

SHOULD BE BETTER TAKEN CARE OF.

Important County Records at Loose Ends.

If They Should Happen to be Burned Great Loss and Trouble Might be the Result.

The Board of Supervisors met yesterday, all the members being present. It convened at a Swamp Land Board and allowed a number of swamp land warrants.

After it reconvened as a Board of Supervisors, W. W. Rhoads asked the board to pay a claim of S. T. Boyd on the road fund for work done a year ago, in order that the estate might be settled up. The claim amounted to $124 more than was at present in the road fund of the district, and that sum was borrowed from the general fund temporarily to pay it.

Henry Loss asked the board to put red earth on a piece of road in the Sluash District, near the Cosumnes River, where the adobe is very sticky. He said he was often called away from work that he was anxious to finish, in order to help some unfortunate who had stuck in the mud.

Supervisor Jenkins reminded him that that great deal of work had been done in his district during the last year.

"I know that," was the reply, "but we never got any work done until you came in." He offered to give one-third of the work if the county will do the rest.

"Yes," said Chairman Morrison, "I have here a bill where part of the work was donated, and it will cost the county more than a private contract would have done. I am opposed to doing any more road work until the funds have come in so as to do it in the spring and pay for the work when it is done."

The rest of the board agreed with the Chairman, and the road will have to wait.

The Committee on Contracts reported that the cases of the Specialty Metallic Company had been received and placed in the Court Reporter's office, and recommended that the bill be paid. The claim was allowed.

County Assessor Berkeley, who was present, said that in the old "museum," where the gallows and the voting booths have been received, and the Board of Supervisors and many others of the most valuable documents belonging to the county are kept on the shelves. It is running a great risk to have them in such a shape, as some day someone will go in there and strike a light, and irreparable damage may ensue, leaving incomplete records for the county that might result in expensive litigation.

The proposition was made that the gallows be sold at auction, as the county has no further use for it under the law requiring hangings to take place in the State Prison. The suggestion was also made that it might be presented to the Sutter's Fort Trustees, as a memento of early days.

A discussion arose as to the use of the ask telephone in the County Clerk's office. On motion of Dremann, it was ordered that no one beside the employees of the office be allowed to use the instrument.

The following saloon bonds were approved: W. White, Henry Kirm, Brighton; Emil Heinrich, 315 K street; Krogh & Lund, 525 K street; Thomas & Neal, 1024 Third street.

AMUSEMENTS.

At the Metropolitan Theater this afternoon at 2 o'clock and this evening at 8 o'clock Rice's original "1492" company will appear. The troupe consists of sixty-four people, who travel in their own train, and hence there need be no fear of a hasty and abridged performance this evening as the company does not leave the city for the East until day-break to-morrow morning. The Rice company carries a large amount of scenery, all of which will be used here, the scene cars arriving here this morning at 9:45 o'clock, giving ample time in which to set up all the scenery. The company has been organized eight years and has been playing this extravaganza seven years of that time, with a few changes in the way of betterments in the personnel of the troupe. Bessie Bonehill is the leading lady, but assumes a male character. She has great personal magnetism and is a comedienne of superior quality. Her assumption of a male role is one of the very best we have ever seen. She is a clever singer, a graceful woman and of exceeding versatility. Richard Harlow, who plays the part of Queen Isabella, has no superior in the assumption of female roles. His figure, under skillful make-up, enables him to take the part so well that even the snap not given away the spectator would not suspect that the sex characteristics are assumed. Ross Snow is the King Ferdinand, and an admirable low comedian. At one time he appears as a tramp, and his mimetic art as that character makes him a leader. If not the leading figure in the play, one of his eccentric acts is his fall and backward somersault from a fourteen-foot ladder while playing a trombone. He never misses a note on the way down and lands on his feet in time with the music. He regards the feat as belittling his comedy work in the play, but for all that it is what gives him most prominence in the eyes of his audiences. Among the features of the "1492" performance is the presentation of the Killian living pictures. These are far and away the best ever given; nothing of the kind we have had here before any where nearly approaches them. There is a perspective and scenic deception or illusion in their mounting and framing that is the cleverest cheat of the eyesight of which we have any knowledge. These pictures are very much appreciated, and gave us more satisfaction when we saw the extravaganza recently than anything else in this wonderful jumble of travesty, farce, burlesque and satire. A superior feature of the "1492" company is its orchestra, which is in such harmony and pulse-beat with the piece that not even the least appreciative of music can fail to notice it. The ballet and chorus of the company is an attractive one and includes some very good voices. The scenic effects are all handsome, and some of them very novel. The costumery is rich and shows some of the latest Parisian novelties in fall and winter millinery. Assurance is given that

