

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Hon. David Wells, in Appleton's Popular Monthly for December (D. Appleton & Co., New York) follows the "Principles of Taxation" with a readable account of "The Comparative Recent Tax Experiences of the Federal Government of the United States." In one of the illustrated articles Professor G. Frederick Wright presents "New Evidence of Glacial Man in Ohio"; Professor James Sully shows us childhood "On the Side of Law"; "The Anatomy of Speed Skating," by Dr. R. Tait McKenzie, gives the physical measurements of several skaters; Herbert Spencer traces the evolution of the "Teacher" from the priest; Professor W. R. Newbold contributes a psychological study of "Suggestibility, Automatism and the Phenomena of the Dean of Montreal writes on "Sir John Lubbock and the Religion of Savages"; under the title Professor Forthrop's "Harnessed Niagara," some interperate utterances of an English engineer are criticized by Ernest A. Lester; "Health Experiences of the French Army" is an account by Stoddard Deway of sanitary regulations; in "Prehistoric Engineering at Lake Copais," an illustrated account of the subject of the question "Has Immigration Increased the Population?" is asked by Sylvester G. Fisher; and the opposite answer to what most persons would expect is given. Other articles are "Among the Cannibal Islands," by Laenas G. Field; "Miracles in France," Canada, by Edward Farrer; "Insects' Eggs," illustrated, by M. V. Brandt; "Sketch of David Dole Owen," with portrait; "Why the Sea is Salt," by G. W. Little; "A Natural Paper Mill," by Virgil G. Eaton. Several notable improvements have been introduced in the monthly, but the most noteworthy is Appleton's Popular Science Monthly. Wider margins have been adopted, the departments have been rearranged and given a less formal style, and many new attractions are promised. In response to numerous demands, the publication of the magazine simultaneously in this country and in England has been begun.

Of several new stories of Lincoln told in the second installment of the new "Life of Lincoln," in McClure's Magazine for December (New York, McClure, Phillips & Co.), the most interesting is that when Lincoln removed with his family from Indiana to Illinois he made thrifty use of the opportunities for business which he met out, at a good profit, a stock of small wares which he had bought for the purpose. The whole installment is rich in picturesque details, and in the latter part of the month, when the holidays approach, long evenings are, if possible, to be made short, and intervening time hastened—as one sports a party. For the number dated December 3d W. J. Henderson has written a capital story of an adventure in the Arctic seas entitled "A Case of Arctic Adventure." The story is an old whaling vessel is nipped in the ice of the far north; Florence Hallowell Hoyt contributes the second part of her charming story, "A New Life," an installment of "For King and Country," a strong story of revolutionary times, by James Barnes, adds to the increasing interest of this serial. Ernest A. Lester writes an article of a candy factory, and John Hendrick Bangs tells of some further exploits of "Himmler" and the "Hump of the Telephone."

Beautiful in blue and gold and white cover comes the December Midland. This middle-western magazine (Des Moines, Iowa) has for its fourth volume and second year. Its articles are all interesting. Its fiction department is a surprise—no commonplace tales, but strong realistic stories, distinct with life. Two Christmas stories and several illustrated Christmas poems supply the sentiment of this number. Mary J. Lippincott's "The Christmas Eve" is a portrait; Mrs. Clement's paper on "Japanese Women," with ten pretty illustrations; Mr. Evans' pictures of "Illustrated Land and Life," Mr. Leslie's "Japanese Sword-Lore," Lyman Horace Weeks' "Athletic Sports of Ancient Days," Thomas James de la Hunt, "Love-Laurel," Elizabeth Harman; "Benet's Partner," James Knapp Reeve; "Meats," Calvin Dill Wilson; "Opposing View Points," Frederic M. Bird.

The December issue of astronomer (Goodell Observatory, Northfield, Minn.) is at hand with these leading articles, many of them illustrated: "Astronomy for the People," by J. A. Parkhurst; "The Newtonian Constant of Gravitation," C. V. Boys; "The Moon," W. J. See; "The Starry Heavens," J. A. Parkhurst; "The Graphic Construction of Eclipses and Occultations," William F. Rigge, S. L.; "Astronomy for the People," H. A. Howe; "Variable Star Clusters," E. C. Pickering; "Latitude by Eclipsation," Otto J. Klotz; "The Planets and Constellations for December"; "Comet Notes."

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly (New York) for December is its Christmas number. It comes in a new and unimitated cover, and is rich and profuse in color and represents a southern Christmas domestic scene. The number closes the fourth volume. The text matter is unusually choice, and runs from biography, sacred subjects, travel and serial to novelette and short story and poetry. The leading fiction is a transcendental story, "Master and Man," a powerful story.

Harper's Weekly for December 7th contains a double-page illustration by Wendell Phillips in a new and unimitated cover, and is rich and profuse in color and represents a southern Christmas domestic scene. The number closes the fourth volume. The text matter is unusually choice, and runs from biography, sacred subjects, travel and serial to novelette and short story and poetry. The leading fiction is a transcendental story, "Master and Man," a powerful story.

The Book Buyer for Christmas (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York) is by all odds the most richly illustrated and most varied and interesting of any Christmas magazine. It is a beautiful book, giving readers glimpses of a large number of the new books of the month. It is a beautiful book, giving readers glimpses of a large number of the new books of the month. Littell's Living Age for 1896 (Boston) is announced as reduced in price, and the famous scientific goes on now from $8 to $7 a year. Founded in 1843, it will soon enter its fifty-third year of a continuous and successful career seldom equaled. This standard weekly is the oldest, as it is the best, concentration of choice periodical literature printed in this country. Those who desire a thorough compendium of the admirable and noteworthy of the literary world will spare the trouble of wading through the sea of reviews and magazines published abroad; for they will find the essence of all compact and concentrated here. To those whose means are limited it must meet with especial favor. The new price makes the Living Age the cheapest, as well as the best literary weekly in existence.

The Overland Monthly for December (San Francisco) contains twenty-five of California's only first-class literary magazine. It is profusely and handsomely illustrated and among its articles are these: "As Talked in the Sacrament,"
