McKINLEY'S LETTER.

Events and a broad issue made William McKinley the logical candidate of the Republican party and he has demonstrated by his letter of acceptance that the choice was well made. He proves not at all evasive, but confronts the silver issue with the calm manliness of a statesman. There is no special pleading in the letter on that head. It is the letter of a conscientious and safe man convinced out of his Americanism as well as out of sound reason. The silver men will find no cause for offense in the letter. They may say that he sedulously avoids their iterated question, "who and what fixed the standard of value for gold?" But he really answers that by the statement that it is the world's demand. Desire to possess is what gives money value to anything. When the desire of the buyer is stronger than that of the holder a price is fixed. He handles the protection doctrine precisely as was expected of him. It is certainly a letter that will command the respect of those even whom it may not convince. Really Mr. McKinley stands forward in this letter as the representative of patriotic and business conservatism. He proposes that the nation deal with that of which it knows and that it shall avoid theoretical and experimental things at a time when failure would find the country ill able to bear the results. If Mr. Bryan, after this letter, still evades and ignores protection as an issue he will do a weak thing. The challenge is squarely thrown out, the glove of the Republican chief is in the arena and he must take it up just as McKinley has taken up and flung back the silver glove. Evasion will now become cowardice.

Mr. Bryan, in response to inquiry made of him on the floor of the House, as to protection to beet sugar industry, declared that he was opposed to it. He said: The difference between a protective tariff and a bounty is simply a difference in form. In the one case it is open and visible; in the other it is secret and hidden. It is the difference between the man who meets you upon the highway, knocks you down and takes what you have, and the man who steals into your house in the night while you are asleep and robs you of your treasures; and if I had to make choice between the two I should consider the highway robber the more honorable because he does what he does openly and before the world.

Of course the beet sugar growers of California, and those in this section of the State who are indulging the hope held out by the Sacramento Chamber of Commerce, that beets may be grown here to supply a local factory, will vote for Mr. Bryan. Of course they will endorse his views relative to protecting an industry that ought to supply us with the $126,571,889 worth of sugar for which we paid cash to foreigners in the year 1894, for instance.

The proprietries of the pulpit in politics is receiving a good deal of debate just now, owing to the utterances of a Bishop of the Methodist Church concerning present political issues. As a rule the less said of partisan thought from the pulpit the better. But the morality of the nation, the honesty of administration, and the honorable conduct of public affairs as related to the morals of the whole people and the safeguards of morality for communities, it seems to us may be discussed in the pulpit at any time. The trouble is that the clergyman lay more emphasis upon such utterances in seasons of campaigning in politics than at other times. Partisan policies related strictly to party methods of attaining ends desired by all the common good, should at no time have expression in the pulpit. The higher morality of the Government is at any time a proper pulpit theme, but partisan politics and partisan appeal never. The right of free speech runs of course to the clergyman as to any other man; but it is not a matter of right that is under consideration, but one of propriety. If the pulpit must and will carry political thought into that forum, it should find expression in words that neither inflame nor vituperate. From the sacred desk we look for the gospel of peace, toleration, moderation and wisdom. To denounce anarchism as opposed to the gospel of the Christian faith is not political preaching; however; it is religious teaching drawn from Him who commended men to be orderly and obedient to the powers that be; who recognized the wisdom of government and the necessity for submission of individuality to the common agreement upon system for orderly procedure. To discuss public and political questions from the pulpit therefore, while remaining within the right of free speech, and yet not infringing the proprieties of the desk, calls for the exercise of the gravest wisdom, and the most careful and considerate expression of the devout, thoughtful and God-fearing man who is impressed to the fullest with the sacredness of his office and the responsibility of his calling, and who puts party behind all these.

A New York Democratic paper has sounded the note of alarm. It has discovered that the tariff is an issue in the campaign, and it warns Mr. Bryan and his managers that the party cannot afford to abandon its principles and traditions for the single issue of free coinage when there is a threat to restore the McKinley law with protection, bounties and all that attach thereto so obnoxious to Democratic tastes and faith. It calls Mr. Bryan's attention to that plank in the platform upon which he stands, which begins: "We denounce as disturbing to business the Republican threat to restore the McKinley law, which has been twice condemned by the people in national elections, and which, enacted under the false plea of protection to home industry, proved to be a prolific breeder of trusts and monopolies," etc., etc. This, declares our Democratic contemporary, marks the true dividing line between Republicanism and Democracy; it was such doctrine as this, it points out, that caused the popular uprising and swept the McKinley-Reed Congress out of power in 1890, and that has twice elected Cleveland to the Presidency. There is much meat in that for Mr. Bryan's digestion.

American sympathy should go out to the British in the Zanzibar incident. It was an issue between the cruelest, most brutal slavery system known to man, and civilization and the right of human beings to be free. Had the British done less than fire on the palace and raise the legitimate successor to the Sultanate, they would have deserved the anathema of civilization.

The Washington "Star" is witty, but cruel, when it suggests that if politics is a game of chance, then Tom Watson is playing solitaire.

MOTHERS

recovering from the illness attending child, or who suffer from the effects of disorders, derangements and displacements of the womanly organs, will find relief and a permanent cure in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Taken during pregnancy, the "Prescription" makes childbirth easy by preparing the system for parturition, thus assisting Nature and shortening "labor." The painful ordeal of childbirth is robbed of its terrors, and the dangers thereof greatly lessened, to both mother and child. The period of confinement is also greatly shortened, the mother strengthened and built up, and an abundant secretion of nourishment for the child promoted. If the married woman be delicate, run-down, or overworked, it writes her husband as well as herself. This is the proper time to build up her strength and cure those weaknesses, or ailments, which are the cause of her trouble. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription dispels aches and pains, melancholy and nervousness, brings refreshing sleep and makes a new woman of her. Mrs. Anna L. Love of Corvallis, Jefferson Co., N. Y. writes: "I had been suffering from ulceration and falling of the womb for several years, or since the birth of my youngest child. I consulted the physicians around here and they gave me up and said there was no help for me. At last, almost discouraged, I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and took five bottles. I was cured and I have not had any return of the trouble since. I can now do all the factious work I wish, for I do not think I should have been alive now had not taken your medicine."

Why sing of Italy's sun-kissed vine, Or the trepe from the terraces of the Rhine? Why sigh for the Burgundy's vintage gleam, Or the waters of some crystal stream, When here in our midst, day after day, Liquid sunshine is stored away, With its on any foam and its amber hue, A nectar that's modestly called New Brew?
