House Greeted Them—Exercises by Other Schools Yesterday.

The graduating exercises of the high school took place last night at the Metropolitan Theater, which was crowded from pit to dome by the citizens who take such pride in the institution.

The program opened with the singing of the "Star-spangled Banner" by the class of '94, which was finely rendered. An eloquent invocation by Rev. J. H. Reider followed.

Miss Theodore Willis then delivered the salutatory essay, "Milestones." She alluded to the days when the old-fashioned stage coach went lumbering over hill and dale with its passengers, who counted the milestones by the roadside as they neared the end of their journey.

The golden milestones to them was the one that brought them to their comfortable homes. The golden milestones to many of our celebrated men of letters has been different incidents which awakened them to a realization of their powers and capabilities.

In their school life the graduates had passed one by one the various milestones that marked the different grades, till they had now arrived at the end of their school life and stood upon the threshold of a new life, with untiring hands and untiring hearts.

Miss Annie Glenn's essay on "Trifles" followed. If we look at the heavens, dotted with glittering stars and the Milky Way, we are reminded that the great telescopes tell us that the latter is made up of millions of stars, so minute to our sight that they seem inseparable.

The sunlight that brightens the world made of trifle rays. Just as the progress of the material world is due to its atoms, so the progress of the mental world is due to trifles.

Galileo and the candle, from trifles gave the world great laws of physics. The artist, after choosing his subject, does not leave it to chance, but carries out each curve and line till his meaning is clear.

Nature paints the smallest leaf with the same fidelity as she molds the giant oak with. The things we live for, that we enjoy, are all trifles. They make us friends or enemies, joy or misery.

Our greatness or pettiness depends on our ability properly estimating trifles. Every generous wish, every noble thought, although it may give us no material benefit, broadens our life.

Henry S. Geisenroder, in his talk on "Manual Training," said that the city had 20,000 inhabitants. Of these the High School graduates annually one to each class.

The grammar school graduates number about one-third of their pupils, and about half of these drop out without going higher.

Would not the introduction of manual training arouse new interest and give the boy a chance to train his eye and hand? Its purpose is to enable him to find out for himself how things are best fitted.

There are 2,000 manual training schools in Germany, 400 in Austria, ninety in Switzerland and many in France, England and Russia. The cities in France are remarkable in the progress of trades and sciences, in which it has taken first place.

Manual training does not teach a trade, but the rudiments of a trade, and does not interfere with other branches of education. It gives a knowledge of the laws of mechanics much broader than the shop does.

Many grades of study are made possible in the admission of apprentices and shops have also done so. Our boys have to wait for a chance to get employment in ill-health, and it often ruins them, either through lack of company or vicious amusements.

The manual training would occupy their time and save them. Its adoption is only a matter of time, for wherever it has been tried it has proved a success.

Miss Ida Fleming's essay was on "The Girl of the Future," and it is correct in its prophecy the country will have reason to be proud of her. She will develop her mind with good books, study with the love of learning and the culture of her understanding.

Lincoln found it without seeking. True fame is the reward of those who conscientiously unconsciously work for their fellow-men.

Eugene E. Welby delivered an oration on "Hard Times." He held that there is a time in the world's history when all talents were looked upon as the Divine interposition, but that time has passed away and men now seek for cause and effect.

As a rule, hard times in the early centuries were caused by famine, pestilence or war. The Athenians achieved a temporary relief through the action of Socrates, but not until the middle of the nineteenth century has the world ever since been fighting the same battle.

In 1837 this country passed through various stages, and has been preparing for the present hard times. He thought the cause was bad legislation, and there are too many millionaires and lawyers in Congress, and the Coxe movement as un-American. The remedy for these evils lies in the ballot.

Miss Rachel C. Chappell delivered an essay on "Possibilities" and the valedictory. Life, she said, is not like a diamond, but like a seed. Though the diamond may be a rough stone, yet in the hands of the jeweler it becomes a thing of beauty. It shines in the crown of a Queen, but it is only a glittering stone, cold and lifeless.

Not so with the seed. It can be developed. The soil for the seed should be thoroughly prepared. Life should be treated like the seed—unfold it and develop its possibilities. A man's possibilities are limited only by his talent and ability in this country. The highest positions in politics and commercial life are open to him, and his opportunities are boundless.

