

THE POUNDMASTER FIGHT.

Cooksley Introduces Some Interesting Affidavits.

He Claims That Healey Endeavored to Get Him to Present Fraudulent Claims.

At the meeting of the Board of Trustees last night...

The affidavit of A. Grubbs stated that on May 15, 1894, Cooksley showed him two sacks containing dog scalps...

Cooksley stated at the time that he showed the scalps to Grubbs that he was going to hand them to Charles Heisen...

F. S. Smith's affidavit was to the same effect, and also stated that Cooksley stated at the time that he showed the scalps to affiant that his object was to have a witness to the fact that he did not put the scalps given him by Healey with the scalps that he was allowed to charge the city for...

Charles Heisen's affidavit stated that on May 15, 1894, Cooksley brought him a bag containing seventy-nine scalps with instructions to give them to Daniel Healey...

McKay then asked Cooksley to make whatever statement he wished to the board. Cooksley stated to the board that he was warned early in 1894 to look out for Healey...

Tozer said the Finance Committee had decided before hearing these affidavits that the city should cease paying for dog scalps...

TWENTY DAYS IN JAIL.

Four Boys Who Disturbed the Peace of Midnight.

There was quite a number of drunks on the Police Court calendar, but Justice Davis refused to make them come in out of the wet and allowed them to go.

John Donohue, Charles Kuntz, William Glenn and Ed Finn were charged with disturbing the peace. Special Officer Almas told how he heard a noise at Seventh and L streets...

Officer Douglas testified that he saw the boys out at all hours of the night. Two of them had been in the Police Court before, so the court sentenced them to the County Jail for twenty days each...

FINE PAIR OF HORNS.

They Will Soon Adorn the Rooms of the Sacramento Lodge of Elks.

State Printer Johnston has in his office at the Capitol a magnificent pair of mounted elk horns...

For beauty and symmetry they could hardly have been surpassed if they had been made by measurement...

bech made by measurement, and those who have seen many pairs of horns unite in saying that they are the finest they ever saw.

Some time ago Captain Samuel Rudell, Deputy Surveyor of the Port of San Francisco, saw them, they being owned by a person living at Port Townsend, the animal that once carried them proudly through the forest having been killed in British Columbia.

Each horn has six symmetrical prongs, the pairs being almost exact reproductions of each other in size, shape and curve. From root to tip they measure forty-seven inches, and their spread is forty-six inches in the clear.

What the County Fathers Did at Yesterday's Session.

Complaint Against a Fence in the Roadway in Alabama Township - County Supplies.

The Supervisors met in regular session yesterday, all the members being present and Chairman Morrison presiding.

A communication was received from B. Daniel and J. O. Frazier, residents of Alabama Township, stating that at a certain point the county road, known as the "Frazier road," has been reduced in width by the placing of a fence nearly in the center of the road...

The communication was placed on file. P. R. Beckley, in charge of the County Jail, presented a list of such prisoners as are entitled to credit for good behavior during the month of February, and the same was approved.

A protest was received from Louis Joeger and others against the passage of a pound ordinance for the town of Folsom. It was filed for further action.

A communication was received from the Central California Electric Company accepting the franchise granted the company at a previous meeting by George F. Royster, License Collector, reported that during February he had collected $1,721.

The report of the Superintendent of the County Hospital for February was read and placed on file.

Mrs. Emma McBride of Santa Ana wrote to the board asking what action had been taken in regard to running a road through her place north of Antelope, and what sum, if any, had been allowed her as damages.

In connection with this matter J. F. Gladney appeared before the board and stated that the Supervisors of Placer County had allowed Mrs. McBride $75 for the right of way over her land in that county.

The report of the viewers on the laying out of the Gladney road was set for hearing on the first Monday in April.

At the afternoon session the board took up the petition from residents of the Fair Oaks Colony for the creation of the Fair Oaks School District. The original petition was amended so as to overcome an objection made by residents of Roberts District, and as thus modified it was granted.

Eids were received from H. S. Crocker and Co. and W. F. Purnell for stationery, books, etc., for the use of county officers for one year. They were referred to the Contract and Finance Committee, with instructions to report this morning.

The board took a recess until 10 o'clock this morning.

AMUSEMENTS.

At the Metropolitan Theater this afternoon at 2 o'clock and this evening at 8 o'clock, Sousa's great concert band will appear. It consists of fifty accomplished instrumentalists, with Arthur Pryor, the famous trombone soloist, Miss Myrta French, soprano, and a Swiss cuckoo soloist. Sousa's own marches will be features of his concerts, and his library of melody will contain about all that the broadest musical taste could ask for.

John Philip Sousa is the great bandmaster of the United States—the creator of the standard marches of every band in the country. His work is full of vim, snap, nerve and dash, and his orchestra plays with that desirable quality—so often marked by its non-existence—which for lack of a better name one might call "ginger."

