THE ELECTRIC POWER. On Saturday morning, as the dawn was breaking, the announcement was made that the experiment of transmitting electrical energy from the great works at Folsom erected by the Sacramento Electric Power and Light Company was successful.

One day last week there appeared in these columns a sketch of the claim made by Professor Haupt, Chief Engineer of an Eastern compressed air company, to the effect that the economic transmission of electricity for power purposes could not be achieved beyond a five-mile limit.

That claim was published as news, and that both sides of the controversy concerning transmission of power long distances might be presented. We then said that it was not thinkable that capital would invest so largely as it has in the electric transmission business except on the well-grounded faith that long carriage of energy was possible, and at a cost to justify the displacement of steam.

In the face of the claim of Professor Haupt we have now the demonstration of the opposing claim of the electricians. The power is at present coming to Sacramento from the originating works at Folsom, and is in use in running street cars in this city.

This transmission is effected in twenty-two miles, and it is therefore the longest power stretch in the world. The engineers state that the loss in such transmission is about 10 per cent, rather below than above that figure probably; that the delivery of such power can be effected in this city at a greatly lessened cost from the steam basis, a reduction, we are told, that will be almost a cut in two of old prices.

When it is considered that power has been costing as high as $120 to $150 a year per horse-power, the significance of the claim will be better understood.

On all sides Sacramento is now the recipient of congratulations as the pioneer city in this new scheme of low-priced power and the utilization of water-power to turn the wheels of industry through the agency of transmitted electrical energy.

But we must keep in mind that these congratulations will be repeated for other cities and towns which secure similar advantages by similar means. Thus, within three months electrical power transmitted twenty-eight miles will be introduced into Fresno, and that place will then boast of the longest distance of transmission in the world.

These facts serve to emphasize what the RECORD-UNION has so often said, that when opportunity offers the towns and cities which embrace it are most likely to come into the lead in trade, manufacturing and the development of the resources of the State.

Interests are becoming fixed just now that have long been fluctuating. Next year and the next are to determine what are to be the large and prosperous centers in this State. Those cities and towns that are not to the forefront within that period will be likely to remain far in the rear for many years.

It therefore behooves Sacramento to lose not a moment of progressive activities of all kinds, in order that large interests may be concentrated here, and our resources developed as speedily as possible.

We have already pointed out that a very considerable number of lines of manufacture are open to us to supply home demands that are now met by Eastern enterprise, operating in several cases upon raw material which we send East to be returned to us in manufactured forms.

The RECORD-UNION has also indicated several lines of industry new to us that can be safely inaugurated here to meet coast demand that is now supplied from the East out of raw material not produced here as yet for such purposes, but which we have in quantity—the manufacture of wall paper, for instance.

But aside from these things Sacramento must bend her energies to local improvement that she may be the most inviting city for new elements of prosperity. For when other places utilize water power, as they will do, and as two are already organizing to do, one of which we have named in this article, we will be thrown into competition and rivalry with cities and towns which will dispute with us as to the most desirable and inviting local claims.

Sacramento, because of her centrality, the railroad connections she has, her seat between the two great valleys of the State, her river navigation, the magnitude of present fixed interests, her proximity to the foothill region, her established commercial interests, and her large jobbing trade, has an advantage that gives her the upper hand if she is quick to move in the matter of dissipating the disadvantages of the place that rival towns will cite against us, such as the high rate of taxation, the delay in putting in the needed drainage and sewer system, the introduction of clear water, and complete organization of business, trade, industrial and other interests for the systematic promotion of the best interests of the city, and to conserve unity of action among all our people.

A THREATENED REVOLUTION. The San Francisco Call published an article yesterday of a sensational character, to the effect that another great strike is to be inaugurated. In this instance it is promoted largely, we are told, by socialistic influences, which have been actively at work among bodies of organized labor, and by the agitators in the unions which have been recognized as leaders.

It is said in the article referred to, that the intention is to make the strike so great that compared with it that of 1894 will appear to have been but a pigny.

The scheme, it we are told, to bring on a revolution; a peaceable one, if it can be done, but a bloody one if necessary. The strike, it is indicated, is to be for the direct purpose of overturning present social and governmental systems, and setting up the fanciful plans of the socialistic dreamers. The Call adds that so certain are the authorities that the attempt at revolution is to be made late in August or early in September, that the military and police officials are in communion in San Francisco upon the subject.

When the reorganizer of the American Railway Union was here some months ago, it was given out that the intention is to be ready for a possible upheaval. That while that organization did not propose any special reasons for inaugurating a strike, it did intend to prepare for a general one—which was understood to be the equivalent of readiness to promote trouble.

There may be much truth in the story of the Call, but assuming it to be wholly true that a strike is probable, it seems unthinkable that sane men should contemplate such a movement. Here the country is upon the threshold of better times, trade is flowing with fuller tide, industry is augmenting, wages are going up, the whole country is blossoming into prosperity, and the promise for an era of plenty was never better. Yet it is proposed at such time to attempt a social and governmental revolution through a labor strike, to paralyze the whole country and inaugurate a long period of distress, suffering and industrial inaction, with a view of putting aside the institutions of the fathers and substituting the fanciful ideas of socialists and idealists, a parcel of whom have been traveling about in California recently stirring up people to discontent.

If there is planning going on to start a revolution, and rack the republic to its uttermost, it is to be hoped that the common sense of the people will come to the rescue and meet the agitators with such a front as will deter all their kind from further proceeding in the matter. If there is no avoidance of the prophesied ill possible, then the Nation will once more be put on trial and called upon to demonstrate its right to live by its capacity to throttle the disturbers and punish them.