So are they in philanthropic avenues, if he has wealth to devote to them. In all esthetic lines talent should be cultivated, that mankind may be elevated. Great numbers of institutions for higher education are open in our midst, showing new vistas of advancement.

Our moral nature, itself in beauty, as well as our mental, in order to subdue evil. She then took up the valedictory to her classmate, saying that she had come to separate, after three years of familiar intercourse in the schoolroom. They had gathered through the kindly and patient efforts of their teachers, informants and guides through their new lives. She hoped that she and they would so order their steps as to avoid mistakes that would be a source of regret to them.

The High School Orchestra played the "Martha Washington Overture," after which Superintendent Erlwiler, with brief and well chosen remarks, presented their diplomas to the class. The class song, written by Wallace H. Renwick, and arranged by Professor Theodore Martens, was then sung by the class, and concluded the exercises. It is as follows:

O, Time! thou inevitable spirit, To whose power we all must yield Like wheat to the scythe of the reaper. As he cuts his mowing field, We wish in the present to linger, Though to the future we seem bright; We wish, yet we know it is useless, That you stay your speedy flight.

The years have now glided away; Their joys were not fitted to last; But we will cherish forever Pleasant memories of the past. "Ain't High" will be always our motto As we sail on life's ocean sea; In letters of gold and of white On our standards it shall be.

But oh! the regrets of this parting, For we leave companions dear, Miss each to his own home, And may God go to us all near. We must not delay any longer, For we have time for little left; To friends, and to teachers, and schoolmates, To-night we must say farewell!

Sacramento Grammar. At the Sacramento Grammar School, Miss Mary J. Watson, Principal, a very interesting and extended programme was rendered by the pupils yesterday.

The room in which the exercises took place was decorated with flowers and American flags, and the light dresses and cheerful countenances of the young lady graduates was a pleasant contrast to the decorations.

The recitations, declamations and dialogues were appreciatively listened to by the audience, and all the participants in the programme were endorsed at the conclusion of each recitation.

Win J. Davis, President of the City Board of Education, delivered an interesting address to the scholars, and diplomas were presented by Superintendent Erlwiler.

Capital Grammar. Nine o'clock yesterday morning found the large assembly-room of the Capital Grammar School, Joseph W. Johnson, Principal, crowded to overflowing, with seats at a premium. The programme, which was published on Tuesday, was an excellent one, and its rendition was not inferior to the most successful.

The march and songs by the girls of the graduating class were given in the best possible manner, and the club playing showed as thorough attention as had been given to the physical education of the pupils as to their mental development, which is saying much.

The comic interlude, "Struck Oil," was very funny, and the girls entered well into the spirit of it in rendering their lines. The whole of the programme was carried out in a manner which was very pleasing to the teachers who had so patiently planned it.

AN APPEAL MADE. The Citizens' Protective Association to the Southern Pacific Company. The Citizens' Protective Association Executive Committee, consisting of Geo. B. Katzenstein, J. O. Coleman, V. S. McClatchey, Frank Miller, Geo. M. Mott, Lovell Tozer, E. C. Drescher, Fred K. Cox, A. A. Van Vorhis and H. G. Smith, has formulated and forwarded an address to the Southern Pacific Company, appealing for restoration to employment of such Sacramento operatives of the company as were not engaged in unlawful acts, and who did not incite their fellow-lawlessness.

The appeal pleads most strongly for such of the operatives as have families and homes, and begs the company to employ justice in its selection during this interval their increment would rebuild Carriage and restore the mosaic temples and sculptured friezes of the temples of East and Meleath, and set adrift again the flotillas of the Byras and unroll the banners of Dido above the citadel. But they reappear without usufruct, dim with burial and disease, and will find their way into museums and repositories of such ware, not helping any modern problem of finance or circulation, but pointing over again the moral.

The appeal is addressed to the company through the Division Superintendent, Colonel J. B. Wright. Harper's War History. "Harper's Illustrated History of the War" will be sent to all subscribers in the country direct to Chicago. All who desire the work must notify the local agents of this office direct, and within two weeks they will receive the numbers paid for. Nos. 1 to 12 are now ready. All who desire to subscribe for the full 25 numbers can do so by remitting $2.08 to this office. None but bona fide subscribers to the RECORD-UNION or WEEKLY UNION can get the history at 8 cents per number.

BALL AND RACQUET.

Inauguration of the High School Tennis Tournament To-Day.