He was born to conduct, and to see him and hear his band one might fancy also that he was born with a baton in his hand. His pose is never rigid, but always easy, and the movement of his arms does not detract from the effect of the music, as in the case of those who make a parade of a windmill. His programmes include numbers representing the classical and the popular schools of composition, and as much attention is given to the playing of the lighter selection as is bestowed upon the works of Wagner and Liszt.

This is one of the secrets of the success of the organization. Miss Myrta French has faultless method and technique with that desirable quality—so often marked by a few sympathetic and flexible high soprano voice, united to a clear manner, and a graceful stage presence.

Miss French is a finished pupil of Striglia of Paris, and is in every way worthy of her illustrious teacher. We are told that Miss Currie Duke is the pride—the fille du regiment, so to speak—of band and director. Both by her beauty and skill, she wins all who listen to her playing. She was a favorite pupil of the great Joachim. She is the daughter of General Basil Duke, of war renown, and is a typical representative of the daughters of the Sunny South. As a solo violinist, she is one of the trio of charming artists consisting of Maud Powell, Leonora Von Stosch and herself.

If Manager Todd loses money on the Paderewski concert—which we trust he did not—it will all the more entitle him to the thanks of the music-loving public for having had the courage to bring the great artist to this city. When a Manager takes risks such as were involved in last night's engagement, to cater to public taste, and does not do as was so long the rule here, play only to dead certainties, or those assumed to be such, he deserves recognition in liberal patronage along the whole line of his endeavor. Assuredly we have never had a Manager before—at least not in many years—who exerted himself more or as much to give us the best attractions at great risk. The amusement-loving public should not forget it, but sustain such management on lines where there is some chance of liberal reward, that it may be encouraged to venture where hoped for reward is involved in the probability of loss.

and root of his success is the sympathy with which he enters into and interprets a theme. He not only himself feels the thought of the composer, but he makes the auditor experience it. We should say that Paderewski is a musical thinker. He knows what the potency of music means; it was probably given him to realize that without culture, and his genius enables him to make, by musical form, so to speak, incarnate, and to express the conception as the painter does his thought and clothe it in a manner to command recognition even from the duller musical taste. How he does this, what his touch, the method of his execution, the technical of his style, matters very little to him who listens to feel, and has his hope satisfied. It is enough for the general auditor to know that here is one who can communicate with their sympathies and awaken response in their feelings. That his touch is wonderfully delicate; that his tone is never indistinct; that he never strains, but that ease sits upon him as a graceful mantle; that he executes every description of passage with equal facility; that he has creative genius as evinced by his compositions; that he has the keenest perception of the capacity of his instrument; that this man has a rich flow of musical ideas—all these things are not considered by the auditor until the artist has ceased, and his listener begins to think of the man as a performer. For while he is playing he takes away the desire to judge and note characteristics and methods and particular points, because the hearer has been brought into touch and sympathy with the theme, and cares very little how it is done—indeed, takes very small note of method. There was evidence of this fact all through the concert last night. The musical critics, the highly cultured and those who know nothing of the technicalities of the music art were alike held in admiring silence and delightful communion with the spirit and thought of the music interpreted. Paderewski is a genius; his inspired art. Without inspiration or, if it is preferred, endowment and gift, no sort of culture will enable any human being to produce such effects. Paderewski's inspirations are rich, his art is symmetrical, his method is wonderfully true and his execution marvellously brilliant. He is young, in the prime of youth. Unless we mistake greatly, his greatest triumphs are yet to come, when age shall have ripened his thought and time have developed his perceptions to the fullest possibility of his genius.

At the Clinic Opera-house last evening Milton and Dollie Nobles and Walter Hodges, supported by the full strength of the Hallett Stock Company, gave an admirable presentation of Mr. Nobles' "Phoenix," a three-act melodrama, to a small but thoroughly appreciative audience. Three new sets of scenery were introduced, and the best and most realistic fire scene ever staged here was presented. The play abounds in lively climaxes and does not lag for a moment. The people in it are all alive to their work, and the audience is not kept long in suspense or annoyed by any halting. The tableaux are realistic and the costume is befitting the characters. The Carroll Graves of Mr. Nobles is exceedingly well done, but into the character of Leslie Blackburn Mr. Hodges might inject a little more cunning. He is a competent actor and made a good impression, and will become a favorite. Mr. Hallett's Moses Solomon is but another piece of his unvaryingly good work; it is not overdrawn or played to a degree of vulgarity that is common with many actors portraying a Jewish character. Mr. Brewer took the part of the detective well, and gave Max Steine's and John S. Becker's new song so satisfactorily that he was the recipient of an enthusiastic encore. The air is light and catchy, easy to memorize and the orchestral arrangement is very good, having been arranged by Professor George B. Franz, the leader. The ladies all acquitted themselves with credit, though none of the parts allotted to them are difficult. The same play to-night and for the balance of the week, including a Saturday matinee.

