THE COMMON PEOPLE.

There is a great deal of insufferable cant indulged in in this campaign about the "common people." And who pray are the "common people"? All American citizens stand upon one political level. Their rights, privileges and duties are the same. The protection afforded them, their property and liberties is the same. It makes no difference what their worldly goods or the volume of them, the law gives to all alike the same protection. This system of government knows no classes. As for the masses they are all the people of the United States, and who ever talks of classes and masses comparatively and as distinct does so either in ignorance of the American Government and American citizenship, or he is a demagogic teacher and an insincere American.

All this chatter about "the good of the common people," the "money of the common people," the "rights of the common people," says the Los Angeles "Times," is "arrant nonsense." So it is and a good deal more; it is insulting. So far from being sympathetically expressive, so far from being complimentary to the American citizen it is an insult to his manhood, an affront to his pride, a gross and unpardonable indignity put upon him.

In this country the laws are for all the people, they exact obedience from all, they secure all in their rights, they afford all the same access to the tribunals. If there is an distinction in these matters it is not because of the law, but of corrupt, weak and pliable men. The American system in short does not note or permit of distinctions save only between the law abiding and the lawless. As the "Times" well says, "this is not a class nation"; but the catching demagogues who are talking of their hearts bleeding for the "common people" are doing their best to set up classes and cultivate hatred, ill-will and despite as the fruits of envy and covetousness. Our contemporary well says:

AN OBJECT LESSON.
The death of Sheriff Douglass at the hands of a footpad whom he was seeking to arrest emphasizes again the necessity for a State Constabulary. Three Sheriffs in this State have recently fallen before the guns of highwaymen. They were victims of our want of proper organization for the protection of citizens and their property from the attacks of robbers.
These three Sheriffs were killed because they had to act independently, and pursue criminals alone in whose arrest all the State, even more than a single county, had special interest. Had we a small State Constabulary force operating with the peace officer force of the State, and empowered to direct it, we should soon put a stop to highway robbery and would render the escape of all orders of criminals so doubtful that the criminal class would be terrorized and crime largely suppressed.
The "Record-Union's" suggestion has been for years that we need a Chief

State Constable and under him five deputies. These five should be located at widely separated points in the State, while the Chief should be at the Capital. With his deputies he would be in close communication not by one line of wire, but by several routes, so that he could at no time be cut off from them.

He would have power to send his deputies with full authority into any section. County lines would not drum-scrape their efforts. Sheriffs, Constables, Marshals and police officers would all be required to co-operate with the State officers, and act upon their plans of campaign. Thus we would have a systematized force of some 1,500 peace officers scattered all over the State acting harmoniously under one head, and at all times with concert of purpose and plan, instead as now moving independently of each other and oftener than not at cross purposes.

Moreover, the State force would be advised of the movements of all criminals both in this State and in contiguous States. The State force would have constant communication with all State Prison Warden in the United States, Mexico and Canada, and with all Chiefs of Police and Marshals on the coast, as well as with all Sheriffs of California, Oregon, Washington and the Territories. It will be seen that with such an organization, with an efficient Chief, the escape of robbers would be exceedingly difficult, and their capture greatly less hazardous than now.

A State Constable with power to take with him any and all Sheriffs and Constables of counties in which he operates or finds it necessary to pass, using his force with discretion and having them act according to the plans of his Chief, to whom the fullest information would always come, would have advantages that Sheriffs acting alone and without wise concert with each other can never enjoy.

There should be no single standard in money estimation. The Republican party is not favoring a single standard. It wants the money of the Nation to recognize the standards of the commercial world, and in domestic matters it demands all lawful money shall have equal recognition among the people and before the law. We have a single standard country at our very doors. Mexico has the single silver standard. As a result, gold is so appreciated there that by its measurement the Mexican silver dollar is depreciated in its purchasing power. Thus the "Mexican Herald" of June 21st illustrates the matter, says the Stockton "Record," which has a copy of that foreign paper at hand. In the "Herald's" advertising columns a dentist announces his price for certain work to be $25, which in the United States cost $10 or $15 only. The Victor bicycle selling in this country at $100, is advertised by Agent Crump in the City of Mexico at $200, while the American $110 Fowler wheel is listed in Mexico by Agent McNeil at $225. The "Herald" itself charges $1 a delivery month subscription to Mexicans, or $10 a year to Mexicans by mail, but it mails the paper to Americans over the border for $6 a year "in gold." At the same time, while prices in Mexico double with the single standard, wages of labor are down almost to bedrock. Agricultural labor rates at from twenty-five to thirty-one cents a day, and skilled mechanics receive from fifty to seventy-five cents a day. No; a single standard is the last thing on earth this free land wants. Neither gold nor silver alone is its desire, but both as the money of the country.

Always and forever it has been the rule in highly civilized nations that where money has its best reward, wages have their highest schedule. Protection assures capital invested in domestic enterprises of industry and production its best reward, and correspondingly wages advance and labor finds its highest rate. It is reasonable that it should be so, and it is right because reasonable. The best understanding exists between capital and labor when both have their best rewards. There is the least friction when there is highest wage and fairest profit. Protection of home industries is therefore the conservator of peace and content all around. For these reasons the Republican party says to the men of America that the financial question is secondary to their interests compared with protection against foreign competition by low-priced labor and the product of pauper industry.

