

SACRAMENTANS IN THE MOUNTAINS

How Summer Sojourners Are Passing the Time.

A Lady's Notes on Camp Life in the High Sierra—Letter From Klamath Springs.

CAMP DEFIANCE, MOUTH OF SPOKAN CREEK, August 16, 1894.

EDS. RECORD-UNION: As we know that you take an interest in your town-folks who are away from home, I send you this short account of some of our doings, which may serve to interest some of your readers.

In the first place, just think of the courage required to camp on (or rather off) the Tahoe road after the fact that a bold highwayman held up the stage a day or two before we came. This morning our men left us girls in camp and went about their several occupations.

The Deer Park stage came along and gave us a lift up the road. My two companions got out to go a little further up the road to join one of our men, and I started back to mind the camp. As I walked along the dusty road I reflected that I was all alone and with a very valuable borrowed crocheted pattern about me, and also the Record-Union, just come by highwayman, but a great deal better when I remembered that the Record-Union was solid enough to make itself felt about my ears if I was so unfortunate as to meet the highwayman, and that I had a crocheted pattern to go to his ears. I also concluded to give him the point of the crocheted-look, instead of the pattern.

To people who never camped out it might seem to be very disagreeable, but as it also seems that each person is required to eat during life so much dust or dirt, why not begin now and get your amount swallowed and have done with it? We try to imagine that we are Adam and Eve, or at all events the first eight souls created, till the stage passes and the mosquitoes arrive in our dreams. But I must do even the mosquitoes justice. They evidently came with the tourists to the lake, for a more polite set I never knew. They have a peculiar crocheted calling hours, and come between 3 and 5 o'clock, and we always take good care to be "out" when they come.

To show how nicely we must be situated, I will mention the fact that a lady on the lake stage this morning spied our tents in the hollow, and exclaimed: "Oh, look! isn't that lovely?" But I don't think she could be persuaded to try it. We have tried it for the last seven years and do think it is lovely.

We have a private batchelor in our party, and I would give a good deal to see him get into bed. He has a very fine mattress and plenty of bedclothes, and to keep the night clear of his brow he has made himself a little tent. It is as wide as his mattress, and about a foot and a half high. He crawls into bed head first and draws his tent up to his feet from inside. He keeps his trusty gun under his pillow, but I am afraid we should all be eaten up alive before he extricated himself from his tent to come to our rescue. We depend on our crocheted dog that on his gun, and hope that if it is our lot to be eaten up we shall be so sound asleep as not to know it.

The folks left the gun with me one day when I kept camp alone, and I was as much afraid of it as I should have been of a bear, or the aforesaid highwayman, though I should not like to take the risk of knowing how I looked at it and wondered what I should do if anything happened.

Now, I have not the slightest idea how much room the tent takes in your paper, so you must excuse me if I trespass, but I do want to say a word about "us" campers. Will you kindly explain how it is that so much comment arises about campers spoiling the fishing? Surely on God's great earth there is room for folks who live in tents, and as well folks who stay in their homes, and as well folks who answer well the fish question also. If boarders don't get many fish it is because they are dressed up too fine and don't want to get their feet wet. I don't come and be caught. All can get enough if they are willing to work a little. But they say, "No, the campers have spoiled the fishing." I say it is not fair to say so.

It is very true that the streams and creeks are stocked by private individuals with fish for the benefit of their guests at their homes, but it is also true that they are stocked by the State as well, and as we live in the State and pay taxes we have a right to fish. If we can, I shall have to close with you this evening, for I get started about something else and neglect our camp. I am sure if everyone does not camp out in their summer outing it is not my fault. I have talked myself hoarse more than once in my favor.

Just imagine how convenient our bathroom is, and what could be more romantic than sitting on a log in the middle of the stream and letting the water cleanse your tired feet for you, all in the light of the full moon. If you will just dip your feet in with a rush, as it were, the worst is over—at least they say so, for I have not tried it yet. I shall try when the sun is full instead of the moon.

Do you realize what an undertaking it is to write when you are out in the woods, with your school days eighteen years behind you, and with the dictionary at home in the bookcase? If so, you will appreciate this letter. What a great deal I have not told you about—the pine gum getting all mixed up with the teeth, and the advantage of being where you get in a hurry, you can hurry without trying to be dignified about it, and lots of other things.

E. N. R.

AT KIAMATH SPRINGS, CALIF., August 15, 1894.