This afternoon at 2 o'clock the Sacramento High School pupils will start their tennis tournament, continuing tomorrow afternoon, when the first tennis championship ever held by the High School will be completed. Doubles will be played and the following-named persons will compete:

Carroll of the Seniors and Nichols of the Middles will play together, while Blanchard (Senior) and Tozer (special) will form another combination. Van Voorhis (Middle) and Birdsall (Senior) comprise the team.

The boys have been practicing very hard of late and are in good form. Carroll and Nichols play a brilliant game, and will make a hard struggle for championship honors, provided Nichols plays a steady game and does not get too wild and smash the ball into the net.

The match will take place on the grounds at the Sacramento Lawn Tennis Club at the Pavilion and will doubtless be very close and interesting.

W. O. Bowers, General Cosby, Daniel Flint and Dr. J. R. Laine were among those who went to San Francisco yesterday afternoon. Yesterday General G. B. Cosby paid a social call on Colonel Graham, the Federal commander here, and the veterans passed a pleasant hour talking over army matters when the evening was spent in duty back in the fifties and were companions-in-arms of Fitzhugh Lee, Van Horn and other men of subsequent fame. They had not met for upward of thirty-five years.

The members of the graduating class of the Sutter school gathered for the prize party to Ernest Hart, one of their fellow graduates, at the residence of his parents, 121 L street, on Wednesday evening. The school banquet, which took place on that day, and many of the young people interested held a consultation as to the best method of winding up the entire matter. The result was a unanimous result. The surprise was complete, as the young man honored was not made aware of the contemplated visit of his schoolmates. The evening was very pleasantly passed by the happy young people. After partaking of the bounteous refreshments supplied, games, charades, dancing and singing, the party in the midnight hour adjourned to a hall, through that each had a "home, home, sweet home," in which were loving hearts to welcome them.

Among those present were the following: Mr. and Mrs. Hart, Mr. and Mrs. Milton, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Hart, E. Hart, Mabel Bradley, Ernest Rollin, Lulu Rosseque, Lucy Burdick, Olive Lovell, Ernest Thompson, Emma Shingle, Anna Thompson, Alleen Towle, Lillie Barrett, Amanda Gidani, Louise Hart, Blanche Gilliam, Mallico Reynolds, Robert W. Hart, John Farrell, Willie Popert, Ernest Hart, Willie Koyler, Loyal Moore, Henry Frazier, Perley Graves, Frank Lindner, Archie Gray, Willie Salze, Bert and John Farrell, and Mr. and Mrs. Julian W. Johnson.

"Got There Just the Same." Lieutenant G. W. Melvor, Seventh United States Infantry, registered at the Golden Eagle last night. He was detailed by the War Department as Inspector of the National Guard, for encampments that would have been held had it not been for the strike.

During the time the guard has been in service he has been in the ranks of strikers constantly, and his counsels and suggestions have been duly appreciated by the officers of the National Guard.

Unnecessary Commotion. Some bedding in a Chinese den on I street, between Second and Third, caught fire shortly before 8 o'clock last evening, and caused an alarm to be sounded. There was no necessity whatever to call the Fire Department on the fire, which was out before the whistle ceased.

Buried Treasure. At Montevideo, France, Hannibal's war chest turns up full of Tarantine coins still worth paper for two thousand years. The metal, of which they are composed remaining uncorroded and the Punic devices stamped upon them retaining their primitive legibility. They were deposited in the soil there, in some unrecorded season of panic, fiscal or military, and in the pressure and confusion of after events forgotten. If they could have been discovered during this interval their increment would rebuild Carthage and restore the mosaic temples and sculptured friezes of the temples of East and Meleath, and set adrift again the flotillas of the Byras and unroll the banners of Dido above the citadel. But they reappear without usufruct, dim with burial and disease, and will find their way into museums and repositories of such ware, not helping any modern problem of finance or circulation, but pointing over again the moral.

THE EXACT EXPRESSION.

Just What Congress Said of the Great Strike.

The following are the exact words of the resolutions adopted in the Senate and the House on the question of the exercise of executive power by the President against the lawlessness of the strikers. The Senate resolutions, passed without a dissenting vote, read:

"Resolved, That the Senate indorses the prompt and rigorous measures adopted by the President of the United States and by the members of his Administration to repulse and repress by military force the interference of lawless men with the due process of the laws of the United States and with the transportation of the mails of the United States, and with commerce among the States."