The Democratic and the Populist parties will not be allowed to dodge the tariff issue. It is the real, vital issue in this campaign, and neither sneers nor hysterical cries about fifty-cent dollars will down it. The closed factory, the idle worker, the unemployed army of American artisans, the stagnation of trade, the out-of-commission merchant marine—these are eloquently emphatic in affirmation of the fact that the question of protection is one that most nearly concerns the American people to-day.

There is another and especial reason why the drainage outfall sewer ought to be voted by the people of Sacramento August 11th, namely, we are to have a body of legislators with us the coming winter for about three months, and the accompanying party of strangers that attaches to a legislative session. We do not want these people to be given an object lesson of our incompetency to rid the city of winter waters. The effect of such exhibitions is always bad.

There is only one sudden death among women to elude among men. No bird of prey has the gift of song.

SLEPT THROUGH A WRECK.

The Passenger Woke Up to Curse His Wife About the Eggs.

"I cannot vouch for the truthfulness of this story," said Jeff Caylor, "but I will tell it, and you can judge for yourselves. The man, whose name I do not now recall, boarded a sleeping car standing near the Union depot in St. Louis. After placing his ticket where it could be found by the conductor he retired, and in a very few minutes he was fast asleep. The bumping and thumping of the cars about the depot did not disturb him in the least, and by the time the train was well under way he was far into the land of nod. About 2 o'clock in the morning a drove of horses got on the track. The engineer did not see them in time to stop, and he concluded that the next thing to do under the circumstances was to tear her wide open. He did so, and the train was wrecked. The car in which the hero of the story was sleeping was thrown from the track and rolled down a twenty-foot embankment. Those of you who have ever been mixed up in a wreck know full well what follows. The cries for help, the shrieks of the dying and wounded, and over all the horrible sizzling of the steam escaping from the engine. Those who escaped uninjured lost no time in beginning the work of rescuing those imprisoned in the wreckage. After an hour's time they reached the man from St. Louis. Under a pile of bedding, and surrounded by the dead and dying, they found him. He appeared to be unconscious and they tenderly raised him and bore him from the scene. Just as they were placing him on a cot he aroused himself and gently breathed the name 'Mary.'
"Poor fellow," said someone, 'he is thinking about his wife.'
"His next remark knocked this in the head, however.
"Mary," he yelled, 'what the devil do you mean? When I ask you for fried eggs I do not expect to get them boiled.'
"With this remark he jumped to his feet and looked wildly around him.
"Where—what—what's wrong?" he asked.
"The situation was explained to him, and as soon as he could get his bearings he went to work with the others. You may believe me or not, but I'll be sworn if he didn't sleep through it all."

AN ENVIABLE RECORD.

A Placer County Estimate of Congressman Johnson.

(From the Placer Argus.)
We published last week a portion of the Congressional Record, showing as plainly as possible, how earnestly Hon. Grove L. Johnson worked to secure the passage of the mineral land bill. Mr. Johnson rose to a question of personal privilege and administered to the black-mailing "Examiner" such a castigation as it richly deserved. We have watched Mr. Johnson closely, and certainly all that he could do was freely done in behalf of the mining interests of the State. The Republican Congressional Convention is called for August 12th at Sacramento, and we have no reason to seriously doubt that Mr. Johnson will be re-nominated. So far as our own county is concerned, as we understand it, the delegates to the late State Convention were accredited to the coming Congressional Convention. As they cheerfully aided in sending Mr. Johnson to St. Louis, we feel certain that they will favor his re-nomination for Congress. Look the State over, and with the exception of the personal enmity of the "Bee," we know of no paper but the "Examiner" that has attacked Mr. Johnson's record. Certainly, the Republicans of this district would not wish to go to the "Examiner" to secure a credential for their Congressman's character. A subsidized sheet, one that received over $21,000 on an implied contract to refrain from the abuse of the railroad company, is not the paper to caricature the best and most active Congressman that we have ever had in the Second District. We are for Johnson because we feel that he has made an excellent record. He is not only a worker, but he has that ability that always commands respect. Mr. Johnson never talked to empty seats in Washington. He is eloquent, resourceful, and has made an enviable record. By all means let us keep him in Congress.

"Indeed I've not," the child replied; "I have them in my head."

Nervous Debility

Do you suffer from any weakness of the nervous system? If so, you can be cured by Dr. Sanden's Electric Belt. Medicine will not, cannot, restore the power to the nerves, for nerve life is Electricity, and to get back the nerve force you must soak your body with Electricity every day, on the same principle that you would aim to enrich your blood by hearty eating of food. The nerves must be fed. They use up a great deal of force every day, and when the body is not strong enough to supply it, you must have aid from Nature—Electricity.

Dr. Sanden's Electric Belt
Will cure all nervous weakness or lack of power. It has cured thousands of such complaints.
"I have not been bothered with my old trouble for the past month, and thank you heartily for your attention to me," says Leslie Crawford, Largo, Cal.
"In thirty days the Belt has cured me of Vertigo," says St. Domingo, Fuzay, Cal.

"RUSSIAN RAMBLES," by I. Haggood, contains the following statement: "Very few Russians wear anything but linen underwear, and foreigners who have been accustomed to wear flannels are forced to abandon them in Russia."
The climate of Russia is known for its severity. Experience has taught the Russians that flannels weaken the skin and put those who wear them in constant danger of colds and pneumonia; hence, they clothe themselves in the safer and more trustworthy linen underwear.