EDS. RECORD-UNION: The sudden disappearance of Richard Wise has aroused Siskiyou County, and residents of this section are in a fever of anxiety. The news is whispered about. Some declare that certain parties who are suspected of the murder of Charles Spence (whose body was found in the river near here) had where Dick Wise is. Detectives have been here for two weeks trying to unravel the mystery, but without success so far. Some of the other residents talk freely of lynching, and it would not be surprising if something tragic should happen some day.

The guests at the springs soon will organize a protective club, and all members will go armed when out after dark. There are thirty-five guests here now. Among them are the following well-known Sacramentoans: Mr. and Mrs. Captain J. D. Young, Samuel Pope, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Coyle, Eugene S. Elkus, Dr. W. R. Clumess, Jr., Miss Mabel Clumess and Dr. Ernest Deane. The late arrivals are: Mrs. Aiken and Miss Truitt of Fresno; Mrs. A. Martin, Dr. Wm. Martin, Miss C. Glenn of Oakland; D. H. Worthington, editor of the Klamath Falls Enterprise; William Thomas, C. M. Bryant and J. G. Newbath of Chico, Cal.; G. W. Cresson and wife and Miss L. Robinson of Chicago, Ill.; A. Waters, W. A. Bernheim, Charles T.omas, Ben Sheff, Ed Sheff and G. F. Peterson of San Francisco.

The "Elkus" Mud-Bath Club entertained some of the guests last evening in songs, jokes and personal adventures in the mud-baths. A prize was offered for the most comical experience. Eugene Elkus won the prize, stating how, after coming out of the mud, he got clean without the aid of water. He used thirty-four towels, and his experience, as related, provoked laughter.

Society—that is, Klamath's 4,000—is all agog over the coming ball that is to be given at Trust's Hotel, one mile below here, next Friday night. All here will attend.

A party of guests left the hotel Tuesday morning for a visit to the logging camp, and after a hard climb up the mountain arrived at the log cabin and got aboard the engine and had a delightful ride of five miles through timber. Arriving at the camp they were hospitably entertained by Mrs. Marsh, whose husband is proprietor and foreman. The sights and scenes in a logging camp are never forgotten.

Society here indulges in amusements such as tennis, croquet, swimming, etc., and time does not hang heavily on one's hands, as jolly parties leave daily on hay rides and long jaunts among the pines, and jollity reigns supreme.

A guest from Sacramento, who is dubbed "Wheels," received a lovely present last evening from friends in Sacramento. It was a lovely necktie, and it was duly appreciated. But that tie now adorns the neck of a "yaller" dog named "Wheels."

Surgeons have been here for some time, and it is impossible to find out their intentions, but it looks like they are surveying for a railroad up the Klamath River.

The Record-Union is in demand, and borrowing is considered all right. The Sacramento contingent will leave for home next week.

KNIGHTS AND LADIES

Harmony Lodge's Entertainment Given Last Evening.

Harmony Lodge, Knights and Ladies of Honor, held an enjoyable and interesting entertainment at Pythian Castle last evening. The hall was well filled, and the audience showed its appreciation of those who took part in the entertainment by frequent applause. The programme was as follows:

CARELESS DRIVERS

They Often Deliberately Invite a Collision.

Once in a while an electric car runs into a wagon, and remarks are made as to the carelessness of the motorist. As a matter of fact, the remarks should often be to the carelessness of drivers.

A gentleman who rides daily on the street cars said yesterday that he was often astonished at the carelessness of drivers of vehicles who in proximity to the cars. Almost daily he sees foolhardy individuals drive straight across the track in front of an advancing car, trusting to luck and the watchfulness of the motor-man to avoid a collision.

"In fact, the custom is so prevalent," said he, "that three times within the past forty-eight hours the car that happened to be riding on at the time barely escaped running into a wagon that drove directly in front of it on the track. Had the wagon been stopped in either case, I should have held the motorman entirely blameless and the driver entirely to blame."

INSOLVENT NUNES

Suit to Amend a Conveyance Made to His Wife.

George E. Dierssen, assignee of the estate of Frank Nunes, an insolvent debtor, has, by his attorney, C. M. Beckwith, brought suit in the Superior Court against Nunes to have canceled and set aside a conveyance made by him to his wife, Mary Nunes, of a piece of land adjoining the levee on the east bank of the Sacramento River.

Nunes was declared an insolvent debtor on the 2d of last June, and Dierssen was elected assignee of the estate by the creditors. Mary Nunes made the conveyance to his wife to be indebted to Dierssen and a number of other persons, and the complaint alleges that he made the conveyance for the purpose of defrauding his creditors of their claims, and to prevent them from enforcing their demands against the land by judgment or execution. Suit was therefore brought by the assignee to declare the conveyance null and void.