"1492" will be played here with the same fullness of detail, stage fittings and effects as at the Baldwin Theater, where it had recently so long and successful a run. We saw it there, and are prepared to say that if this promise is kept, theater-goers who attend either of the two performances to-day will retire wholly and thoroughly satisfied and without a regret.

At the Clunie Opera-house this evening, this afternoon at 2 and to-morrow evening the last performances of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" by the Eldridge-Hallett Stock Company. The troupe has much improved the presentation of the play since the first nights, and it is given now with necessary spirit, promptness and feeling.

Wednesday evening next, at the Metropolitan Theater, May Irwin, an old-time favorite comedienne and character actress, who has been frequently in Sacramento theaters as a member of variety troupes. She, with her sister, or four or five years ago made up a specialty song and dialogue team that has had few equals. Miss Irwin is now before the public on her own account with a farce-comedy by John J. McNally, entitled "The Widow Jones." She has recently played, very successful engagements with it in San Francisco. Miss Irwin's work, whether in comedy, song or dance, is invested with her own engaging personality, which has won her so much of applause and approval from audiences on this coast. It is not her first effort, however, in drama. She will be remembered for her success in "A Farce-Comedy," "A Country Sport," and "A Straight Tip," in both of which she was a leader. We are assured that in "The Widow Jones" she has a capital part, which gives her unlimited opportunities to give her humorous personality full play, and to shine to the very best advantage. The story of "The Widow Jones" is concerned with the trials of a wealthy young woman, who, to avoid several suitors, betakes herself to a small Maine village, and later on asserts that she is the widow of a man named Jones, who she has been reliably informed, was drowned in the neighborhood a couple of years previously. One result of her new position is that an avalanche of Jones' unpaid bills are showered on her; another, even more trying, is the saddling upon her of Jones' seventeen-year-old daughter. Having paid the bills and accepted Jones' offspring as her own, the supposed dead man suddenly appears, and then begin a series of mirth-provoking complications, which continue through three acts. In Miss Irwin's support are John C. Rice, James C. Kruger, Joseph M. Sparks, George W. Barnum, Richard J. Jones, Roland Carter, Ada Lewis, Sally Cohen, Anne Sutherland, Kathleen Warren, Lillian M. Heckler, Agnes Milton, Mabel Power and Margery Teal.

Early in February the distinguished tragedian, Louis James, will appear at the Metropolitan Theater. When here the last time he was the partner of Frederick Ward, with whom he played jointly in tragedy for a number of years. Few actors have the fine equipment with which nature and experience have endowed Mr. James. Heroic in mold and presence, he possesses also a symmetrical and well-knit figure, which lends itself readily to representation of poetic as well as robust characters. His voice is powerful and musical, and is under such control that it adapts itself to every requirement of his art. He has an impressive temperament that always rings true to whatever emotions Mr. James may wish to assimilate. Mr. James' company is said to be one of the strongest now before the public. It includes Guy Lindsay of the Warde Company, James Comb, William Harris of Salvini's Company, Harry Langdon of William Kier's Company and Miss Kruger of the Lyceum Stock Company. Mr. James will be seen as Macbeth, Hamlet and Marmion in Sacramento. The latter is his new romantic tragedy by P. V. Sage.