We do not believe the men of America are prepared, or ever will be, to see the fabric of free Government pulled down, that there may be erected upon its ruins the composite of socialistic impracticability. When it comes to an attempt, if ever it is made, to seize the Republic by the throat, there will develop instantly a patriotic power impelled by love of country and home that will crush the scheme like an egg shell.

THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE. A fair degree of progress was made Friday evening in the matter of forming a Chamber of Commerce. There were 120 signers to the call and about seventy-five citizens were in attendance at the initial meeting. It was resolved to form the body at once, and to that end the Mayor was asked to name a committee to submit plans at a future meeting, when they will be discussed and an organization effected.

Now let it be understood that there must be no delay in this matter. The next meeting should be held this week, and it should be such a large and representative one that the chamber can be formed at that time, and its officers set to work at once.

When the RECORD-UNION suggested the erection of a Chamber of Commerce it was deeply impressed with the necessity for such formation at this time, and that it would be suicidal to put it off for some indefinite date in the unknown future. Years ago the RECORD-UNION advocated such formation as is now under way, but a Board of Trade took the place of that idea. That body was restricted in purpose and powers, and finally fell into decay. When we took up the matter some weeks ago the suggestion was thrown out that the new body should be of broad purpose and have a wider scope of activity than a mere business organization; it should take into its membership any good, intelligent citizen willing to unite with it and having the interests of the city at heart.

It is to be hoped that the body now to be formed will be such a one. What we want in Sacramento in such an organization is a large desirable membership and consequent small expense to each. We want to have all worthy interests represented in it, along with all good ideas, all promotive spirit, all public spirited men, indeed every person who will work and think for the city, and who believes that every man who lives in a town owes to it a debt of good will and helpfulness that he can never fully pay, and should be constantly laboring to discharge.

STILL MISSING. No Further Tidings of Charles Brockway—Another Letter. Charles Z. Brockway, who disappeared so mysteriously on Friday last, is still missing. Public opinion appears to be about equally divided on the point as to whether or not the young man committed suicide, as threatened in the letters he sent to his mother and attorneys, or whether he simply flew to some other locality to avoid his creditors.

Besides the letter written to his mother, in which he stated that he intended to drown himself, Brockway also wrote a letter to Alvin J. Bruner, the attorney, which contained a request of some of his friends that be committed suicide.

Brockway was to have called at Armstrong & Bruner's office Friday to confer with them on some private business, but instead of doing so sent the following letter:

SACRAMENTO, July 11, 1895. Mr. Bruner: I am tired of living. I will take my life to-night. Will you look after my mother's and sister's business for me, as I left my will with my mother?

The last known of Brockway in this city was on Friday evening, when he is said to have been seen leaning against one of the cars of the train about to leave for San Francisco.

Brockway owed a number of persons considerable sums of money in addition to the mortgage on his portion of the ranch where he family reside, and while many think he has really committed suicide those more intimately acquainted with him believe he will soon be heard from elsewhere.

He had been, it is said, a constant patron of the places where pools are sold on races in San Francisco and the East, which races, it is generally understood, are controlled by rings of bookmakers who are waxing rich off the dupes who daily patronize them and "blow in" their own and other people's money.

CALIFORNIA'S EXHIBIT. The One Intended for the Atlanta Exhibit. Secretary Filcher, of the State Board of Trade, has sent a circular letter to all the Boards of Supervisors throughout the State, notifying them of the postponement of the convention. In his letter Mr. Filcher says:

"The exhibit we have here could not be gotten together for less than $75,000. After being thoroughly examined, and with such additions as the affiliating companies can make, and as other counties will contribute, we will be able to do a nominal cost of from $500 to $1,000 to exhibit at Atlanta equal in variety and attractiveness, if not quite so extensive in quantity, as that made at the World's Fair, and which cost the various counties in the aggregate at least $500,000."

So far no decision has been reached as to the location of the exhibition at Atlanta. The board has received two offers, one from the management and the other from private sources. At the last meeting of the board Mr. Mills, during the course of his remarks, stated that the exhibit would not be made in a private building, nor one built by private funds. Until the money for the exhibit has been raised no decision will be made by the board.

Briefly stated the position is this: Mrs. Dooley of Los Angeles has secured a concession from the Atlanta management granting her the privilege of erecting a California building. In this space is being offered at the same price as is charged by the management in other buildings. From Mrs. Dooley can be offered of free space in the California building, but the matter has not yet been passed upon.

TAX REDUCTIONS. The County and City Equalizers Will Act To-day. This is the day on which the Supervisors and City Trustees must decide on all the applications made to them for reductions on county and city assessments.

There have been quite a number of applications made to the Supervisors, but very few to the City Trustees. In some instances the reductions offered are on improvements, in others on personal property, and again on real estate.

In the latter class of cases entire farms or city lots are sometimes offered for reduction, and in others only portions thereof or parts of lots.

FALSE PRETEXTS. Two Men Arrested for Buncoing People Out of Money. Two men named Strange, alias H. M. Stone and H. De Long, are locked up in the City Prison pending an investigation as to whether they are guilty of having received money under false pretenses.

One of the men has admitted to Captain Greene that they had obtained money fraudulently. The story is that they have been selling tickets of admission to the "Veronica" picnic at East Park, a picnic of which nobody had heard.