AN ACTIVE STRIKER

Another Man in the Hands of the United States Marshal.

Another of the men implicated in the late railway strike has been placed in jail. He is B. B. Coleman of Dunsmuir, Shasta County. When the strike was inaugurated Coleman engineered the tie-up of the Shasta division of the Southern Railway, and was considered a leader of the strikers.

When an attempt was made to start a train Coleman pulled a non-union fireman from the engine. For that he was arrested, and later was charged with interfering with the interstate commerce law. Wednesday he was turned over to the custody of the United States Marshal, and the assignee a deputy brought him to this city.

Vivid Personality.

The story of "Ann Mirandy," which is presented elsewhere in this issue, is another of Edgar L. Wakeman's masterful character delineations. Ann Mirandy, Tripletbob Trigtidy and the three ravens of the slant have been sketched with such stern fidelity and endowed with such vivid personality, that they will instantly take their place in that measureless gallery of human types which literature has provided for study, illustration and contrast.

Died in the Hospital.

L. Thomas, a member of Battery B of this city, died at the County Hospital on Thursday. He had been in delicate health for some time, but was on duty during the late strike, and it is thought that sleeping out at night hastened his death. Deceased's father resides at Spokane, Wash., and is now on his way home. The funeral will take place at 3:30 on Sunday afternoon from the undertaking rooms of John Miller at Ninth and K streets.

New Citizens.

Superior Judge Prewett of Placer County, presiding in Department Two of the Superior Court, yesterday admitted to citizenship Charles Neidhart, a native of Germany, on the testimony of Herman Sanland and Gottlob Paig, Benjamin Rosser, a native of Costa Rica, Central America, on the testimony of John B. Rodgers and M. J. Burke.

The Drowned Stevedore.

The body of a man, said to be that of Patrick Connolly, who on last Wednesday, while painting on the San Joaquin No. 2, fell into the river and was drowned, was found in the stream at the foot of S street last evening. The body was taken to the Morgue.

YOUNG CALKINS IS IN TROUBLE.

Arrested at Yreka on a Charge of Forgery.

Charles Heisen of This City the Complainant—His Version of the Affair.

C. L. Calkins was arrested at Yreka, Siskiyou County, on Thursday by Deputy Constable Brissel of this city on a charge of forgery, sworn to by Charles Heisen.

Heisen says that in September, 1892, Calkins came to him and said that he was interested in the Amador Record, which had published the San Francisco Depot Act, and for which the State was to pay that paper the sum of $364.50. Calkins said he was short of money and wanted to borrow $100. Heisen gave him a check on the California State Bank for $150 and $10 in coin. Calkins then gave Heisen powers of attorney on the State Controller and State Treasurer and signed on them the name of his brother, T. D. Calkins. He also made the same indorsement on the back of the check given him by Heisen.

The Amador Record was published by M. D. and T. D. Calkins, father and brother of the prisoner, and it is claimed that Calkins had no interest in the paper whatever. As soon as he obtained the money from Heisen he left the city, and nothing more was thought of the transaction until Heisen went to the State Controller and, presenting a power of attorney from Calkins, demanded the warrant calling for the amount of the cost of advertising the Depot Act.

Heisen was informed that Palmer & Key, typographers in San Francisco, held an assigned claim from the publishers of the paper for type. It then developed that something was wrong.

Word was sent to T. D. Calkins about the matter, and he replied that the publishers of the paper had assigned their claim against Heisen or the type, and that C. L. Calkins had no interest in the paper.

State Controller Colgan refused to give the warrant to either Heisen or the type founders until they settled among themselves who was entitled to it.

Heisen, after ascertaining that the man to whom he had given the money signed the power-of-attorney with a name other than his own, relinquished claim to the warrant and it was given to the San Francisco firm.

He then swore out a complaint against Calkins, charging him with forgery, but before the warrant could be served Calkins left the city. That was in September, 1892, and ever since that time the officers have been searching the State over in an endeavor to apprehend him.

It seems that after leaving this city he went to Fresno. From there he went to Napa, and thence to Yreka, where he worked in the Journal office. While away from this city he assumed the aliases Claude Wellington and Clyde Wellington.

Having signed himself as T. D. Calkins on the two powers of attorney and on the check which he presented at the bank in this city, three separate warrants were made out against him. This action was taken as a precautionary measure, for it was thought his friends in Yreka would come to his rescue and prevent, if possible, his being taken back to this city.

