

JOHNSON AT MARYSVILLE.

Rousing Reception Tendered to Our Congressman.

He Handles Leading Campaign Issues With a Statesman's Thorough Comprehensiveness.

From the Marysville Appeal, Oct. 23d.) The reception tendered Hon. Grove L. Johnson at the theater last night was one of the most enthusiastic that a public servant has ever received at the hands of his constituents in this section of the country.

At 8 o'clock there was not standing room in the theater, and it was with difficulty that the band was able to secure seats in the orchestra. The stage was not decorated for the occasion. A large American flag hung over the table in the center, hung on to which was a large portrait of William McKinley, the Republican standard bearer.

Continuing, Mr. Greeley stated that the duty assigned to him of introducing the speaker of the evening was in a certain sense not necessary, as his name, as well as his famous record, was well known. They had known him in many ways both as a distinguished lawyer and a citizen.

When the chairman called for a vote, which he was greeted by a shout of approval, Johnson commenced his address. He thanked them for their cordial reception; he thanked the Chairman for the kind words he had spoken, and said he was very much gratified at the large attendance.

For this work that I have done I am entitled to your votes. I am not begging for them; I am entitled to them. I did more for you in Congress than any other Congressman that was ever sent to this district. I ask that you give me your votes so that I shall return to the next Congress as your representative to accomplish more on your behalf.

been held since 1864. He could remember the election of 1856, when the Republican party came to life. At that time they had on their banner free speech, free soil, free press and free men.

From 1864 to 1892 elections had taken place at regular intervals, and the issue has been discussed in a business way. In 1892 there arose a class of men who went around the country and preached a war of class against class.

The election that is so near at hand is the most important one. They were really only called on to vote for a President, Congressman and Assemblyman. Great as were the responsibilities of a President, he could do nothing by himself.

The Republican candidate for Congress he had known well for many years, and as he had faith in him he would not have any other man to stand his position, as he was friendly to silver. Had voted for silver in the last Congress, and shall vote for it in the next Congress, but he believed, however, in protection, and that protection and silver must go hand in hand.

Without protection we cannot have silver. "I shall vote in favor of every measure of protection that will be recognized to Congress by that man who enlisted in the war at the age of 16 as a private and came out of the war a Major loved by his soldiers, admired by his officers, that Christian statesman whose public life is without a blemish, that good son, that kind husband and indulgent father, that honest man, that true type of American citizenship, William McKinley of Ohio."

I feel that I have made a record in the last Congress that entitles me to be proud of. I made promises to you two years ago and I kept every promise that I made. I succeeded in obtaining an appropriation of $250,000 to be expended in protecting the rivers from damming, and I have already commenced on one of the dams to protect your city. I voted for this appropriation and worked for it, because it would be the means of protecting the farmer, and would at the same time enable me to carry on my business. I felt that I was getting this appropriation for the benefit of both. I wanted the work done under the supervision of the Government engineers, and was glad that both sides had endorsed my bill. The work has begun, so ring out your bells, lift up your souls, the great menace to your valley will soon be removed, for the day of salvation is near at hand.

For this work that I have done I am entitled to your votes. I am not begging for them; I am entitled to them. I did more for you in Congress than any other Congressman that was ever sent to this district. I ask that you give me your votes so that I shall return to the next Congress as your representative to accomplish more on your behalf.

FORCED TO THE WALL.

Mrs Oppenheim Obligated to Mortgage Her Home.

Superior Judge Prewett of Placer, temporarily occupying the bench in Judge Catlin's court, made an order yesterday granting the motion of Louise A. Oppenheim to withdraw the supplemental complaint against Philip Oppenheim. The receiver of the estate was then authorized to mortgage property for not exceeding $1,500 and to insure the same; also to pay Mrs. Oppenheim $50 per month.

The property to be mortgaged is the home at Eighth and I streets, which is the only portion of her husband's $100,000 estate that is in sight. Owing to the flight of her son Philip, who held in trust the bulk of the estate—which was in Government bonds—Mrs. Oppenheim was yesterday obliged to have her attorney, Albert M. Johnson, apply to the court for permission to place a $1,500 mortgage on her house in order to get a little money on which to live pending the result of her efforts to have her son turn over the property held by him to her.

The fear is that Philip Oppenheim has dissipated the fortune, and his flight to Canada, following close upon an order of the court, only served to strengthen the suspicion. He seemed to be safe from interference in his Canadian abode, and if any of the estate has been discovered since his departure the fact is known only to the parties interested.

Will be Elected. His contrary able and forcible address with the following peroration: "You have at all times seen the Storm King in his wrath. You have heard the roaring of the thunder, of the gods' artillery reverberating through the heavens. You have seen the terrible lightning of his swift sword flash in electric current across the horizon. You have heard the roaring of the river and the waters of the great deep as they seemed ready to deluge the earth against your hearts have sunk within you with fear as you have listened to the storm as it gathered and broke and seemed to presage a wreck of matter and a crash of earth; and then, when you have become afraid you have seen shining through all the dark that pressed like a general plan upon the earth the gorgeous tinted rainbow, the promise of God Almighty unto man that the deluge no more should come; that the earth should be redeemed and should be preserved to man and his descendants forever."

And so to-day you can see shining through all the darkness of partisan rancor, through the murky vapors of slander and detraction, through all the noise and tumult of political passion and prejudice, through all the clamor of calumny and financial distress—you can see shining through all the darkness that seems to press upon us now the gorgeous banner of the Republican party, bearing for its motto: Protection and Prosperity—held aloft by our gallant Captain, McKinley, and beneath that banner and behind that Captain we will march to a sure victory, knowing that by the blessings of Him who doeth all things well this country shall be redeemed from Democratic misrule, this country shall be made prosperous, this people shall be made happy by the beneficent influences of protection to American industry and American men."

THE SUFFERERS.

Those Who Were Damaged by the Grand Island Fire.

Yesterday's "Record-Union" contained an account of a destructive fire that swept several hundred acres of Grand Island on Wednesday and Thursday. The chief losses sustained were by tenants on Ferris' and Williams' lands; and were: S. E. Neidrach, $500; E. McLaren, $4,000; Sam Brierly, $1,000; Gilchrist, $7,000, and Charles Jones, $2,000.

The fire was started by Neidrach burning off some stubble. The stubble was removed and a great deal of valuable property with it.
