The City Board of Education held its regular monthly meeting last night.

Calvert $5, Mr. Johnson of the San Joaquin Company stated that the company had furnished brick to the amount of $294, which contractor Wendt who built the addition at Thirteenth and G street refused to pay on the ground that he had already paid sub-contractor Henley in full for his work.

He wished to know how his company was to get its pay.

Mr. Wendt said the company should have notified him at the proper time that the sub-contractor was not paying his bills so that he would not have paid him in full. He had supposed the sub-contractor was honorable and had not watched to see that his bills were settled.

Director Driver said that there could be no lien on the building and the matter would be between Mr. Wendt and the company, and that the board had nothing to do with it.

The matter was referred to the Corporation Council.

Director Whitbeck, for the Committee on Buildings and Repairs, reported the filling in and other work ordered completed.

A motion by Director Sherrburn that when the board adjourn it do so to meet next Wednesday night, was carried.

Superintendent Erliewine stated that Monday, October 5th, would be observed as a half holiday, the schools opening in the morning and closing at noon.

REMEDY FOR SHAKES.

Three Men Relieved Promptly by Doses of Gunpowder.

Day before yesterday three men drove over toward the Rancho del Paso in a large-bodied spring wagon and stole fourteen bundles of shakes from W. H. Basler, whose place is near the American River bridge, and where he was preparing to erect a barn.

Basler didn't have any quinine on hand to go with the shakes, but a neighbor, from whom the men had also stolen a harness, followed with a shotgun and took a crack at them. The result was magical, for the men threw out the shakes and dumped the harness and a bag containing a coat and a lady's drab jacket, which no doubt had been stolen.

The trio were young men and well dressed, and their wagon was of light color and lettered on the sides. When last seen they were driving into the city.

FOR BURGLARY.

Ed Kinney, Alias Frank McCarty, Now on Trial.

In Judge Hinkson's court yesterday the trial of Ed. Kinney, otherwise known as Frank McCarty, charged with burglary, was commenced. District Attorney Ryan appeared for the people and S. Luke Howe for the prisoner.

The crime for which Kinney being tried was the robbery of Franklin Brown's residence at Seventeenth and N streets, a few months ago, in company with one E. B. Thompson, alias Charles Brannan. The latter was met by Brown's brother-in-law, Percy McCoy, as he was leaving the house, and refusing to surrender, was shot in the face. Kinney was afterward arrested with clothing in his possession that was stolen from the house. In fact, he was wearing some of them.

Thompson (or Brannan) cannot be tried for some time yet, as his jaw that was broken by the bullet from McCoy's pistol has not yet healed sufficiently to permit him to appear in court.

Kinney's defense is insanity, and his counsel will endeavor to show that he was once an inmate of a New York asylum. In the courtroom Kinney does not consult with his attorney, and does not manifest any interest in the proceedings. He wears an expression of supreme simplicity, and gazes most of the time at the ceiling. The case will be concluded to-day.

TWO HARD NUTS.

Bandits Brady and Callendine Put Up a Prison Break.

Jack Brady, the Yolo train robber, has been up to some of his tricks again. The Folsom Prison officials recently discovered hidden in his cell a key that he had made, together with some files and a slingshot, and now Brady is doing penance in a dungeon with a bread-and-water diet.

The key, it was found, would unlock his own cell and those of the entire row, and no doubt his plan was to some night open the doors of several cells, silence the guard with the slingshot, and escape into the yard, the convicts taking the chances of being shot by the guards on the outpost of their flight.

L. L. Callendine, the Sacramento desperado, was Brady's cellmate, and when the key and other things were found the men were separated. The supposition is that both of them were concerned in the job. These two fellows will bear any amount of watching.

The Gold Democrats, whose petition already shows over 12,000 names, and the National Prohibition party will file their petitions on or before Saturday, that being the last day. The Socialists will have to file petitions for the seven other Electors.

DID NOT WANT SILVER.

A State Employee Who Objected to Being Paid in It.

One of the watchmen at the State Capitol, who is an ardent advocate of free and unlimited coinage of silver, was fooled to the top of his bent yesterday.

When he presented his warrant for his month's salary at the State Treasurer's office 100 silver certificates and dollars were stacked up in front of his astonished eyes by the Deputy Treasurer, and he was told that was the amount called for in the warrant.

He remonstrated and finally refused to take them, and when the joke had been carried far enough he was paid in gold, as usual. He had gained, however, an appreciation of what an unpleasant matter it would be to carry that amount of silver in his pockets instead of gold.

The Mainstay Cinch.

Eds. "Record-Union": I note in your columns of the 28th instant that the Directors of the State Agricultural Society are to be asked to take action to bring about the reinstatement of the horse Mainstay and his owner, Lindsay, after they were ruled off the track for life for the apparent deliberate job in the race of September 19th.

As a spectator and lover of honest racing, and one who looks for protection from jobs while racing on the State track, I trust you will make an effort to induce some member of the State Board to make proper inquiry before permitting horse or jockey while running in the colors of Lindsay, to learn if the job was not run in the interest of the books.

The statement that on account of the horse wearing blinkers permitted the mud to blind him sounds well in the ears of those casting tickets on Sabilla and Ricardo, but it's a very lame excuse, for there was not a horse in the race that can outfoot Mainstay any part of the journey, when the bookmakers lay against him and they have not a "cinch."