The presentation of the officers was well taken, for the first time he was arrested. He gave bail in the sum of $1,000. The officer, not to be outdone in this manner, arrested him again on the second warrant. Again he was arrested, and again was he arrested on the third warrant. It is said the bail on the third arrest was fixed at $2,500, and not being able to secure that amount of bail he was locked up.

Constable Brissel will arrive in this city with his prisoner this morning.

AMUSEMENTS

At the Metropolitan Theater at sharp 8 o'clock this evening Manager Todd inaugurated the season of 1894 by introducing Mr. Frohman's company, headed by John Drew, in Carleton's charming comedy, "The Butterflies." It is probably the best thing Henry Guy Carleton has written. Its literary quality is very high and its story is very cleverly told. The character of Frederick Ossian was written for John Drew, and it fits him admirably. He is supported by Lewis Baker, Harry Howard, Arthur Byron, Leslie Allen, Frank E. Lamb, Mrs. Annie Adams, Anna Belmont, Kate Meeke and Maud Adams. Wherever the company has produced the play, both here and abroad, it has met with the press; indeed it is rare that the critics are so agreed as in the case of Drew, his company and Carleton's comedy. The troupe is to leave for Salt Lake for Monday night. It must therefore leave here to-night. As is frequently done the overland train will be held for the benefit of those who give the play without any cutting. The management announces that the curtain will rise at 8 o'clock sharp. The assurance is given that the comedy will be given in all fullness and with every detail that made it so very successful at San Francisco, and without any abridgement or haste whatever. But why should not the curtain go up at 8 o'clock on all theatrical entertainments in this city? A few years ago that was the rule; presently the show curtain opens at 7:30, and has degenerated into 8:25 between other-wise. If any good and sufficient reason can be advanced for this we should be pleased to hear of it. In this community, where the theater-goers are largely those who must begin their day's labor by rising at 6 o'clock in the morning, it is especially desirable that performances should conclude at a reasonably early hour in the evening. When they are not begun, however, until between 8 and 9 o'clock, the theater-goers can rarely reach their beds before midnight. If the management will adopt the rule that in all cases the curtain shall go up at 8 o'clock, the orchestra having played the overture eight minutes prior, they will applaud the change and the few late comers, for whom the curtain is now held, will adapt themselves to the new order of things.

The jury found that he came to his death by railroad shock, caused by being run over by a railroad car, near the crossing at Twelfth and B streets, the result of his own carelessness.

SLIGHTLY CALORIC

A Railroad Station Where the Mercury Sometimes Climbs.

Observer Barwick, in his railroad reports across some curiosities, and to show the amount of heat the lady station agents must occasionally endure, the following record will be interesting reading for those who love to pass their time in the shady nooks and cool corners of California.

At Brighton during July the agent reports the highest temperature as being 123°, and by the way of explaining such extraordinary results the agent, Miss Luna B. Clarke, sends Mr. Hoel, Chief Engineer of the Southern Pacific Company, the following, which reached Mr. Barwick along with the company's other meteorological data:

BRIGHTON, August 11, 1894. William Hoel, Chief Engineer, Southern Pacific Company—DEAR SIR: My reports are as correct as I can make them. It was that warm (123°) in the car. The sun shines on the car all day, and when there is no wind it is rather warm. I tried putting the thermometer in the box outside, and it went still higher. I shall be able to better as soon as I move in the new station.

"KID" WHEATLEY. A Tough Who Gave Officer Bagley a Hard Fight.

Officer Bagley was passing the White House, on Third street, between K and L, last evening when he was accosted by a man who, the officers say, lives off the earnings of a woman on L street. He accused Bagley of persecuting the women of that section of the city and letting them know the importance of his position by accepting perquisites from them. The officer became angered at the insult and told the man he must show him the woman of L street who would corroborate his statement.

As they were on their way to the place the man turned on Bagley and assaulted him with a cane. Bagley floored him, and while attempting to handcuff him he bit the officer on the leg.

With the assistance of Officers Mailey and Higgins Bagley took his man to the police station, where he gave his name as "Kid" Wheatley, well known to the police. It has not yet been decided what charge will be placed against him.

The barometer readings at 5 a. m. and 5 p. m. were 29.95 and 29.57 inches, respectively. The highest and lowest temperatures one year ago yesterday were 81° and 47°, and one year ago to-day 80° and 54°.