LOCAL CYCLE NOTES.

The Wheelmen Meet—Preparing for the Road Race—Training Device.

The Capital City Wheelmen met in their clubrooms last night, President giving presiding, and a good attendance giving spirit to the meeting.

A communication was received from the L. A. W. Racing Board, stating that no sanctions will be issued for Sunday track racing. It was resolved that the road race of the club on the 8th inst. shall start at 2:30 o'clock on that day, in the afternoon, from Twelfth and N streets. The route will be one of thirteen miles, and will be out N to Twenty-seventh, E to the lower Stockton road, to the upper Stockton road, to the turning point near the road church, thence home by way of Thirty-first and P streets to the starting point.

The race should take, if there is good weather and road, about forty minutes for the winners. The handicap announcements will be declared next Saturday evening at the clubrooms. The entries for the race are as follows: Chris Ecklon, George Readman, Charles Bauer, Lester Young, George Jackson, William A. Hubert, E. A. Pope, C. P. Wilson, Thomas Welch, H. W. Conkle, Walter Leach and Louis Payne.

A club run was ordered called for 1:30 o'clock on the 8th, the object being to get sufficient men to picket the route within the city limits that there may be no interruption or accident. C. E. Wright was elected Marshal of the road race.

The club voted to build a "home trainer" in the clubroom for use of members. This a machine upon which a bicycle is mounted, the tires resting on rollers running on ball-bearings. The frame of the bicycle being held fast by a device, the tires operate by impinging on the rollers, which offer about the same resistance as does the traction of a bicycle wheel on the ordinary good road. This machine enables racing members or any others to build up indoors, and harden for outdoor work without the risk of taking cold and without the interruptions of the road.

The club voted to appropriate $5 a month toward keeping the wheel path at Agricultural Park in good order.

THE LAW NOW BEFORE CONGRESS.

Adjutant-General Barrett's Suggestions to the Secretary of War.

The Attorney-General Gives an Opinion Adverse to the Organization of Independent Companies.

Adjutant-General Barrett yesterday received from Assistant Secretary of War, Joseph B. Doe, a letter saying that he had sent to him a copy of the bill now before Congress, as a substitute for all the bills relating to the National Guard, and requesting him to offer such criticisms and suggestions in relation to it as he deemed proper.

He has replied, stating that the bill meets with his approbation, but that he would also recommend that the Secretary of War be authorized to exchange modern arms for the old and obsolete equipments now in use, as it would be a great aid to the militia if he could do so.

He would also recommend that the militia be allowed to practice on the target ranges of the regular army. In this State there are 2,300 old Springfield rifles of the model of 1873 and many of them are worthless and should be exchanged for the model of 1884. He thought the Government should also furnish at least forty rounds of ammunition per annum for practice to each of the members of the National Guard of the different States, so that, by having uniform ammunition, they could make much improvement in their target practice.

He thought also that the allotment by the United States to the different States and Territories should be much increased. He had written to our delegation in Congress on the subject and had received answers from them all that they would be glad to assist him. He had been much interested in the legislation of Congress in relation to the National Guard and had written to every Adjutant-General in the United States, asking for concert of action and their States writing the necessity of their working to aid the guard. He had received favorable replies from all.

Several of the National Guard companies that got lost in the shuffle when the reorganization took place petitioned the Board of Location for permission to retain their arms and form independent companies. The matter was referred to the Attorney-General, and he has reported against the petition. He says there is no law that would permit it.

THE WEATHER.

Continuation of the Cold Wave, With a Sprinkle of Snow.

The Weather Bureau reports show the highest and lowest temperatures yesterday to have been 50 degrees and 34 degrees, with fresh to brisk and high southerly winds and cloudy weather prevailing, and a brief snow shower in the morning.

The barometrical readings at 5 a. m. and 5 p. m. were 29.17 and 29.56 inches, respectively.

The highest and lowest temperatures one year ago yesterday were 66 degrees and 51 degrees, and one year ago to-day 67 degrees and 47 degrees. The rainfall yesterday was .30 or an inch, making for this season 14.66 inches, as against 21.54 inches in an equal date last year.

The wind reached maximum velocities quite often of from 36 to 48 miles per hour, and an extreme velocity of 60 miles.

Yesterday was the first record of snow in March, although a trace has been recorded for April. March so far is not as cold as has been recorded. The lowest on record was 28 degrees, on March 19, 1874, and on the 30th, 1880, and 29 degrees on the 9th, 1892. Even in April there has been recorded temperature of 24 degrees, which was on April 6, 1875.