"It is within the plain constitutional authority of the Congress of the United States to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several States and with the Indian tribes, to establish post-offices and post roads, and to ordain and establish inferior courts, and the judicial power is extended to all cases in law and equity arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States. It is the duty of the President, under the Constitution, to see that the laws are faithfully executed, and this it is provided that he shall be 'Commander-in-Chief of the army and navy of the United States and of the militia of the several States when called into the actual service of the United States.'"

"It is treason against the United States for a citizen to levy war against them or to adhere to their enemies, giving them aid or comfort."

"Those who combine to use force, to assault or resist the constituted authorities of the United States, civil or military, should be warned of the magnitude of their offense, and those who can honest bread by honest toil can do nothing more for order than their interest in the law should show them any sort of countenance in their lawless course."

The action of the President and his administration has the only sympathy and support of the law-abiding citizens of the people of the United States, and he will be supported by all departments of the Government and by the power and resources of the entire Nation."

The House resolution, passed with but twenty-six dissenting votes, reads: "Resolved, That the House of Representatives indorses the vigorous efforts of the President and his administration to suppress lawlessness, restore order and prevent improper interference with the enforcement of the laws of the United States and with the transportation of the mails of the United States and with interstate commerce, and deems that the success which has already attended his efforts is cause for public and general congratulation."

The House also indorses the official report of the proceedings in Congress as printed in the National Record. While not in the nature of bills, the expression has all the force and effect of law.

THE MANIA FOR REGULATION.

Under the guise of socialism and humanitarianism the spirit of monopoly is in the air. The well-meaning every-body are longing to see whether they are not, or can not command a majority of the people, and thus to wield that compulsive power which it is one of the strange delusions of the modern world that majorities have a right to exercise in every thing. Yet it was proposed to put any one of these well-meaning persons under the absolute control of another well-meaning person, who should provide for him his coming and going, decide for him what he should support, how much money he should give in charity and for what particular objects, how much wealth he should accumulate, and what the fruits of his industry should pass over to the State, we greatly fear that well-meaning person number one would make over control of his life and property to the aid of those who agree with him in opinion, to settle these points for others; but he has never seriously considered what it would mean to pass over his own liberty. Ordinary human beings require something more than an assurance of another person's good intentions before they are willing to surrender to him of any large measure of their freedom of action; and we imagine that many of those who to-day advocate an indefinite increase in the power of the State do so under a fond impression that their particular views and schemes, humanitarian or other, will always prevail.

They, with the best of intentions, are minded, want to govern the world for its good. Well, what tyranny ever professed less? Good intentions are excellent things, but they are of no avail in the hands of the policeman's truncheon they become committed to many devious lines of policy, and quickly assume all the odious characteristics of tyranny.

SMACKS OF RELIGIOUS PERSECUTION.

Seventh-Day Adventists in Tennessee Fined for Working on Sunday. W. B. Capps, a quiet, orderly citizen of Dresden, Tenn., is being made the victim of what appears to be a case of religious persecution, the only charge against him being that he performed some work on the first day of the week. Mr. Capps was arrested June 8, 1893, and at his trial before the Circuit Court of Weakley County, June 27, 1893, he was fined the sum of $50, amounting in all to $51.50. His case was appealed to the Supreme Court of Tennessee, which affirmed the judgment of the lower court, May 24, 1894, making a grand total of the sum of $101.50, to be served out at the paltry rate of 25 cents a day. This will necessitate the confinement of the prisoner 412 days, or one year and nearly three months.

Mr. Capps has a wife 24 years of age, and four children, the oldest being only six years old, and one of them sick at the time of his imprisonment. His family is left all alone a quarter of a mile from any house. He is a poor man, and unable to support his family during his confinement. He does not deny working on Sunday, but did so because he had rested the day before, according to the Bible, because he recognized his God and given right to labor six days in the week, beginning on the first, as did his Creator; and because, in according to the demands of the State to rest on Sunday, he would be denying his Lord. Hence he refuses to pay the fine and costs, regarding them unjust, since the State is attempting to enforce upon him a dogma of religion, with which it can do right have nothing whatever to do. Therefore he has gone to jail, though a physician stated that he could never live in that unwholesome place the time required by the enormity of the State's assessment.—Chicago Herald, July 14th.