Why did the Judges permit the bets to stand and then rule the outfit off? If the public cannot obtain protection from such rank and palpable jobs, the sooner the betting public learn it the better off they will be, for then we can guess the "job," and not the form of the horse.

The strongest argument that can be offered that the horse was "stiff" lies in the betting ring transactions. Officers and Directors of the society are familiar enough with betting customs to know that a "nigger in the fence" was on when the odds laid by the books increased instead of shortened. Mainstay opened in the betting ring at 8 to 5, and money was taken as fast as offered and never a bet refused, when a lull on Mainstay came with 2 to 1, and more money, and then 4 to 1, where it remained.

It is undeniable that did the same amount go in the ring on Mainstay, where a job was not fixed, the quotations would have been, with the generosity and liberality of the bookmakers considered, about 2 to 5, or 4 to 5, at the best.

In the race above referred to it would have shown a spirit of justice on the part of the Judges to have called for the bookmakers' shares if they were not convinced from observation. This practice prevails at Ingleside. The jockey obeyed instructions to the letter, for he pulled his "mounts" head the entire distance, and even at the wire the horse's head was so far to one side that he struck the distance post and went down. If the mud was not fixed, the mud "blinded" him. Possibly the blinker story is only a fake. At any rate, it's the first time the mud got into his eyes, as he is recognized by bookies and the betting public as a mud-horse that is always good. The blinkers are a good excuse for the cinch.

Lindsay years ago when jobs have been permitted to go, it has been open talk that the society would lose the percentage if bets were declared off, but since the Mainstay job it seems reasonable to have expected a run for our money, or else "bets off."

Lindsay is now the owner of Mainstay, and so long as the horse remains in his stable he should not be permitted to again job the people with Mainstay or any of his string, and the Directors of the State Agricultural Society will retain the confidence of the betting public by not withdrawing their ruling now in effect. HONESTY.

The "Dapper Young Man."

Eds. "Record-Union": Tuesday there appeared an item in one of the papers, stating that a 'dapper young man' had found that most of the street railway men in this city would vote for Bryan. The facts are these: There are about sixty employes; the 'dapper young man' is one of them, and he has nearly forty of these men enrolling for McKinley, and he is still expecting to get more. SOUND MONEY.

MALICIOUS MISREPRESENTATION.

Ex-Congressman Caminetti Shown Up at Home.

(From the Jackson Republican.) A. Caminetti, ex-Congressman from this district, and present candidate on the Demo-Populist ticket for Assemblyman, in his speech before the late Democratic Convention accepting the nomination for disinterested motives to help the Democratic party, took occasion to travel out of his latitude and launched forth into a tirade against corporations in general and the railroad company in particular, and attempted to roast Grove L. Johnson for his attitude in Congress in relation to the refunding debt of the Central Pacific to the United States.

The late Congressman, in the bitterness of his spirit, made the most audacious attempt to deceive a representative body of men in convention assembled that it has ever been our lot to witness. He referred to the fact that Congressman Johnson had circulated through his Congressional District a lengthy statement explaining his course on the refunding proposition, which purported to be a complete vindication of his course on that measure.

Mr. Caminetti did not attempt to refute the assertions made by Mr. Johnson. He did not claim that the money due the Government, and which was secured by a second mortgage, would be collected by foreclosure of that mortgage. But he said that in a few words he would show the utter falsity of Johnson's reasoning.

He then went on to say that the stockholders of the railroad company had grown immensely rich from the proceeds of the railroad. Most of them were millionaires. Out of the colossal fortunes they had accumulated they were well able to liquidate the debt due the Government.

In the presence of these facts what became of Mr. Johnson's defense, and why was not the company compelled to pay? The impression which the Democratic nominee for the Assembly tried to create and which he succeeded in creating, was that the Government could collect the millions due it by legal process, if not out of the corporate property, at least by falling back upon the private fortunes of the stockholders.

The retired Congressman cunningly refrained from stating that the private resources of the stockholders were accountable for the debts, but the effect of his remarks was just the same as if he had said so in the plainest and most emphatic language possible. In that Democratic Convention there were men present from every portion of the country, and no doubt the repudiated Representative, sore over his defeat, and anxious to injure the man who defeated him so overwhelmingly, calculated that the delegates would depart for their respective homes and there tell their neighbors and friends that Congressman Johnson had betrayed his constituents on this refunding measure, because every dollar might be collected from the millionaire stockholders, for A. Caminetti had said so and he is a lawyer by profession and a retired Congressman.

Now the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Stanford case settles the point that the private means of the stockholders of the railroad company cannot be held responsible for the debts of the corporation. We cannot believe otherwise than that Mr. Caminetti knew, when he made this astounding speech in the convention, the scope of that decision as well as any lawyer in the land and consequently was fully aware of the impotency of the argument he was trying to palm off upon his Democratic hearers. Let Republicans throughout the Second District, in view of such disreputable methods, be nerved to redoubled exertions in behalf of the election of Grove L. Johnson, than whom an abler or more faithful Representative was never sent to the halls of Congress from the Pacific Coast. And let the people of Amador County put forth their utmost efforts to prevent the election of one who resorts to the methods herein described to the Legislature of this State; notwithstanding that Democrats and Populists have joined forces to bring about that humiliating result.
