

NO STATE VETERINARIAN.

The Board of Health Has No Power to Appoint One.

Attorney-General Fitzgerald Renders An Opinion in Response to an Inquiry.

Secretary Laine of the State Board of Health recently addressed a communication to Attorney-General Fitzgerald asking his opinion on certain matters relating to cattle quarantine, a State Veterinarian, etc., and in response thereto has received the following:

San Francisco, April 29, 1896. J. R. Laine, M. D., Secretary State Board of Health, Sacramento—Dear Sir: In reply to your favor of the 25th inst., and to your questions: (1) as to whether or not the State Board of Health "has authority to appoint a State Veterinarian by the quarantine law, approved March 19, 1889"; (2) whether or not that statute gives you "authority to quarantine any portion of our State against another portion of our State, or to quarantine our State so as to prevent the departure into other States of cattle affected with infectious and contagious diseases"; (3) whether or not this statute permits you to appoint inspectors and pay them; and (4) whether or not "the bill appropriating $50,000 to prevent the introduction of contagious and infectious diseases into the State of California is a fund from which you can draw to put in force the cattle quarantine you wish to declare."

First—I am of the opinion that you have no authority under the Act entitled "An Act to regulate quarantine, and the admission of horses, cattle, sheep and swine into the State of California from infected districts," approved March 19, 1889 (Stats. 1889, 375), to appoint a State Veterinarian. That Act authorizes only the following appointments, viz: "One inspector for each of the points of entry of railroad communication into this State." See Section 16.

Although reference is made in Section 5 to a State Veterinarian, still there is no such office created by the Act, and no authority is given in the Act or elsewhere to your board to appoint any such officer, and there is no provision for the payment of any such officer. Second—I am further of the opinion that there is no law in this State which authorizes a cattle quarantine of one portion of our State against another portion; nor is there any law which authorizes a quarantine of our State so as to prevent the departure into other States of cattle affected with infectious and contagious diseases. The Act of 1889 relates exclusively to a quarantine against the "admission of horses, cattle, sheep and swine into the State of California from infected districts."

Third—I am also of the opinion that the only inspectors which you are authorized by the Act of 1889 to appoint are those specified in Section 16 of that Act, viz: "One inspector for each of the points of entry of railroad communication into this State, who shall reside at such points as may be designated by the State Board of Health." The duties of such inspectors are, of course, the inspection of such cattle only as are referred to, viz: Those shipped from other States into this State, and not the inspection of cattle shipped from this State into other States.

Fourth—Finally, I am of the opinion that the appropriation made by an Act entitled "An Act to appropriate money to prevent the introduction of contagious diseases," approved March 23, 1893 (Stats. 1893, 189), must be applied exclusively for the prevention of the introduction of Asiatic cholera and other contagious and infectious human diseases into the State. Respectfully,
W. F. FITZGERALD,
Attorney-General.

BENJAMIN'S BOND.

Required to give One in $500 to Keep the Peace.

Mrs. C. Benjamin, who caused the arrest of her husband on Monday night on a charge of having threatened her life, appeared in the Police Court yesterday to tell her story. She said he threatened to kill her if she obtained a divorce from him, and recently, while riding in a wagon with Mr. and Mrs. Kinsler, he got out his knife and she believed he intended to assault her with it.

Mr. Kinsler testified that he saw nothing in Benjamin's actions on that occasion to warrant the belief that he intended to use the knife on his wife.

Benjamin denied the charge of having threatened his wife's life, and J. Rubenstein, who was present on one of the occasions referred to, said he heard no threats made.

It was apparent to the court, however, that something had occurred to cause Mrs. Benjamin to fear violence at her husband's hands, so Justice Davis required him to give a $500 bond to keep the peace or be imprisoned for three months.

A PIONEER GONE.

Death of Andrew Flohr, the Old-Time Gunsmith.

Most of the earlier residents of this city and vicinity were well acquainted with Andrew Flohr, the pioneer gunsmith of Sacramento, if not the State, who was engaged in that business here up to a few years ago, when old age and failing health compelled him to relinquish it to his nephew, Charles Flohr. The old gentleman died yesterday. He was in his seventy-third year, and a native of Germany. Mr. Flohr was an open-hearted, open-handed, genial and generous man, who never was known to refuse an appeal for aid unless he knew the applicant to be wholly unworthy. Had he been less generous he might long ago have become rich. The deceased left one son, Reinhard, a daughter, Mrs. Henry Senf, and a nephew, Charles Flohr. The former is an employe in the Southern Pacific shops.

LOCAL CASES.

Two of Them Decided by the Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court has affirmed the judgment of the Superior Court of this county in the case of W. S. Kendall against Joseph Earl. The suit was for an accounting, and the judgment was in the latter's favor. The decision establishes these points:

In applying the principle of ratification to the unauthorized acts of an agent, a distinction is made between those cases where third persons may be injured by the delay of the principal to disavow the unauthorized act, and those cases where only the principal and agent are affected by the transaction.

Where innocent third persons are, or may be, injured, reasonable promptness in repudiating the transaction after full knowledge of the facts, is more imperative; and the same rule applies where the principal, with like knowledge, receives a direct benefit from the unauthorized act of his agent.

So, too, the character of the transaction, whether it be of a mercantile character or of an isolated transaction not affected by the usages of trade, has been considered in determining what is a "reasonable time" within which the transaction must be disavowed.

Where an agent is authorized to do an act, and he transacts his authority, it is the duty of the principal to repudiate the act as soon as he is fully informed of what has been thus done in his name, else he will be bound by the act as having ratified it by implication.

WILLIAMS' ESTATE. In the matter of the estate of Llewellyn Williams. Claim for interest on legacy under will. Court below directed to modify decree so as to allow interest to appellant.

Section 1368 of the Civil Code provides that legacies are due and deliverable at the expiration of one year after the testator's decease; by section 1369 it is provided that they bear interest from the time they are due and payable, and by 1370 that these provisions are in all cases to be controlled by the testator's express intentions.

A pecuniary legacy is a debt due from the estate, not a claim against the testator, which must be proved and paid in due course of administration, but a claim against the estate imposed by the will. One year is allowed to the estate, during which time the executors ought to be able to collect and realize the assets and be in readiness to discharge the obligations imposed upon the estate by the will.

The provision that a legacy shall be paid out of the residue of an estate does not make the legacy residuary. A residuary legacy embraces only that which remains after all the bequests of the will are discharged.

Speaking of Pianos!
